New Faculty Building To Rise Soon

by Eldred Lawrence

The plans for a new faculty building on the CSUSB campus are on their way to becoming a reality by early 1987. The project, proposed to alleviate the growing faculty office shortage, is now in the process of completing preliminary drawings after getting approval from the California State University Trustees in November. However, the project is still awaiting support from the legislative delegation, according to CSUSB President Anthony H. Evans. This support should come in the form of state funding, as a result of Governor George Deukmejian's proposed budget that includes the CSUSB project in its list of 25 physical projects. Of these, CSUSB is ranked in the 14th category, a position President Evans terms "sufficiently high." President Evans added that the project was already receiving "strong, united support" from the growing faculty office shortage, the reason for the building project, was discovered through a series of extensive reviews done by President Evans in his first year at CSUSB. The demand for temporary offices had been provided in various areas such as the P.E. Building and the majority of the fifth floor of the library. Evans in his first year at CSUSB.

January, 1987. The new faculty building is expected to cost approximately $1,950,000, according to James Urata, Director of Administrative Affairs. It is planned to be a two-story building with the capabilities of housing 100 offices (six opposed to the current need for 81 offices). It will also feature exterior corridors and floor-to-ceiling glass walls, while having some rubblestone construction to tie in the bold, new image with the rest of the Cal State campus. Its most noteworthy feature, however, is its three interior courtyards (with trees), and the positioning of the faculty offices to enable them window views, either of one of the courtyards or of the surrounding mountains outside.

The building will have 12,000 assignable square feet (for offices) and about 20,000 gross square feet (for corridors, restrooms, etc.). Half of the building will go to the School of Education, with the other half going to the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. The frontmost section of the building will house the Dean's Offices from each department.

The faculty shortage, the reason for the building project, was discovered through a series of extensive reviews done by President Evans in his first year at CSUSB. The demand for temporary offices for the faculty had grown in the last ten years, to the point where space had been provided in various areas such as the P.E. Building and the majority of the fifth floor of the library.

Gay Studies Class To Be Held Next Quarter

by Kathe Merrall

Dr. Craig Henderson will again be teaching the Gay Studies class, "Seminar: Gays and Lesbians," at Cal State University, San Bernardino. It is a small group seminar, sociology, anthropology, history, law, religion and literature will be covered. It is a small group seminar, sociology, anthropology, history, law, religion and literature will be covered.

The class will be held in the spring quarter, beginning April 1 to June 14, Monday and Wednesday evenings, 8-10 p.m. The course number is 375 for this 5 unit Psychology class. You may enroll for it as a degree-seeking student at the University, or you may enroll through Extended Education at a cost of $150. The class is also part of the Women's Studies Certificate. Enrollment is done as registration at the end of March, or in early April at Extended Education. Prior classes in psychology are not required, but would be helpful. Please call Craig at 887-7534 if you have any questions.

Winterfest Blossoms At Cal State

by Kathe Merrall

Approximately seventy-five people gathered at one time at this years Winterfest '85 sponsored by the Associated Students. Seven clubs participated in the event. The R.N. Association went by Kathe Merrall.

A newly resurrected club, Saga, sold cookies. Saga stands for San Andreas Geographical Association and their purpose is to study the environment. The table was manned by Bob Wessman, who said that they participated in the event as a way to let students know more about their club and to attract new members.

The International Students Association was selling Baklawa. It's a dessert made up of dried fruits and honey, rolled up in a pastry fashion. This dessert is a favorite in Middle Eastern countries and in Greece. Club members Zeba Quabri, Imad Mabrouk, Loy Roche, Richard Cabrera and Jaime Mesta participated.

M.E.C.H.A. was selling tamales and carnations. Secretary Kelly Grenard said that they had sold most of the flowers to faculty earlier in the day and that their sales were now coming from the tamales. Member Marina Vasquez was also on hand to help out.

Job Market Looks Good For Grads

by Greg Tempany

It may be only mid-February, however, it is not a moment too early to start thinking about the coming summer and fall job search. Waiting until after graduation is not the way to do it. Getting the preliminary steps out of the way early will make the task much easier to do.

On the positive side, new college graduates should have a tough time finding a job as last year's grads did. Many companies last year backed hiring programs last year. This year, according to a recent article in The Chronicle of Higher Education, the job market appears to be catching up with the general economy. The survey by Changing Times uncovered 119 business and government agencies who will be hiring new college graduates this year.

Job openings will be in a variety of fields, including copy writing, engineering, computers, and finance. For those interested in government work a significant trend could be in the making. According to Rick Kenney, who heads the civilian personnel office for the Navy, "there appears to be a significant interest in the government work force for the next several years and many of those from the World War II generation will be retiring. This will create a sudden surge in entry-level hiring, as current employees will be moving into mid and senior level vacancies."

Approximately 57% of the companies and government agencies surveyed by Changing Times said they would be hiring different types of engineers. Fifty-five percent of those surveyed said that they would be hiring computer science graduates. Almost 54% will be hiring business/marketing/economics graduates. Fifty percent of those surveyed will be searching for accounting graduates.

This year the survey reported that 21% of those companies would be hiring liberal arts graduates. The places liberal arts graduates almost equal to the demand for physical science graduates.

Approximately 26% should top last year's by at least the expected rate of inflation, approximately 4.6%. Overall, salaries for graduates with bachelor's degrees should average close to $20,470. Graduates in highly technical fields such as electrical engineering and materials science can expect salaries in the range of $26,411 to $28,000. Accounting graduates can expect salaries in the range of $18,000 to $20,000 range. Graduates in liberal arts fields that would be hiring anonymously. Don't miss this answer session.

If you want to learn more about the job market, call Lynn Moss at 887-5335. Where can you find more information about career related questions. The Career Planning and Placement Center is located in Student Services, Room 116. The center offers resume and interview workshops. They also coordinate the on-campus recruitment program. To be eligible for the program students with senior status must establish a career file and have a copy of their resume on file. For more information call the Center at 887-7551 or make a visit.

NEWSBRIEFS

Teacher Workshop

At the University of California at San Bernardino, there will have an opportunity to find out what happens in the interview with school districts. The Career Planning Center is proud to announce that they will present a Teacher Interviewing Workshop in the Lower Commons (104) on Thursday, February 28, 1985. The speaker will be Dr. Dan King, Director of Certification Program for the San Bernardino Unified School District. He will discuss what personnel look for in an interview, what questions are asked during the interview and what makes him remember a candidate. He will give two or three mock interviews and field a question and answer session.

This is a special chance for student teachers and those about to become student teachers to save up all their questions and come ask them anonymously. Don't miss this terrific opportunity to get ahead in the job market.

If you have any questions about the workshop, call Lynne Moss at 887-7551.

COYOTE BOOKSTORE

Coyote Bookstore

The name recently chosen for the Cal State San Bernardino Bookstore. The name was decided upon after a poll of 390 students and faculty. The list of several names for... Coyote Bookstore included: Coyote Shop, Coyote Dean, The Den, The Lane, and the Coyote Bookstore. The name was formally chosen on February 6, 1985 after the Board for the Bookstore approved the choice of 53 pollers. The name change will not effect any merchandise, but you could see a few more students wearing Coyote gear in the near future.

To become more integrated on campus with the name of the mascot like the school team was one of the central themes for the then-explained Carol Dunlap, Bookstore Manager. Most of the Bookstores on other Cal State Campuses hold the name of their mascot or teams.

GLU Valentine Dance Gets Big Turnout

by John Cloud

One hundred and fifty people attended the Gay-Lesbian Union's second annual Valentine Dance, held Friday evening, Feb. 15, in the Student Union Ballroom. The GLU, under the leadership of advisor, Craig Henderson who teaches psychology, education and communications at CSUSB, stages four dances annually. All revenues generated from these dances are used to support the campus GLU and the Professional Advisory Council (PAC), a non-profit educational group serving gay persons throughout the Inland Empire.

"GLU tries to provide a central focal point on matters of concern for gay and lesbian people on campus or in the community," Henderson said. "It is like any other organization or club that plans events: GLU simply provides a venue and a group who share a common interest together.

According to Henderson, PAC pays all the money for dances. The GLU and other student clubs hold events for the Gay-Lesbian community help with preparations on a voluntary basis.

"Due to the nature of our group, that can be a challenge in and of itself," Henderson explained. "Therefore PAC and GLU members incorporate their efforts to make the dance a successful event." Henderson continued. The SUMP was decorated in red and white, with decorations in the theme of the film, "Soda Springs in Baker, Calif, when the desert wild flowers will bloom, the Public Sector to examine some of the problems.

The next GLU dance is tentatively scheduled for spring in the Student Union Ballroom.

Harrison Ford Shows
“Gentle Charm”

by Elrond Lawrence

“Witness,” a detective thriller starring Harrison Ford, is a welcome departure from his “Star Wars” and “Indiana Jones” exploits. It’s a movie that lets Ford finally strut his acting stuff and the end result is a first-rate movie.

Set primarily in a small Amish community in Pennsylvania, the movie centers around an Amish boy’s witnessing of a murder by some crooked policemen, and around murder a fellow officer in a tram. The boy’s witnessing of a murder by crooked superiors, or the fighting for his life and the end result is a first-rate movie. When the boy picks out a police lieutenant he always shows a strong design and composition, and set their sights on Ford as the end result is a first-rate movie. Whether it is the intense determination he displays in defending himself against his crooked superiors, or the disillusionment in getting used to the Amish way, he always shows a gentle charm about John Book, making him instantly a likeable and convincing character. Also well done performances include Kelly McGillis’ portrayal of Rachel who finds herself drawn to John, even though it’s against her ways and Jan Rubes as Rachel’s stern, but occasionally eccentric father. “Witness” is neither fully a thriller or a drama, it does have a consistent charm throughout, most noticeably in its more tender scenes (such as Ford’s and McGillis’ growing romance). And while its contrast between lifestyles may seem a bit too neat at times, “Witness” wins out, in its performances, and in its charm.

“Beginnings” Displays the Best of Photo I

“Beginnings,” an exhibit of 25 black and white photographs, is now on display in Gallery II in the Visual Arts Building. This collection of photographs represents a selection of the best photographs produced by the Photography I students in the Art Department during this past fall and the coming quarter. The images were created with different interpretations from the following four： black-and-white fine art, landscapes, time past, water, texture, reflections, night, and portrait. The selection was based on those photographs that the beginning photography instructor, Miss Golubch, felt contained a strong design and composition, convincing insights and good technical print quality.

The work will be on exhibit from February 19 through March 6.

ROTTC Offers
“Office Training”

by Stacie Lucas

Many opportunities and experiences are provided for students through the Reserve Officer Training Corps. The program on campus is administered by the military science department in the school of social and behavioral sciences.

ROTTC offers two, three and four year programs depending on student class status. It also offers scholarships to students involved in the program who show consistent above-average performance in classes and courses required for the program. There are 50 students involved in the program who are required to enroll in one class every quarter. They also must commit one Saturday a month and the whole group meets every Wednesday morning for information and a work out.

It is a program of training where a student in any academic discipline can become an army officer upon graduation, said Captain Steve Heyrem. He explained the opportunities given to students involved in the ROTC. It is an accredited program on campus that allows students of all academic levels the opportunity to become army officers while pursuing any degree they choose. "ROTTC is one of the finest experiences you can have" said Michael Antonio, a junior, liberal studies major. "I put about 20-30 hours a week into ROTTC as a senior." You get immediate responsibility that the private sector doesn’t offer." It’s a dream come true," said one student who is considering the program. "I feel lucky this country has allowed me to experience many different things and now...I can pay back to the country something was given to me."

Fifty percent of students involved go on to active service as officers. After graduating they choose a branch and continue training. They are then placed and begin service as a second lieutenant. This gives leadership experience that helps in every point in life,” explained Heyrem.

Requirements include: U.S. citizenship, a respectable GPA and being of age 18 or under at the time of graduation. Major Stuart Lyon the Cal State San Bernardino ROTC program, which is the only campus-based program in Inland Empire. There are 500 programs across the country at various colleges. The program brings major responsibility early in life and provides for better opportunities to the individual for jobs of their choice in the future.

Cutting the Red Tape to Declare a Major

by Elron Lawrence

So you say you haven’t declared a major yet? Well, don’t panic—it’s not all that bad. Besides, you’re not alone. About 30% of all freshmen who enter CSUSB come in with an undecided major. However, if you’re approaching or are in, your junior or senior year, you might want to begin to seriously consider some subject areas that could be potential majors.

First of all, there is nothing wrong with being undecided about a major. It can be a chance for you to explore new ideas and possibly majors. A good way to do this is through the Great Universities Computer Search Services provided at CSUSB. It is required of all students who attend the university, and is designed to provide students with a broad academic background. By using the General Education program, you can fulfill credits and satisfy your curiosity about the different fields of study. It’s a great way to test out your interests while expanding your horizons.

Another way is to consult with your advisor at least once per quarter. An advisor can be a valuable source of information about areas of study and academic rules and regulations, as well as provide many helpful hints. You can also talk to your professors during their office hours. They can provide information about particular careers, and can often answer questions that can help you decide on a major.

An important step in the decision making process in testing the possibilities may seem to go on forever, but don’t forget that your career and counselor are there to help. And with their help, you can create a college experience that will probably be enjoyable for you and your career.

The programs are all very interesting to you, look into more information. Of you can call 887-7501 and set up an appointment with a career counselor, who can help you explore your strengths and weaknesses, areas you enjoy, and career objectives.

In summary, it is safe to say that while it might be good to have an Undeclared Major in your early college years, you should work on a major by the end of your junior year, so you can be able to meet the major’s requirements for graduation. The possibilities may seem to go on forever, but don’t forget that your faculty and counselors are there to help. And with their help, you can create a college experience that will probably be enjoyable for you and your career.

High Blood Pressure is a Serious National Problem

High blood pressure is one of the most serious diseases in the United States. It contributes directly or indirectly to about one million deaths a year. It affects over thirty-five million people, approximately one out of every 4 or 5 American adults. High blood pressure is treatable. Many deaths can be prevented if hypertension (high blood pressure) is detected early and managed properly.

One problem is that, unlike a toothache or backache, high blood pressure doesn’t usually produce any symptoms. People may not know they have high blood pressure until it begins to cause trouble with the heart, brain, or kidneys.

In order to make it easy to have your blood pressure checked, the Student Health Center and the Nursing Department will set up four stations to check blood pressures on February 20 from 11:45 p.m. Those locations are: the south end of the library, the main lobby of Student Services; the lobby of the Student Union and the West lobby of the Commons.

Being An Archaeology Student

Archaeology. The very word reeks of romance—stone temples looming up out of the jungle, million-year-old human skeletons poking from an eroded bank, caches of gold and jewels. All these are part of archaeology, but there are also long days of hard work and minutes of analysis, says Dr. Randall Barber, archaeologist with the Department of Anthropology.

"You’re not just mining for attractive artifacts to put in a museum some place," he says. "You’re trying to reconstruct and understand the way of life of the people who left those artifacts, and that’s a much more complex job.

This is the theme of an anthropology course offered by Barber this spring. Most archaeology courses focus on the results of archaeology; they are only interested in much more complex job.

Tying Flies In A Pinch

by John Horton

Suppose you said yes to a fishing buddy who invited you to go fly fishing tomorrow. Like many fastidious fly tiers, you probably think that you have a ready arsenal of deadly flies, Royal Coaches, California Mosquitoes, and Professors already tied and trimmed. What if, to your horror, you find that you have only a few moth-eaten specimens left from your last fishing trip. Since it’s obvious that you forgot to tie or buy needed materials, and it’s late night, what do you do? The answer is obvious. Panic!

You could count to 10 very slowly. And, while you do, think of alternative materials that could be used. Now remember, this is not the time to get your hackles up in an uproar. A pinch is an idea! That carpet yarn may never match quality wool tying yarn but, what the hey! What do you have to lose, a little time, maybe? Look at what you stand to gain. Instead of over inferior materials, imperfect-looking flies, new words for your vocabulary. And, you never know! You might even catch a fish with one of your own creations. If, however, you have some high-falootin' fly tying organization might even name it after you. Not the best, a little time, maybe?

Suggested Use

- head cement
- body and ribbing
- attractor wings
- butt-tagn body

Many of the above materials are no doubt lying about in your own home. Some are more than adequate substitutes for typically used professional materials. Of course, some of the items listed above are close to the real thing. For instance: 1) the pipe cleaner is the same chenille used for fly tying, 2) I would swear that the polyester thread in the household sewing box is a dead ringer for fly-tying thread. 3) And feather dusters offer some first class wing and hackle feathers. In fact, I have used these household items—even when I haven't been in a pinch, simply because they work so well. More now than ever, careful attention to detail is a must!

When in doubt, test a piece of the material in question. A little common sense testing is sure to conserve not only your time and energy, but your vocabulary as well.

White and Ruby Soto explained that the religion was promoting a "universal world peace." The English Club was selling handmade Valentine cards. The cards were nicely designed by Robin Hart and Sandy Alos, who had stayed up until 4:45 a.m. on Valentine's Day to finish the cards in time for the event. The clubs however, were not what attracted the students. It was the live entertainment provided by students. The hit of the day was singer Natalie Artebery. There was little trouble with the equipment before she began, but it didn't bother her once she got started. The crowd cheered her on with clapping and everyone enjoyed her style.

When asked what she thought of Winterfest '85, student Alberta Murphy said, "It was fine! There wasn't great food and it was a nice atmosphere." Hortencia Perez said she liked the music. "It keeps you here."

Has Reagan Fulfilled His Promises?

Dear Editor,

When Ronald Reagan was campaigning for president in 1980, he made several pledges to the American people. He pledged to restore the American military to strength, which in his opinion had gone bad due to years of neglect. He pledged to reduce the size and scope of the federal government. Somewhere along the line he also pledged to reduce the federal government's budget deficit.

Has he succeeded in fulfilling these promises? Some could argue yes, but their arguments would leave many questions unanswered. Further examination of what President Reagan has accomplished is necessary before any conclusions can be made.

Have President Reagan and Casper Weinberger restored strength to the American military? This is and probably always will be a debatable question. One thing is for certain, military spending is sky-high. High military spending in the fiscal 1986 budget is expected to be in the $280 billion plus range. This includes increased spending on nuclear weapons and on research for "Star Wars" -type anti-ballistic missile systems. Has spending like this really increased America's military preparedness?

Reports are issued periodically, in a variety of media, which question the ability of U.S. armed forces to fight a sustained battle in remote corners of the world. How can these reports even be considered when the Pentagon is spending such incredible sums of money? When observed closely, the Pentagon spending habits sometimes lack intelligent judgement. Only the Pentagon itself can explain what it is spending the money on. But even if those who have been cut out of the loop were to speculate as to what is happening, some of those that are piled out of effectiveness, the Small Business Administration has the responsibility of seeing that organizations may have a few administrative problems, but it vital to the American people. President Reagan's tenure has so far seen many new and worthy accomplishments. Bringing inflation under control is one example. However, have the cuts that Reagan and company made been for the better? When you look at it, the current round of cuts is a debatable question. One thing is for certain, deficit spending is growing, and the goals for the Reagan Administration are set to be higher than the goals for the Carter Administration.

In a single word, No! The size of the federal deficit has grown to enormous proportions since President Reagan took office. The deficit for fiscal 1986 is projected to be $160 billion. Continued deficits of this magnitude could wreak havoc on the nation's economy in the future. They will certainly keep interest rates on mortgage payments high, which amongst other things, may prevent many people from owning their own homes.

Lastly, there are the Red, Green, and Blue dots all over the music department, and rumors of a dead Bruce Bertoletti. No wonder the music department is so strange. Have all the transfer students from Valley or RCC started playing the music on campus, or do they come here and fritz. They low to the students that don't take them. They begin to enjoy Wehren and Schenck. Also, all is lost. To think that there are no Michael Jackson fans in the music History class.

If these things continue, we could all move to the bay area. It's just too confusing to me. I think I'll transfer to Boda.

Strange Folks" At CSUSB?

You've Got To Be Kidding

Dear Chronicle,

This campus has got some strange folks. Take the matter of club developments here, and each year it gets stranger. Take, for example, the Cal State Lincoln's version of the campus clubs. What is the "U.S. Out of Central America" club? This may sound like a pitch perfect way to keep the United States out of all wars, but, I'm afraid, the members of this club are out of their minds. If we pull out of Asia, and the countries in the Middle East, we shouldn't even want to be in Central America. Why, we're a pretty powerful country. Where it would be better to leave them alone. If we go, we're going to have to fight a sustained battle in remote areas of the world. How can these folks represent views of the author and opinion of The Cal State Chronicle's Executive Board. Signed editorials and classified ads may be ordered similarly except that such ads for students, faculty, and staff of CSUSB of reasonable length are free. Add and Copy Deadlines are the Wednesday at 1:00 NOON, preceding the date of publication. Copy received after that date appears in the paper on a space available basis. The Cal State Chronicle reserves the right to refuse to print ads and copy submitted after the deadline.

Letters to the Editor should be kept to a maximum of one and one-half pages typed. Letters which attack any person may be held until that person has had time to respond in the same issues as the other letter. Letters MUST include name, address, phone number, and must be signed, although names will be withheld upon request. All materials become property of The Cal State Chronicle.

Gambling Controversy Continues

Dear Editor,

This is in rebuttal to the letter written in the week issue of the Cal State Lincoln. First of all, as a reporter, I could of course have written an article about the controversy. However, after reading several articles for publication in this honourable periodical, not one of which was worth touching by typographical errors and other editorial blundering. Ah well, see if I, all to be expected from a typical college rag struggling by on a staff of resume stuffers.

But not all was perfect. There was this little incident about the "personal (sic) feelings" that you so "nicely" expressed in your editorial. As I recall at your club can and did at Monte Carlo Night. You can't prevent everyone else (besides me of course) seemed to have a fantastic time.

Finally, as to your "personal (sic) feelings" that you mentioned, I have one only response to that; I believe you let your emotions get the better of you when you wrote your editorial. As I recall at our meeting, you were quite upset when I refused to let you read my article before it went to print. You seemed to be under the assumption that I had approved of your article and permission. When I refused, you took it personally, hence your editorial. (Chalk up another one for professionalism).

In closing, I would like to say two more things. One, is that maybe you should pay a little more attention to what Greg Timpany said in his editorial on the subject. You can't please everyone, he wrote, which you seem to be under the illusion that your club can and did at Monte Carlo Night. You come across this way when you say you should pay a little more attention to what people like me (and everyone else) seem to have a fantastic time.

P.S. I am only left wondering how accurately this letter will be transmitted, but afterall, its only your opinion.
