that signified the first major protest by high school students in the history of the United States and sparked the emergence of the Chicano Civil Rights Movement, known simply as the Chicano Movement.

The day's activities at Lincoln High, (3501 N. Broadway, L.A.) from 1:00 pm to 5:00 pm, will include many of the student organizers who have since become prominent in their fields and are still deeply committed to being catalysts of change, a scholarship fundraising event and a screening of the HBO film “Walkout” directed by Edward James Olmos, which depicts the event.

In March 1968 more than 1000 students walked out of Abraham Lincoln High School to peacefully protest educational inequality and racism in the public school system. They were joined by students from four other Los Angeles high schools sibling succeeded in receiving a college education and established in professional careers.

There also was never a question as to the choice of a career for young David Dominguez, due primarily to his father Richard Dominguez and two uncles, now retired, were police officers with the Los Angeles Police Department. "The family's direction in public safety left no doubt that law enforcement was the profession of choice. My two brothers are in the public sector," Captain Richard Dominguez, Jr. in the Los Angeles County Fire Department and Fireman Phillip Dominguez in the Los Angeles Fire Department,” Dominguez said.

Dominguez graduated from Saint Paul High School, Santa Fe Springs, and Rio Hondo Community College in 1978 with an AA in General Education and in 1979 joined the San Bernardino Sheriff's Department.

S. B.COUNTY 5TH DISTRICT SUPERVISOR JOSIE GONZALES ANNOUNCES RUN FOR SECOND TERM

Gonzales filed her Declaration of Candidacy documents to initiate her campaign for office.

"Coming down the final stretch of Mexico and California. I look forward to building on our terrific partnership as California and Mexico work together to tackle the many challenges we face, which include ensuring the safety of our people, protecting the environment and conserving our precious natural resources.

The MOU is an agreement between Mexico and California to work cooperatively on ways to enhance policies for environmental protection and sustainable natural resources. The agreement calls for a Joint Action Plan to be developed in the future and implemented by the signing agencies.

In August, Schwarzenegger will chair the 26th Annual Border Governor’s Conference be held in Los Angeles. The conference will be attended by governors from Arizona, Baja California, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon, New Mexico, Sonora, Tamaulipas and Texas. They will address the many issues impacting states on both sides of the U.S./Mexico border, including agriculture, security, economic development, education, energy, environment, health and tourism.

Mexico accounts for approximately $19.6 billion in export trade annually from California. Since 2002, California’s agricultural exports to Mexico have nearly doubled in value, making it one of the state’s fastest growing export markets. California’s agricultural exports to Mexico represent an estimated 5 percent of the total U.S. agricultural exports to this market.

Still, how embarrassing. The first order of business at the planning meeting should have been to make sure no one was excluded, especially since the NFL recognizes “Latinos now comprise the nation’s largest and fastest-growing minority group, and (fastest) serving Hispanic NFL fans will continue to be an important priority,” as NFL spokesman Greg Aiello told The Bee in October.

At worst, Fox Sports assumed undesirable characteristics of its heavily right-leaning brother Fox News, whose — ahem — fair and balanced act never misses an opportunity to push that hot-button topic of immigration. Thankfully, it’s closer to the former.

In response to my call asking why no Latinos were included, Fox Sports vice president of communications Dan Bell issued a statement.

It read, in part: “The reading ... was intended to be inclusive of all Americans. Fox Sports could have included American Latino stars such as Anthony Muñoz, Tony Gonzalez and Tony Romo. Our failure to do so was an oversight for which we apologize. We’ll make sure that the next version is more diverse, and includes a larger number of ethnicities.”

You could almost hear Castro let loose with a hearty grito (celebratory howl) and shout, Somos pocos, pero somos locos (We are few, but we are crazy).

“That’s great news,” he said. “It’s important that someone continues to prick them with information. ... We are the invisible minority.”

DAVID DOMINGUEZ - NEW PALM SPRINGS CHIEF OF POLICE

On Wednesday, February 6, 2008, after 29 years in law enforcement, Dominguez was sworn in as chief of police in the City of Palm Springs, with an overflow audience of law enforcement representatives from throughout Southern California, elected officials, friends and family witnessing the ceremony.

Addressing the audience at a reception, Dominguez expressed his thanks to his family, wife, Rosella, children Christina, Jessica and Dominic, credit his parents and extended family for their guidance and support. His father Richard Dominguez and the family traveled from throughout Southern California to attend the swearing-in ceremony.

He thanked many law enforcement officers in attendance and others that encouraged and supported him in achieving his career goals.

Dominguez has reached the epitome in law enforcement through dedication, integrity, education, and communication skills, according to many in the audience.

He was assigned as area commander in Casa Blanca and adjacent area to continue the implementation of the Community Based Policing. These responsibilities involved participating with residents and business community and developing interrelationship concurrent with police responsibilities.

From 1995 to 2001, Dominguez was responsible for various departmental divisions; personnel and training including research and development, risk management, recruitment and workers' compensation, field operations, internal investigations for patrol, fleet services, field training, budget preparation and administrative operations, investigation bureau including; forensics evident unit, school resource officer program and law enforcement grants.

In March, 2001, Dominguez was promoted to the rank of captain in charge of field operations with oversight of patrol operations, community policing programs, and ensuring implementation of mandates as outlined by the Attorney General Legal Settlement Agreement applicable to field operations. He was later assigned to the management of general investigations and special investigations including property, persons, narcotics and various task forces.

The highlight of Dominguez's progression in his career was in 2003 when Chief of Police Russ Leach appointed him to deputy chief with administrative responsibilities for internal affairs, personnel and training, budget and records office and oversight in the Office of the Chief of Police.

His advance training has included: California Peace Officers Association (POST) in management, supervisory, advanced, basic certificate; Kennedy Government Center at Harvard University-Senior Management Institute; POST-Senior Leadership Institute; Franklin Covey Institute-What Matter Most, Certificate Instructor. ( Belmont, Garfield, Roosevelt, and Wilson) inspiring similar protests at 15 additional high schools. Over 22,000 students walked out.

The Chicano Movement opened doors for equal opportunity in higher education to youth previously systematically excluded from those institutions. In 1969, UCLA's enrollment of Mexican students jumped from less than 100 to 1,900. In subsequent years, nationwide college enrollment increased from 2 to 25%. Recent statistics show quality of education minority students receive is an issue.

Many who were activists and leaders in the walkout went on to successful careers in politics, academia and the arts.

Carlos Muñoz, Jr., one of the thirteen arrested and then exonerated, is now Professor Emeritus at the University of California, Berkeley and will provide the keynote speech.

A published author, Youth, Identity, Power: The Chicano Movement, political scientist, historian and journalist, Muñoz is an acknowledged expert on issues of ethnic and racial politics, multiculturalism and diversity, immigration, civil and human rights and affirmative action. In February, he will be honored with the Americans Who Tell the Truth Award that highlights important Americans whose dignity, courage, honesty, generosity, compassion, wisdom, tolerance, belief, and relentless quest for truth have shaped this country.

Moctezuma Esparza, award-winning filmmaker, indicted for his role, is dedicated to opening doors for Mexican Americans in Hollywood and transforming the stereotypical images of Latinos. Producer of "Selena," "Gods and Generals" and "The Milagro Beanfield War," he is executive producer of "Walkout" and has established a chain of movie complexes called Maya Cinemas.

Sal Castro, one of the few Mexican American teachers at Lincoln, now retired, mentored and inspired his students to believe in their own potential. Actively involved, he conducts annual Chicano Youth Leadership Conferences which began in 1963. His passion, love and guidance have literally changed the course of the future of this country by his commitment to helping Mexican-American youth become all that they can be.

Paula Crisostomo went on to prominence in the school system and currently serves as the Director of Government and Community Relations for Occidental College. Crisostomo provides leadership for outreach strategies, including community relations, local and federally sponsored education service programs and local and state government relations.

Among other participants, Armando Vasquez-Ramos is a professor at Cal State University, Long Beach, and Chairman of the Board of Directors, Mexican Cultural Institute of Los Angeles. Dr. Juan Gomez-Quinones, UCLA professor, is an American historian and poet who specializes in the fields of political, labor, intellectual and cultural history.

Susan Radno, an award-winning Los Angeles-based veteran of film and television, co-creator of the landmark Chicano television series "Reflecciones" and produced, wrote and directed THE BRONZE SCREEN: 100 YEARS OF THE LATINO IMAGE IN HOLLYWOOD CINEMA. She is the producer/writer of "Chicano! History of the Mexican Civil Rights Movement-Taking Back the Schools" for PBS broadcast.

Forty years later, these civil rights pioneers are applauded for their courage and their tenacity to unite and forge a new vision that will continue to promote educational reform, social justice and personal empowerment.

ARROYO VALLEY HI STUDENTS STUDY ELECTIONS

Arroyo Valley High School students became involved in the practical application of voting during a mock election prior to the California primary.

The election process was planned in every detail with student/registrars at a voting area, checking student names by class, issuing election ballots and depositing votes in proper election containers. A student/monitor was reviewing voting operation to ensure students followed the rules.

Jesus Padilla was excited about learning about voting for candidates. "This is really good to learn how voting is done and I am interested in getting more involved when I graduate. This is fun," he said.

Student Nadia Sabir was also enthusiastic about learning about elections. "I'm going to learn more about politics because I going to be a candidate in an election after I graduate from college, maybe run for president," she said.

Eric Mooney, social studies teacher and a doctoral candidate, was the project advisor. "I was amazed at the interest of our students to participate in the voting process. I am sure that we have been able to interest many of them to become involved in actual elections and community involvement," he said.

At Arroyo, students were presented with a ballot to vote for the names of presidential candidates from the six political parties, and three ballot measures.

The results of the mock election in the presidential election went for Senator Clinton over Senator Obama with a 10 percent difference and other candidates receiving lesser votes.

Students voiced their opinions on the qualifications of each presidential candidate and were very versed in their background, positions on the economy, Iraq war, health care, and other issues.

Jesus Padilla, Gloria Jaquez, Rafael Barajas, and Nadia Sabir and Marisa Gonzalez spoke about going to college. "I'm going to learn more about politics and become involved when I graduate. This is fun," he said.

Stanford Drops Tuition for Some Students

By Steve Rubenstein

Palo Alto — In a radical change to its financial aid program, Stanford University announced that it will no longer charge tuition to students whose families earn less than $100,000 a year.

In addition, the university will waive room and board fees for students whose families earn less than $60,000 a year.

By University Provost John Hennessy announced on campus on Tuesday, university Provost John Etchemendy confirmed late Tuesday.

The university is making the change in the wake of published reports last month that its endowment had grown almost 22 percent last year, to $17.1 billion. That sum had begun to 5.5 percent. The new plan, which assistance, the university said it will universities," Etchemendy said.

Washington, DC - Rep. Joe Baca (D-Rialto) praised the enactment of a bipartisan economic stimulus plan, after President Bush signed into law the Recovery Rebates and Economic Stimulus for the American People Act. Because of Congress' swift action on this plan, 14.7 million families in California will receive tax rebates of almost $22 per person, plus $300 per child as early as mid-May. The plan is expected to add 500,000 jobs to the economy by getting money into the hands of America's working families and small businesses.

"I am proud that Democrats, Republicans and the President were able to come together and provide real relief to families in the Inland Empire and throughout the nation," said Rep. Baca. "The plan signed into law today will give our economy a boost, create jobs and make it easier for families to meet today's rising costs."

The plan will provide a tax rebate for the low and middle-income families who are being hit hardest by the economic downturn. More than 130 million families, including 35 million families across the country that work but make too little to pay income taxes, will receive a tax rebate. The plan will also provide recovery rebate checks to 28 million households of senior citizens and disabled veterans.

The bipartisan legislation also includes tax cuts for small businesses. These cuts allow the amount small businesses can immediately write off their taxes for capital investments, and encourage investment in new equipment. Additionally, the plan offers immediate tax relief for all businesses that invest in new plants and equipment by speeding up depreciation provisions, so that firms can write off an additional 50 percent for investments purchased in 2008. "Small businesses create jobs and power the economies of our Inland communities," added Rep. Baca. "This bipartisan stimulus plan has the potential to create 500,000 new jobs and give small businesses everywhere the chance to expand and hire more workers."

The plan also includes provisions to help families avoid losing their homes to foreclosure. The bill expands affordable mortgage loan opportunities for families at risk of foreclosure through the Federal Housing Administration. To enhance credit availability in the mortgage market, the measure also includes a one-year increase in the loan limits for single family homes from Fannie Mac and Freddie Mac.

LATINO NETWORK INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS

"LaNet has had an active year in advancing education for our students, leadership training, voter registration, numerous speakers, and participating in community activities in collaboration with community organizations. Our plans are to continue with our mission to address critical community needs, community involvement, sharing information and resources in a continual effort to impact our community," Reynolds said.

Past President Alfredo presented with a plaque and a standing ovation in acknowledgment of his leadership and long-time service to the organization.

Sheriff Sniff presented an overview of future plans for the sheriff department. He stated that he had established an executive board to lead the department, and an ongoing review for a reorganization of the sheriff department structure.

LaNet was officially organized in 1993 when community leaders met at My Brother’s Place to formulate plans to submit the name of Andy Soto for appointment as a trustee to the Riverside Community College. The effort failed, however, the leaders discussed the idea to continue meeting and discuss community needs and solutions, in addition to the interchange of information and available resources in the area. The strong response to the idea of a community forum became the catalyst for Latino Network.

Currenty, LaNet is a formal non-profit community-based (501 (c)-3) organization with an agenda of providing a forum for members and public to interact in addressing issues of importance to the Latino community. The 15-year organization is composed of representatives from education, social, economic, governmental and non-profit agencies.

LaNet has addressed an array of issues and resolutions for remedial action, election forums, registration drives, celebrations of historical events and outstanding individuals including Celebracion De La Mujer, Cesar Chavez Day, student leadership forums, Christmas Breakfast Scholarship and other community activities. LaNet welcomes visitors and invites new members. Meetings are on the first and third Wednesday of the month at 7:30 a.m. at Centro de Ninos, 4525 Victoria Avenue, Riverside.

THE GANG RESISTANCE AND EDUCATION PROGRAM

The nationally-recognized Gang Resistance Education and Training program, better known as GREAT, has been used in District schools for some years.

Offering the GREAT program at various schools is part of the San Bernardino City Unified School District’s efforts to partner with city officials to make San Bernardino a safer place for all children and families.

This is an effective tool to teach our students to make good decisions that will help them succeed in school and thrive in the community where they live," said Superintendent Dr. Arturo Delgado.

"Prevention is always our primary objective.

GREAT is offered at Arrowview and King Middle Schools, and Jones, Emmerton, Lincoln, Bradley, Roosevelt, Mt.Vernon, E. Neal Roberts, Del Rosa, and Wilson elementary schools.

The school-based program gives young people instruction in concepts such as how to avoid the lure of gangs, build self-esteem, and create an understanding and respect for doing the right thing. The 13-week middle school program emphasizes violence prevention, life skills, and the avoidance of destructive behaviors. It also promotes a positive bond between youth and law enforcement.

Since the program launched a few years ago, on San Bernardino schools, the District has teamed up with the San Bernardino County’s probation department to help teach the courses. The idea is to teach the classes at the middle schools and all their feeder elementary schools.

Additionally, the District plans to work with the San Bernardino Police Department to offer the program in the areas of Operation Phoenix, the city’s anti-crime program. GREAT was originally created in 1991 when Congress designated federal funds for the then Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to create a school-based gang-prevention program in Phoenix.

The program went national the next year, according to its website.
