Blue Shield of California Sued for Pushing Policyholders Into Bare Bones Coverage and Hiking Premiums

Blue Shield’s Illegal Practice Causes “Death Spiral”

Blue Shield has used enormous rate hikes, and the threat of rate increases, to force patients into lower-benefit and higher-deductible health coverage in violation of state law, according to a class action lawsuit filed by Blue Shield policyholders and consumer advocates. The lawsuit alleges that Blue Shield is illegally gaming the health insurance system by alternately closing older policies and opening new ones in order to push older, sicker consumers who are more expensive to insure into lower benefit, higher deductible coverage that requires consumers to pay more out of pocket.

The lawsuit seeks to stop Blue Shield from shoving its policyholders into what is known as a “Death Spiral”—the industry term for what happens when a health insurer “closes” certain insurance policies to new customers, and then raises rates to those remaining in the closed policy until those enrollees can no longer afford coverage. Since consumers with preexisting conditions cannot switch to a comparable or better policy, consumers trapped in the closed policies must either accept greatly inferior coverage or face bigger and bigger premium increases.

“Blue Shield closed my family’s policy and then threatened us with a 23 percent premium increase. We had no choice but to switch to the only bare-bones policy Blue Shield of California Sued for Pushing Policyholders Into Bare Bones Coverage and Hiking Premiums continued on page 15

Expanded Tax Credit for Hiring Veterans

A law change enacted late last year now provides an expanded tax credit to employers that hire eligible unemployed veterans. The credit can be as high as $9,600 per qualified veteran for for-profit employers or up to $6,240 for tax-exempt organizations. The amount of the credit depends on a number of factors, including the length of the veteran’s unemployment before hire, hours a veteran works and the amount of first-year wages paid. CSUSB to add Inland Empire Business Journal archives to collection

By Andrew Edwards, Staff Writer

The Inland Empire Business Journal will donate its entire archive, and future issues, to be digitized and stored as a part of Cal State San Bernardino’s special collection.

“Every month, they’re going to add a new one. As long as it’s around and as long as Cal State San Bernardino is standing. Our life’s work is going to be there for years,” Inland Empire Business Journal Publisher Bill Anthony said.

“May be wrong, but I think it’s one hell of an honor,” he said. continued on page 24

Two Weeks for Half a Budget: Worth the Wait?

Almost two weeks ago, the Legislature met the requirements of voter-approved Proposition 25, which prevents the forfeiture of pay for lawmakers if a budget is approved on a simple majority vote. When voters approved Proposition 25, they did so under the impression that the Legislature would be required to pass a truly balanced budget in order to still collect their paychecks. However, a court ruling declared that the Legislature can determine itself whether a budget is balanced, regardless of whether it is in reality.

The main budget bill, along with six other measures, sat on the Governor’s desk for 12 days. However, almost two dozen bills in total were required to fully enact the $91.3 billion state budget. While the Governor and Democrat leaders spent almost two weeks negotiating behind closed doors on the full budget package, California Budget Fact Check asks: was the delay worth the wait?

Instead of reversing the Governor’s harmful trigger cuts which aim 99 percent of reductions at our classrooms, the Democrats’ largest budget sticking points focused on increased welfare spending. An analysis by California Budget Fact Check found that this year’s budget:

- Adopts the Governor’s full $5.9 billion in education cuts but spares welfare programs from trigger cuts. The majority-vote budget adopted the Governor’s trigger cuts which target schools for 99% of the trigger cuts. They rejected both the Legislative Analyst’s proposal and the Republican proposal to protect education funding. An analysis by California Budget Fact check found that only $1.2 billion in reductions are permanent, the rest are funding shifts or one-time in nature. Over $7 billion of the budget solutions are really funding shifts, deferrals and other budget gimmicks that do not reduce funding.

- Welfare recipients protected: Governor Brown proposed ending the exemption from welfare-to-work requirement by requiring recipients to take job training classes. Getting people back to work not only saves taxpayers but helps to grow our economy. The proposal mandates that 20% of recipients shall be exempted from the new requirements.

- Shifts healthy families to Medi-Cal at a higher cost for taxpayers: The proposal eliminates the cost-effective and successful Healthy Families health care program by shifting more than 880,000 children from Healthy Families to Medi-Cal. By doing this, the state will save $13 million but will also lose more than nine times that amount by not being able to draw down $154 million in federal funding. Healthy Families has low administrative costs ($50 per client) and is overseen by just 600 workers in a private firm. Medi-Cal employs 27,000 government workers to determine eligibility, at a cost of $395 per recipient.

- Plays politics with the initia-

High Desert Opportunity 2012

As the largest business conference in the region, High Desert Opportunity provides a unique atmosphere where attendees get a true pulse for the current business climate and future plans for this growing region.

The conference, in its 31st year, will take place on Thursday, Oct. 18th from 7:30 a.m.—3:00 p.m. at the San Bernardino County Fairgrounds in Victorville, CA. The goal of the conference is to support economic growth and stability by attracting businesses and jobs to the High Desert. This year’s event showcases an expo hall, HD Theater morning program and luncheon with real estate mogul, author and Reality TV Shark Tank Investor/Shark Barbara Corcoran as the keynote speaker.

Barbara Corcoran started out getting straight D’s in high school and college and had 20 jobs by the time she turned 23. It was her next job that would make her one of the most successful entrepreneurs in the country when she took a $1,000 loan to start The Corcoran Group. She parlayed the loan into a five-billion-dollar real estate business and sold it in 2001 for $66 million. In addition to being the only female Investor/Shark on the ABC hit series, Barbara is also the real estate contributor for NBC’s TODAY Show where she comments weekly on trends in the real estate market.

The event will also focus on the explosive population growth the region has seen over the past...

ICONIC PALM SPRINGS HOTEL SELLS FOR $15 MILLION

The Colony Palms Hotel, an iconic, 57-room boutique hotel in Palm Springs, just sold for $15 million, or $263k/room. Located at 572 N. Indian Canyon Drive, just east of Palm Canyon Dr, the hotel, restaurant and spa was named to Condo Nast’s “Hot List” in 2008.

The purchaser was a joint venture between real estate investor and developer, Michael Rosenfeld through an affiliate of his Woodridge Capital Partners, and an investment fund managed by Oaktree Capital Management L.P. The seller was Pacifica Colony Palms LLC, an affiliate of Pacifica Capital Group, which acquired the property and redeveloped it in 2004. John Strauss and Anthony Muscio of Jones Lang LaSalle Hotels represented the seller in the transaction.

Steve Ohren, Co-Founder of Pacifica Capital Group, demonstrated great vision and unwavering perseverance which was critical in developing the Colony Palms Hotel after they acquired the property. Ohren is considered one of the earliest visionaries of the Palm Springs renaissance. Sadly, Ohren passed in 2008 after the hotel’s opening at the age of 54 following a battle with cancer.

“We are proud to honor Steve’s legacy by reaching high expectations for the hotel. I think he would have been very pleased to see the Colony Palms’ success,” said Britten Shuford, president of Pacifica Capital Group.

With a rich and storied history, the Spanish Colonial style hotel was originally built and opened in 1936 by Al Wertheimer, a reputed mobster and member of the Purple Gang.

A frequent refrain of top managers is “we need to do a better job of holding people accountable.” Accountability seems to be the mantra for organizational get-well programs these days. One can agree with this in part, and yet there is an aspect of accountability that feels like a cop-out.

The key to leadership is to create an environment whereby people do the best they can because they want to do it. When employees know it is clearly in their best interest to give their maximum discretionary effort to the organization, managers don’t have to crack the whip as often. Imagine working in an environment where people do the right things not because they are expected, but because it is in their best interest. In that atmosphere, holding people accountable would nearly always be a positive occurrence rather than negative. How refreshing!

It is the actions, attitudes, and intentions of leaders, not the rank and file, that make the environment of either reinforcement or punishment the habitual medication for individual performance issues. Let’s examine eight attitudes or behaviors of leaders that can foster a culture of accountability.

1. Be Clear About Your Expectations. It happens every day. The boss says, “You did not file the documents correctly by client; you totally messed up.” Then, the assistant says, “You never told me to file them by client, so I used my initiative and filed them by date because that is what they taught us in Record Retention.” Holding people accountable when the instructions are vague is like scolding an untethered horse for wandering off the path to eat grass.

2. Be Sure of Your Facts. A manager learned this painful lesson early in his career. He gave his administrative assistant a letter to type for a customer. When he got it back, the letter was full of obvious errors. He immediately held her accountable for the sloppy work and called her into a conference room to let her know of his disappointment. When he told her about the errors, she said, “Well if you had taken the time to notice the initials on the bottom of the letter, you would have seen that I farmed that work out to Alice because I was busy with other things. I did not type that letter.” Gulp. The manager tried to cover with, “I am glad, because your work is usually higher quality than that,” but the irrevocable damage had been done. If you are going to accuse someone of sloppy work, make sure it was done by that person.

3. Be Timely. If there is an issue with performance versus expectations, bring the matter up immediately. If you wait for a couple days before trying to bring up the issue, it just tends to cloud and confuse the person who did not meet expectations. If a boss says, “You did not answer the phone in the proper way last week,” how is the employee supposed to even remember the incident?

4. Be Kind. Always apply the Golden Rule liberally. If you had a lapse in performance, justified or not, how would you want to get the information? Keep in mind that some people are more defensive than others, so if you like your feedback “straight from the shoulder,” tone it down when dealing with a particularly sensitive individual.

5. Be Consistent. If you are a stickler for certain behaviors, make sure you apply the discipline consistently. Coming down hard on Mike for being late for work can seem unfair if you habitually let Mary waltz in 45 minutes after the start of the shift. Always avoid the appearance of playing favorites. Recognize that, as a human being, you do have differences in your attitudes toward people, but when holding people accountable, you must apply the same standards across the board.

6. Be Discrete. Embarrassing a person in public will create a black mark that will live for a long time. If there is an issue of performance, share the matter with the individual privately and in a way that upholds the dignity of the person. This issue also refers to the Golden Rule.

7. Be Gracious. Forgiving a person who has failed to deliver on expectations is sometimes a way to set up better performance in the future. Get help for individuals who need training or behavior modification. A leader needs to be mindful of his or her personal contribution to the problem through past actions, like not dealing with a problem when it is small. If the current infraction is a habitual problem...

The old telephone company ad that advised customers to “reach out and touch someone” has new meaning, since long-distance phone companies entered into the prison system in the 1970s. Such industry giants as AT&T, Bell South, Sprint, GTE (formerly General Telephone & Electronics Corporation) and MCI have found prisons to be an excellent market for long distance business. Indeed, this makes sense because inmates all over the country spend countless hours on the telephone talking with relatives. The Telecommunications Act of 1996 resulted in greater competition among telephone companies and prices began to decline – except for the prison system, which began to see a big rise in revenue. Prisons all over the country began to get a percentage of the revenues ranging from 10 to 55 percent. A survey by the American Correctional Association in 1995 showed, for instance, that New York was making $15 million per year and California brought in $9 million, with a total of $100 million nationwide. By the year 2000 commission revenues went as high as 60 percent in New York. “At least 10 states were taking in $10 million or more from prisoner calling, with California, New York, and the Federal Bureau of Prisons leading the pack with more than $20 million in phone revenues each.” All of these profits have come as a result of the fact that for a prisoner to call home requires a collect call. Part of the revenue comes from the charging of various connection fees, surcharges and per minute charges ranging from as high as 90 cents for local calls and $2.25 for long-distance calls, with in some cases a 15-minute phone call costing, $20 or more. AT&T’s well-known and clever ad read (in upper case letters): “HOW HE GOT IN IS YOUR BUSINESS. HOW HE GETS OUT IS OURS.” The bulk of the costs to “reach out and touch” a loved one in prison has been borne mostly by low-income and minority people. One writer succinctly summarized the effect of this business: The ultimate effect of profit-sharing and what amount to price-gouging arrangements in the prison phone sector has been a long-term trend toward excommunication, making contact between prisoners and family members on the outside more costly and therefore more difficult to maintain. But this goes directly against the findings of several decades of recidivism and community impact studies, some of which were used to justify the introduction of prison calling in the first place. Such studies have found a powerful predictor for recidivism is the failure to maintain family and community contact while under incarceration. It is almost as if those in charge of this system actually want high recidivism rates, as this writer further suggests that “a reliable way of increasing the likelihood that prisoners will reoffend is to break all ties with the outside world and then place them back on the street years later, with little reentry support, in a community to which they have become a stranger.” This led to a great deal of controversy in California and elsewhere. An investigation by the Los Angeles Times found that phone charges benefited the state of California by about $35 million a year as a result of an agreement with long-distance phone companies. Phone charges to relatives of those locked up in the California Youth Authority resulted in about $85 million in revenue for the state in 2001. After several years of pressure, an agreement reached in January, 2001 lowered the charges by 25 percent. A three-year contract was signed with WorldCom and Verizon that cut rates for adult support, in a community to which they have become a stranger.”
University of Redlands appoints Ralph W. Kuncl as new president
A highly regarded educational leader and native of Southern California has been named the 11th president of the University of Redlands

The University of Redlands Board of Trustees met June 2 to receive the unanimous recommendation from the university’s presidential search committee, and then elected Dr. Ralph W. Kuncl the 11th president of University of Redlands.

“I am honored and humbled to have been selected to serve as the next president of the University of Redlands,” Kuncl said. “The University of Redlands is clearly a great team and it’s the chance of a lifetime to be selected to lead the university into an energetic future.” Dr. Kuncl, who is provost and executive vice president at the University of Rochester, also expressed his appreciation for his predecessor James R. Appleton who retires after 20-plus years as leader of the 4,700-student university in southern California.

“Dr. Jim Appleton leaves a superb legacy, guiding the university through many years of excellence and paving the way for future success,” Kuncl said. In addition to his administrative role at Rochester, Dr. Kuncl is professor of brain and cognitive sciences and neurology. He has led the expansion of multidisciplinary research and initiatives in diversity and leadership development.

“Ralph is a high-energy person and a very effective, principled leader, and along with a remarkable background and list of achievements, we found him to be a man who is motivated by service to others, and particularly with a mission of helping to build and improve a liberal arts and sciences college like Redlands,” said Carole Beswick, university trustee and chair of the presidential search committee.

“With the leadership of Ralph Kuncl we look forward with great confidence to the possibilities for the future of the University of Redlands,” Board of Trustees Chairman Richard Fisher said.

Dr. Kuncl grew up in the Eagle Rock area of Los Angeles, and received his AB degree at Occidental College. He earned his Ph.D. and M.D. degrees from the University of Chicago and completed postdoctoral fellowships at Johns Hopkins University before serving for 20 years as Professor of Neurology and Pathology at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. He is married to Nancy Kuncl, a former businesswoman and now a hospice nurse. Dr. Kuncl’s first administrative appointment was as vice provost of Johns Hopkins University. He then served as provost at Bryn Mawr College, where he continued to pursue a balanced approach to education and research.

An internationally recognized expert and researcher in the field of neurology, Dr. Kuncl was instrumental in the establishment of the Cal Ripken-Lou Gehrig Endowment for Neuromuscular Disease. Dr. Kuncl has been very successful in securing grants and private gifts in support of his research and academic initiatives and has enjoyed mentoring students as well as faculty throughout his career.

As a national leader in higher education, Dr. Kuncl served for many years on the National Executive Board of the Reinvestment Center. He was an assembly representative for the Consortium on Financing Higher Education (COFHE) and currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Tuition Plan Consortium, sponsor of the Private College 529 Plan.

He is a long-time supporter of the fine arts and an accomplished musician, singing with the Baltimore Choral Arts Society for over 20 years and performing with the Eastman-Rochester Chorus.

10 Tips for a Successful Cloud Computing Implementation
By Curtis Paradzick, Vice President of Victor Resources

Less equipment, fewer IT team members, continuous upgrades, and improved security. These are but a few of the many benefits included in the thousands of articles written about cloud computing. As with all technologies, however, whether it’s the right option for a given company is often a more complicated question.

First a definition: cloud computing is the provision of computing, networking and/or storage capabilities from a service provider to a group of users within an organization.

Cloud computing typically refers to one of three architectures:
• Software as a Service – In this architecture, a service provider offers application software available to users from a remote site.
• Platform as a Service – In a PaaS model, the service provider makes available not just application software, but also additional parts of the software “stack,” including the operating system, programming language execution environment, web server and database.
• Infrastructure as a Service – In this architecture, the service provider includes hardware as well as software on a pay-per-use model.

The benefits of cloud computing include the ability to offload small or significant portions of purchasing, managing and upgrading a data center. But to maximize these benefits, IT teams must think through in detail what exactly they are trying to accomplish and the actual versus cost/benefit of a cloud approach.

Below are 10 tips to consider when analyzing a potential move to a cloud infrastructure.

1. Know your business and its needs - It is important to identify the requirements of employees and identify in detail the business reason and purpose for the move to cloud computing.
2. Define the software and/or hardware desired to be in the cloud—It is best to start with a low-risk, back office (non-strategic) application before setting your sights on more critical functions.
3. Evaluate cloud service providers carefully—Test multiple cloud providers and ask to be set-up with trials, if this capability is not automatically offered on their websites.
4. Determine “true” costs - Cloud providers usually have subscription fees, configuration fees, Internet access fees, end-user support usage fees, and training fees. Ask about other costs that may not be so obvious such as incremental user fees.
5. Establish a cloud computing committee to assist with evaluation—Form a committee that includes representatives from all key functions within your company to ensure all “voices” are heard during the service provider selection process.
6. Study the SLA in great detail – The most important terms to focus on when reviewing SLAs include: availability and uptime, guarantees for system performance, security, data ownership and error resolution.
7. Drill down about security - Focus on questions such as where your data will be stored, who at the service provider might have access to it, what layers of security are in place, and how the remote connection is protected.
8. Ask about disaster recovery and business continuity—A primary benefit of cloud architecture is the ability for an organization to continue operations in the event of a natural or other type of disaster.
9. Check the quality and redun- continued on page 35
No More Redevelopment...What’s Next?

By Larry Kosmont, President & CEO of Kosmont Companies

Successor Agencies have assumed control and will be responsible for the winding down of the activities and assets of former Redevelopment Agencies under the supervision of Oversight Boards, which are currently being assembled. Following audits by Counties and the State of previous redevelopment transactions and ongoing Successor Agency obligations, properties of the former Redevelopment Agencies will begin to come onto the market. Cities are now handicapped with respect to future economic development without the capacity for tax increment financing. New and relatively untried tools such as infrastructure financing districts and community-based economic development authorities will be explored and implemented as a replacement for redevelopment, while existing tools, such as lease/lease-back financing and sales tax reimbursement agreements will concurrently be revisited. Several redevelopment legislation clean-up measures are underway to provide guidance and options to cities in California, but filling the void left by redevelopment will still be a formidable task.

Where We Are

Redevelopment is dead, and effective Feb. 1, 2012 the dissolution process has begun. Though it is procedurally untied, the unwinding process is vaguely similar to certain aspects of private sector liquidation in that, by and large, the new decision-makers (Oversight Boards) will act much like creditor committees, seeking to liquidate assets in order to share in the sale proceeds in addition to getting public agency-owned properties back on the tax rolls. Due to the unique and untested requirements and processes in AB1X 26, Successor Agencies (the cities that formerly had redevelopment properties) and private sector entities that took part in the program or may want to buy those properties are focused on several key questions going forward, regarding such issues as the next steps in redevelopment dissolution, the availability of properties going forward, the feasibility of redevelopment without tax-increment financing, replacement economic development tools, and potential redevelopment legislation clean-up.

What’s Next?

• Successor Agencies have already made the decision to remain in control of the redevelopment dissolution program. Almost every city in the state elected to become a Successor Agency to its redevelopment agency, enabling them to finish ongoing projects and dispose of assets with the express review and approval of Oversight Boards.

• Seven-member Successor Boards were formed over two months (deadline was May 1, 2012), to oversee the winding down of redevelopment assets and activities. For the most part, careful attention and emphasis continued on page 25.

Shield offered us. When Blue Shield canceled the original rate increase, the company refused to let us transfer back into our old, higher benefit policy. Then, Blue Shield raised the rate of our bare bones policy by 14.8 percent!” said Robert Martin of Gilroy, California, one of the Blue Shield customers representing other consumers in the class-action lawsuit. “It’s just plain unfair. Blue Shield is pushing families like mine with pre-existing health conditions out of their health plans – either into higher deductible coverage or into the ranks of the uninsured.”

Robert Martin and his family suffered triply as result of the Death Spiral: they were forced to switch to lesser coverage, were hit with a big rate increase for their new high deductible, lower-benefit policy, and were not allowed to switch back to their better coverage.

“Death Spirals are the result of insurers behaving at their worst,” said Jerry Flanagan, staff attorney for Consumer Watchdog. “Instead of providing coverage to loyal customers who have paid their premiums, Blue Shield pushes consumers into skimpier coverage or prices them out of care altogether when they are sick and need insurance the most.”

The lawsuit was filed in San Francisco Superior Court by the nonprofit consumer advocacy group Consumer Watchdog and the law firm of Whatley Kallas, LLC. Download the lawsuit at www.consumerwatchdog.org/resources/martinvblueshield_conformed.pdf

According to legislative records, it was Blue Shield’s own past business practices, resulting in Death Spirals for consumers, that spurred the Legislature to adopt the same 1993 law that Consumer Watchdog and Whatley Kallas, LLC now allege the company has violated.

The violations are taking place among certain insurance plans in the individual market that Blue Shield is closing down. California law requires that when health insurers close a policy, the insurer must offer consumers new comparable coverage, or minimize rate increases on the closed policies.

Two regulatory agencies – the California Department of Managed Health Care (“DMHC”) and the California Department of Insurance (“CDI”) – oversee different segments of Blue Shield’s insurance business. In the lawsuit, Blue Shield is accused of illegally closing eight policies regulated by the DMHC, and announcing it will close 23 policies regulated by the CDI on July 2, 2012 without offering consumers comparable policies or limiting rate increases as required by law.

Considered together the closures of the Blue Shield policies at the DMHC, and the impending closures at the CDI, demonstrate a broader scheme to illegally manipulate blocks of health insurance business, according to the lawsuit. See (www.consumerwatchdog.org/images/blueshielddeathspiralscheme.pdf) to view a chart demonstrating the alternating opening and closing of policies under the DMHC and CDI which, according to the lawsuit, were implemented in order to trap older and sicker consumers who are more likely to need health care services in closed or lower-benefit policies, while only new healthy consumers are offered open, higher-benefit coverage.

“Blue Shield is playing a shell game with our health,” said Deborah Goodwin of Santa Monica California, representing consumers enrolled in CDI-regulated Blue Shield policies in the lawsuit. “I have been fighting Blue Shield to get the care I need for a serious eye condition and now I find out that Blue Shield is planning to close my policy, trap me in an illegal Death Spiral, and force me either to pay increased premiums for my closed coverage or into a bare-bones policy that does not provide the full coverage I need. Consumers like me are helpless and need the court to tell Blue Shield it has to abide by the law.”

Consumer Watchdog and Whatley Kallas, LLC settled a similar class action lawsuit last year targeting Blue Cross of California’s illegal Death Spiral practices. Read more about that lawsuit and settlement at: www.consumerwatchdog.org/legal/court-approves-blue-cross-death-spiral-settlement. Under the terms of that settlement, Blue Cross must both offer consumers in the closed policies access to comparable coverage and limit rate increases in the closed policies if consumers choose to remain enrolled in the older, closed policy.

“We successfully resolved a similar action with Blue Cross last year,” said Edith Kallas of Whatley Kallas, LLC. “We hope that Blue Shield will likewise recognize the significance of these issues to its members and address them on a timely basis.”

Consumer Watchdog is a nonpartisan consumer advocacy organization with offices in Washington, D.C. and Santa Monica, CA. The web is: www.ConsumerWatchdog.org

Among Steve Jobs’ achievements was the re-invention of the press conference. His use of the giant black screen, the slide presentation, the ability to suddenly have a 2-way conversation with Bill Gates, never failed to mesmerize. And let’s not forget his appearance in custom jeans, the black mock turtleneck pullover and the wire rim glasses. He even changed his venue, from a staring roll at the MacWorld Expos to his own staging at the WWDC (the WorldWide Developers Conference). Today, it is, as they say, often imitated, never duplicated.

Job’s trick was to wow the crowd with the visual and then hit them with content. From the iPad to the Mac Air to the OSX operating system and even, in his failing days, the iPad, there were few corporate showmen like Steve Jobs.

It turns out then that those who follow appear to know the music but they just can’t sing the song. CNET and other websites reported on the 2012 event glumly. Jobs’ corporate replacement had bombed the last time by announcing, not the iPhone 5 that everyone anticipated, but the iPhone 4S, a kind of not-quite-there upgrade.

Now, after this year’s June conference, a similar so-so mood has been revealed. Again, no iPhone 5. And, unlike the Job’s shows—nothing else exciting. What were announced were a few changes in the notebook lineup, a promise of a new operating system (iOS6) for the iPhones and iPads, which won’t be available till the fall and the price of the new OSX Mountain Lion system for the desktops. Much that has been anticipated has yet to materialize. For example, what is called Retina display, a high pixel density screen image will be available for just one top end MacBook Pro. Smaller MacBook Pros and the MacBook Air will have to wait.

There has been hope of a cheap, more competitively priced MacBook Air. Say $799. No way. The MacBook Air remains at $999. And of course, the huddled masses parked outside of the Apple Stores are still waiting for Apple TV, whatever that may entail. They continue to wait. There were other smaller items on the introduction list. Facebook will be an automatic part of the iOS 6 systems when it comes out “in the fall.” And that insolent wench SIRI will get a few upgrades and invade the iPad as well, but not until iOS6 and then only for 3rd generation iPad owners.

What is missing, big time is the still awaited iPhone 5. The Chinese, who make them, keep leaking pictures. The Koreans seem to know all about them. But you cannot buy one for love or money. This is the second time the “5” was a no-show at WWDC.

One thing that we will have to adjust to is the new USB 3.0. This is supposed to be a good thing. Your flash drives and other external attachments should work even faster. Of course, you can’t have your cur...

that you will continue to get a warning from your computer when you plug your iPod in. Not only will it constantly warn you that UPC 1 is not as fast as it could be loading your music unit. Now you will also get the same warning with UPS 2. You can avoid the flags by simply buying a new computer that comes with USB 3. One thing I don’t understand was the talk of something called Liquidmetal for the iPhone. It did not show up at WWDC and that's just fine with me. Until I do some more research we will just have to believe that Liquidmetal is some science fiction stuff like Dirk Pitt used to raise the "Titanic."

Still, Jobs should be proud of his iPhone. It continues to be the top selling smartphone, with the Androids right behind it and the Chinese HTC phones holding on. One phone is in trouble—the Blackberry. Its parent company, Research in Motion is failing and critics expect it to be out of business by next year. Just over five years ago they were the premium smartphone company. Then the iPhone and the Android came onto the market and the Blackberry never could keep up. In truth, you can’t blame Steve Jobs for that one. In fact, as I look back I realize that we can’t really blame Apple for letting us down. We’ve come to accept a world in which everything we had five years ago is gone. I recently listed in this column a number of things that quickly disappeared from our daily lives—watches, calendars, vinyl records, phone booths and more. Will it really matter if the next WWDC event again fails to come with world shaking lifestyle changes?

The SBA (Small Business Administration) 504 Loan Program is a powerful economic development loan product that offers businesses the opportunity to own their own buildings, while boosting business growth and job creation. As of Feb. 15, 2012, $50 billion in 504 loans has created over 2 million jobs. This program is a proven success and win-win-win-win for the businesses, the community, participating lenders, and the commercial real estate brokerage and development industries. Certified Development Companies are nonprofit organizations that facilitate the SBA 504 Loan Program, and are certified and regulated by the SBA. Certified Development Companies partner with participating lenders to provide up to 90% financing on an owner-user real estate transaction.

Certified Development Companies can help business owners throughout the entire loan process, and ensure that the process is streamlined, efficient, and painless for the business owner.

How are the 504 loans structured?

The SBA provides the 40% second mortgage of the total project costs, a participating lender provides the purchase of improvements, ground up construction or modernization of existing facilities, the purchase of long-term machinery, or the refinancing of existing conventional debt on a business’s existing property.

What other benefits are there in obtaining an SBA 504 loan?
- Long-Term, Below-Market Fixed Rates; no balloon payments: rates are at historic lows
- Longer Loan Amortizations: amortizations range from 20-30 years
- Less impact on business cash flow: retain liquidity for working capital needs
- Stabilization of long term occupancy costs
- Ability to finance eligible closing and soft costs: retain more liquidity for working capital needs
- SBA fees are financed: retain even more liquidity for working capital needs
- Quick close: 30-45 day closings

The decision to purchase commercial property is one of the biggest decisions a business owner will make. The purchase of a property gives the business owner the flexibility to maximize tax benefits, a vehicle for retirement, and a secure home for their business.

What is the first step in obtaining an SBA 504 pre-qualification?
Contact a local Certified Development Company, your real estate broker, your banking relationship manager, or the SBA department at your business bank.

The SBA 504 Loans: The Best Real Estate Financing Tool for Business Owners

By Jacky Kim

The SBA 504 Loan Program provides first lien mortgages to eligible businesses. Lenders have first lien position, which minimizes their collateral and credit risk. Lenders can entertain larger projects, assist more customers by leveraging lending capacity, and gain new banking relationships.

Why should commercial real estate brokers and developers know about the 504 Loan Program?

An objective of the program is to help business owners make the change from renting to owning their own buildings. Conventional loan products can require up to 50% equity, which can discourage a business owner from purchasing a commercial property. Business owners often rely on their brokers to identify viable financing options.

Other than real estate purchases, how can 504 funds be used?

504 funds can be used for the purchase of improvements, ground up construction or modernization of existing facilities, the purchase of long-term machinery, or the refinancing of existing conventional debt on a business’s existing property.

What collateral is needed to secure the loan?
Typically, the only collateral required is the property being financed.

Who can qualify?
Most for profit small- to medium-sized businesses are eligible, as long as the business occupies 51% or more of the property.

What do you need to obtain a pre-qualification?
The minimal information needed to obtain a pre-qualification are the last two years of personal and business tax returns, a year-to-date financial statement dated within the last 90 days, and a personal financial statement.

What is the first step in obtaining an SBA 504 pre-qualification?
Contact a local Certified Development Company, your real estate broker, your banking relationship manager, or the SBA department at your business bank.

What other benefits are there in obtaining an SBA 504 loan?
- Long-Term, Below-Market Fixed Rates; no balloon payments: rates are at historic lows
- Longer Loan Amortizations: amortizations range from 20-30 years
- Less impact on business cash flow: retain liquidity for working capital needs
- Stabilization of long term occupancy costs
- Ability to finance eligible closing and soft costs: retain more liquidity for working capital needs
- SBA fees are financed: retain even more liquidity for working capital needs
- Quick close: 30-45 day closings

The decision to purchase commercial property is one of the biggest decisions a business owner will make. The purchase of a property gives the business owner the flexibility to maximize tax benefits, a vehicle for retirement, and a secure home for their business.

What is the first step in obtaining an SBA 504 pre-qualification?
Contact a local Certified Development Company, your real estate broker, your banking relationship manager, or the SBA department at your business bank.

Six Ways to Motivate Top Talent in De-Motivating Times

By Brad Remillard

To retain your top talent it is absolutely critical to ensure they are motivated. In difficult times this is often not high on the priority list of managers or CEOs. Most people are working long hours and doing the job of two people, stress is at an all time high, fear of layoffs is a reality, salaries are frozen, pay cuts have been implement- ed and forget about any bonus. For many companies this is their current culture.

So how do you motivate your top talent to achieve the company’s goals?

How do you keep them from contacting recruiters?

How do you keep them passionate about coming to work?

How do you keep them engaged day after day?

The answer to all of these is “culture.” Even in difficult times top talent, by definition, will always rise to the occasion. They will always strive to be the best. If they don’t, they aren’t top talent. However, even top talent can burn out, get frustrated, not see the light at the end of the tunnel or wonder if they are really contributing.

It is the role of all CEOs and managers to ensure these things don’t happen. There seems to be a consistent theme as to what great managers do in difficult times to hold on to and even attract top talent.

The following are six areas managers must focus on to ensure they keep their top talent motivated:

1) Companies must have a performance based culture.

Even in difficult times there must be clearly defined goals for the company. These goals must cascade down to your top talent. They must have quantifi- able objectives that moti- vate them, so when reached, they feel a sense of accom- plishment. Providing specific time based goals with achievable results clarifies exactly what is expected of your peo- ple. Your best talent will embrace the goals and not stop until they reach the goal. Employee engagement is criti- cal to retaining your best people.

2) Dysfunctional culture.

This is probably the biggest reason top talent gets nervous and begins to think outside your company. Do you know your company’s culture? Can you define it? Will your execu- tive staff define it the same way? Will the in-the-trench worker bees define it the same way? If not, this is the time to begin working on it.

Then once the culture is well defined, do the behaviors match the culture? Do man- agers from the CEO on down demonstrate this culture day- to-day in how to deal with the employees, customers and ven- dors? You can’t claim to have a culture of teamwork if the manager’s idea of teamwork is, “As long as we do things my way, without any questions, you can be on my team.”

3) Respect and apprecia- tion. This is probably the least expensive and least used method to motivate and retain top talent. Small things can make a big difference with top talent. Respecting their contri- butions, listening to them, including them in the decision- making process, asking for their thoughts and ideas all make them feel respected and appreciated. Consider building a culture that respects your top talent so they feel appreciated. Top talent does not want to be taken for granted.

4) Consistent feedback.

This could be considered a sub- set of number three, but more formal. This includes regular and structured 1-on-1 feedback sessions. Not standing in the hallway conversations, but actually sitting down and focusing on them. Giving them feedback, encouraging them, continued on page 33

Girls Only...

The ever-loved Tiffany’s to small shops selling beautiful estate jewel- ery such as Viau Estate Jewelry. We had a particularly fun time in one fine jewelry store trying on a 3.1 emerald cut diamond ring that retails for $50,000. And all being dog lovers, we couldn’t help but fall in love with Diggidy Dog, a dog and cat boutique that offers a colossal selection of collars, leases, outfits and a canine/feline bakery showcasing a delicacy of treats that looked too good to be made with dehydrat- ed liver meal. We even found a consignment store filled with high-end designer brands that was having a 40% sale (a favorite of one of my besties). But my favorite store was Ajne, the organ- ic perfumery that supplied the essential oils that I had just select- ed for my facial treatment.

One of my best friends could smell the alluring scent of Ajne before we even caught sight of the storefront sign. It wasn’t an overpowering scent but one that pulsed us in like a bee drawn to flowers. We met Jane Hendler and her husband and co-owner, Rex Rombach, who both delighted us with their knowledge and expertise in blending essential oils. Every Ajne product is grown, distilled and hand blended at their organic farm, showroom or by their select group of growers. We each had our own custom scent created—a process involving questionnaires and numerous sniff tests. My blend was a unique combination of citrus and vanilla oils which Jane described as lemon frosting. It is delightful and all my own. I hope she doesn’t share it with her celebrity clientele which includes Kate Beckinsale, Molly Sims, Debra Messing and Jessica Biel. If Piers Brosnan or Rob Lowe want to wear it, I suppose it would be okay if they ask me in person first. Ajne also created a line “Furfume” for dogs. My best friend bought Tro DaBone for her yellow lab in the hope that the essential oil blend will provide a calming effect on her frisky canine friend. If it doesn’t work, she likes the scent so much that she said she can wear it herself. The Ajne showroom is located on Mission Street (between Ocean and Seventh Avenue), but they also have a web- site that I will be visiting (you can order small samples online to test if unable to visit the showroom).

Between spa treatments, shopping and customizing fragrances, we also enjoyed the majestic views of Monterey and the surrounding area. Driving part of the 17-mile drive (the scenic road through Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach on the Monterey Peninsula) we made our way to the fire pits at Roy’s Restaurant in Pebble Beach. It took us some time to find the location as Lola, our GPS navigator, was even confused and let us down. But we finally arrived and had plenty of time to sip our chilled Chardonnay and enjoy watching the sun sink into the Pacific. Another great location to enjoy the view is the Hyatt Carmel Highlands. The hotel is perched on the cliff and offers stunning views of the Big Sur coastline. We had the most scrumptious lunch of abalone, a delicacy prepared by Executive Chef Matt Bolton, as we drank in the views of the coastline. The hotel would be a special treat if staying with...

SBA Lenders Serving the Inland Empire

Snapshot of the Commercial and Industrial Real Estate Markets in The High Desert

By Ronald J. Barbieri, Ph.D. and CPA

Office Market

As of the end of 2011, the High Desert had almost 5.5 million SF of office space. The net absorption for 2011 was negative, 8,900 SF compared to the 135,000 SF absorbed in 2010. The vacancy level at the end of last year was 347,000 SF or 6.4% of the total inventory. The increase in the vacancy rate was mostly due to the delivery of 62,000 SF of office space in the second half of last year. Most of the increase in office space demand over the last two years continues on page 27.
Perhaps no activity in starting up a new businesses or in laying plans for growth of an existing business will have as much impact on your prospects for success over the long run than ensuring adequate financing.

How do you go about financing your enterprise? The U.S. Small Business Administration recommends developing a proposal, including a business plan, and paying a visit to a commercial lender with whom you’ve done business in the past, a place where you are a known quantity. If that lender will make a loan to finance your proposal, then you don’t need the SBA.

But if that lender declines, or tells you that it can make the loan only if you can line up a guarantor, then the SBA’s 7(a) loan program may be the answer for you.

The 7(a) program is the most basic type of loan the SBA offers to small businesses. In fact, to be precise, it is not a loan per se, but a guaranty that the SBA provides participant lenders, thus making it easier for them to make small business loans they otherwise wouldn’t touch.

Under the concept, businesses apply to a commercial lender for a loan. The lender, using its own criteria, decides whether to make the loan on its own or whether the application has some weaknesses which would call for an SBA guaranty. Most often, the weakness is a problem with insufficient collateral, or the inability to afford repayments for the shorter term loans that lenders prefer. If the lender decides that it would rather not take the risk alone, it turns to an SBA 7(a) loan guaranty.

The SBA’s guaranty assures the lender that if the borrower does not repay the loan, the federal government will reimburse the lender, up to the percentage guaranteed by the SBA. All businesses that are considered for financing under SBA’s 7(a) loan program must meet SBA size standards, be-for-profit, not already have the internal resources (business or personal) to provide the financing, and be able to demonstrate sufficient cash flow to meet all of its monthly obligations, plus a monthly loan payment.

Remember, the SBA guarantees the loan, but the borrowers are obligated for the full amount due. Also, you have to be of good character and be able to provide a reasonable collateral or owner participation.

Most small business don’t need a whole lot of money to start or to expand, but they do need good repayment conditions, namely, longer terms and lower interest rates. The 7(a) loan program provides both.

The 7(a) loan program has a maximum loan amount of $5 million with a guaranty of 75 percent. The lower the amount you need, the higher the guaranty can go, up to 85 percent on loans of $150,000 or less.

The SBA encourages longer terms, but actual loan maturities are based on the purpose of the loan and the useful life of the assets financed. In general, though, 7(a) loan maturities can go from seven years for working capital, to a maximum of 25 years for land and buildings, or debt refinancing.

Finally, interest rates are negotiated between the borrower and the lender. However, since interest rates can be an important factor in the repayment ability of borrowers, the SBA has established limits that vary according to the size and maturity of the loan.

LaSalle Physician-Founder Honored by CDC Dr. Albert Arteaga is California’s First-Ever CDC Childhood Immunization Champion

Dr. Albert Arteaga, president and founder of LaSalle Medical Associates, is California’s first-ever CDC Childhood Immunization Champion and one of only 39 across the country receiving the prestigious honor.

The award given by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recognizes advocates who work to make sure children are protected by immunizations. Nominations for the award are open to one individual from each state. Already, LaSalle’s clinics boast a 91 percent influenza immunization coverage rate among its staff and medical associates, which serves as an example for its patients.

“We are seeing the results of three years of work coming to fruition,” says Arteaga on his honor as a CDC Immunization Champion. “To me, as a pediatrician, this is like the good housekeeping seal of approval. On an emotional level, it’s like winning the battle of Cinco de Mayo, Bunker Hill and the World Cup all at the last minute.”

In recent years, Dr. Arteaga and his staff have increased childhood immunizations rates among their patients. Highlighting this success is a pilot project created a few years ago in which each LaSalle clinic staff collected, sorted and organized data identifying pediatric patients in need of updates to their childhood immunization charts. Parents of those children were called and asked to bring them in for their immunizations.

“Friendly reminders can only go so far, which is a reason we needed a better approach to reach parents. The CDC recognition is a reflection of our work to reach parents,” Dr. Arteaga says. “From a pediatric standpoint, this honor has major impact because unlike, let’s say surgeons whose mark of excellence is based on surgery outcomes, a pediatrician’s performance is marked by how much we do in pediatrics. Ensuring our patients timely immunizations is a big component of our jobs and...”

A great addition to our senior leadership team,” stated Chris Myers, president and CEO.

Plourde began his banking career at City National Bank in 1990 with a focus on commercial and middle-market business banking. In 1994, David was hired by 1st Business Bank as a relationship manager and was promoted to senior vice president and team leader and eventually regional vice president during his 12 years with the bank. In 2006, David assisted in the formation of 1st Enterprise Bank as a senior vice president and was later promoted to executive vice president and head of commercial banking.

Security Bank of California’s James A. Robinson Honored by Cal State San Bernardino

Security Bank of California Chairman and CEO James A. Robinson has been named the Arrowhead Distinguished Executive Officer for 2012 by California State University, San Bernardino’s College of Business and Administration.

“James Robinson continues to make a difference within the community served by Security Bank,” said Lawrence Rose, dean of the college. “His career path is one which we would encourage our students to follow—personally and professionally.”

Security First National Bank later became Security Pacific National Bank and was acquired by Bank of America in 1992. During his 31-year tenure there, Robinson worked his way up the executive ranks to executive vice president in charge of commercial and agriculture lending from Sacramento to El Centro. In 1992 he joined Riverside National Bank as president and chief executive officer, which later was acquired by City National Bank.

In 2005 he led a group of investors to establish Security Bank of California as a community business bank. The bank has grown to 65 employees at five locations. Security Bank, which has a 5-star Bauer rating, is the 105th largest bank in California and was recognized by the Findley Companies as a Premier Performing Bank for 2011.

Despite its relatively small size, Security Bank has made a difference in Inland area communities. The bank has been a donor to CSUSB and its business college—primarily through the college’s Business Alliance. Robinson made a pledge in 2008 to establish a scholarship endowment for business and public administration students.

Robinson and his wife, Barbara, who is also a banker, were honored in 1999 as fellows by the A. Gary Anderson Graduate School of Management at UC Riverside.

Pacific Premier... An aggregate of 504,837 shares were repurchased under that program.

Steven R. Gardner, president and chief executive officer stated, “We believe that the current market price of the Company’s stock does not accurately reflect our franchise value. Our strong capital levels and solid operating results provide us the flexibility to repurchase shares, which is an efficient way to deploy capital, as the current share price is at a discount to tangible book value.”

Under the stock repurchase program, shares of common stock may be repurchased by the Company from time to time in open market transactions or in privately negotiated transactions as permitted under applicable rules and regulations. Repurchases may be conducted, suspended, or terminated at any time without notice. The extent to which the Company repurchases its shares and the timing of such repurchases will depend upon market conditions and other considerations as may be considered in the Company’s sole discretion.

Note: Pacific Premier Bank provides business and consumer banking products to customers in Palm Desert, Palm Springs and San Bernardino.

LaSalle... a mark of excellence.” The CDC Childhood Immunization Champion Award is given jointly by the CDC and the CDC Foundation. It is given annually to individuals who are doing an exemplary job or going above and beyond to promote or foster childhood immunizations in their communities.

Individuals were selected for the honor based on the following criteria:

• Has provided community leadership on immunization issues and collaborated with others to build support for and increase immunization rates of infants and young children.
• Has used creative and/or innovative strategies to promote infant and young child immunization and meet unique immunization challenges within their community, state or region, including, for example, reaching hard-to-reach or under-immunized populations.
• Has been a visible immunization champion in a community and/or medical system by acting as a spokesperson, advocate, and/or educator.
• Has been an advocate for immunization policy advancements.

This year’s nominations were submitted directly to state immunization programs. Managers of those programs reviewed and evaluated nominees and then made a recommendation to the CDC.

In his nomination letter, Dr. Arteaga’s accomplishments noted several community collaborations and outreach efforts to build support for increasing childhood vaccination rates as well as promoting vaccines for various common communicable viruses, such as the seasonal flu. An example is a 2011 partnership with the Inland Empire African American Chamber of Commerce, where Dr. Arteaga co-sponsored a series of Public Service Announcements (PSA) on local radio stations promoting the flu vaccine. Messages were delivered in English and in Spanish.

In addition, and as a member of the Inland Empire Health Plan (IEHP) Provider Advisory Council, Dr. Arteaga promotes utilizing provider reimbursements as an incentive to increase immunization rates of its members through the Healthy Families Program. Dr. Arteaga is also diligent in clarifying or dispelling common misinformation associated with childhood

Governor’s tax initiative up to the top of the ballot even though the Governor’s initiative qualified tenth. This would separate the Governor’s tax initiative from competing tax proposals. In addition, if the Governor’s tax initiative fails, the trigger cuts - 99 percent of which are aimed at education - would still be pulled, even if the other major tax increase initiative which sends money directly to schools passes.

• Makes it easier for dangerous felons to be let out of jail early: The Governor’s public safety realignment scheme is worsened by reducing parole accountability. In addition, the majority-vote budget paves the way for early release by ending the practice of bail monitoring. Many female inmates will likely be granted early release and felons caught carrying a hidden explosive device will no longer serve their sentence in state prison. The proposal also shortchanges public safety realignment funding for non-urban counties, in order to give more money to urban areas. Instead of allocating funding based on the costs to house state inmates in county jails, this bill will prioritize funding for counties that focus on diversion programs. Sheriffs in the counties that lose funding will have no choice but to grant early release.

• Protects public employee unions: The proposal requires public employees do work that is currently being done by private employees including preventing the University of California from contracting out with private firms and rejects Governor Brown’s pension reform plan.

• Relies on Passage of an $8.5 billion tax increase would hurt small businesses: The Democrat budget relies on voter approval of an $8.5 billion tax increase that is far from certain. It would raise California’s highest personal income tax rate by up to 30%, which if enacted would be 21% higher than the next nearest state, raising concerns about California’s ability to compete for high-paying jobs. Two-thirds of businesses—more than 2.7 million small business owners—file their taxes under the personal income tax system, and could be affected by this tax hike.

Anthony, Cal State San Bernardino President Al Karnig and others commemorated the agreement between the publication and campus Friday during a luncheon at New York Grill restaurant.

“Everyone called me to say thank you, but I’m not saying a joke, ‘I’m working in Ontario,’ they thought it was very cold and very far away and they wondered how you could travel back and forth to Canada,” he told the day’s gathering.

Anthony also regaled his guests with tales of internship at the New York Daily Mirror under famed columnist Walter Winchell, and peppered friends and family with jokes and anecdotes accumulated over decades. The publisher’s speech seemed like a retirement speech, but it was not.

Anthony, who will turn 73 in July, said in an interview that he will reduce his role at the Business Journal as he prepares for a possible kidney transplant, but has no intention of quitting.

“I can assure you I have no intention of retiring. Everyone I know who has retired has died within three years. I plan to drop dead on the job,” he said. “I want to continue to work and have fun and enjoy people,” he said.

is being put into the selection of board members, as these are the individuals who will decide what happens to former agency assets (though decisions can be appealed to the State Department of Finance and/or State Controller’s Office). Oversight board members are appointed by county board of supervisors (two), the city mayor (one), the largest special district by property tax share within the jurisdiction of the former agency (one), county superintendent of education (one), Chancellor of the California Community Colleges (one), and one member representing employees of the former agency.

• Successor Agencies have adopted their Enforceable Obligation Payment Schedules (EOPS) in January 2012. Audits and reviews of former agency transactions are now underway by the Department of Finance and the county auditor-controllers to scrutinize the EOPS and Recognized Obligation Payment Schedules (ROPS) and importantly, to set up the liquidation of former agency assets, including notes and properties.

Will Properties Become Available? If So, When?

Properties will become available. Timing is unclear. The Successor Agency EOPS must be ratified by the county auditor-controller, State Controller’s Office, and Department of Finance. The primary assets referenced on EOPS require ongoing payments (e.g. bond payments). Concurrently, real estate assets are being placed on lists by Successor Agencies to be disposed of expeditiously and in a manner aimed at maximizing value subject to the direction of the Oversight Boards as outlined in AB1X 26. Successor Agencies are currently evaluating preferred methods of disposition, initiating assessments of value, and formulating strategies to be recommended to Oversight Boards, once they are formed.

Can Cities Accomplish Economic Development Without Tax Increment Financing (TIF)?

Terminating redevelopment essentially eliminated TIF in California. As a result cities have lost their primary leveragable revenue source for economic development projects. California is now one of only two states in the nation without some form of this valuable financing instrument. TIF enables public agencies cities to freeze property and other tax revenues, such that additional increment can become available to match or enhance private sector equity/debt investment. Without this tool, California cities are limited in ways to assist public-private projects and pay for infrastructure.

New & Untried Economic Development Tools

In the next year, there will be a prevalent debate about which tools should be authorized as a replacement for TIF. Most alternatives will involve the reintroduction of tax-increment at some level:

• Infrastructure Financing Districts (IFD), which divert property tax revenues for public infrastructure improvement projects (highways, transit, water, sewer, parks, etc.). The current IFD statute requires approval by all effected taxing authorities and a vote by all constituent parties. As such, the process is too cumbersome and not workable.

• Community-Based Economic Development Authorities Some charter cities have had such authorities in place, such as the City of Placentia (a Komsont client), where the Industrial Commercial Development Authority was established in 1982. The City of Alhambra is a charter city that is leading the way by adopting an economic development ordinance that empowers the City to acquire or lease property, provide for site preparation work, accept financial assistance from public and private sources, provide financial assistance to projects, issue years was from the expansion by local government and the medical profession. There was 25,000 SF of office in Apple Valley under construction as of the end of 2011. The new construction is targeted for medical users. While the office space is only slightly oversupplied, there has not been any additional demand for space in the High Desert. This has resulted in a slight decline in rental rates over the last year.

Retail Market

There was 15.6 million SF of retail space in the High Desert of which 1,352,000 SF was vacant at the end of 2011. This represents a vacancy rate of 8.7%. The High Desert experienced a negative net absorption of 67,000 SF in 2011, compared to a positive 262,000 SF in 2010. Only 6,900 SF was delivered in the second half of that year. Macy’s has announced that they would be moving into a vacant 70,000 SF former department store in the Victor Valley Mall and adding an additional 30,000 SF to the structure. However, this will not be reflected in the absorption figures until early 2013. Three super Wal-Marts in Victorville, Hesperia and Apple Valley are under construction and are expected to be completed this year.

Industrial Market

There was 20.4 million SF of industrial space in the High Desert at the end of 2011. The vacancy rate was 6.1% or 1,241,000 SF. The net absorption in 2011 was 978,000 SF, which was approximately the same the prior year. There is 49,600 SF under construction. Most of the absorption was in the large boxes. Substantial warehousing and distribution as well as manufacturing companies counted for the increase in demand. The cities of... continued on page 38
Ann is a frustrated business owner who has been trying to hire a marketing manager for the last eight months. Her last attempt was disastrous: over $6,200 spent on recruitment ad placements and 63 resumes screened. After 27 interviews in one week, four selected applicants were met for a second meeting. Not one of these finalists was offered the job.

What went wrong and why was Ann so upset? Simply stated, the company had been attracting the WRONG people! An analysis of the job placement ad revealed too much emphasis on job-related hard skills and experience, as well as a strong promise of an attractive salary. But it was lacking a clear description of vital job-related soft skills needed to excel on the job and in Ann’s company environment. Most importantly, the ad was “selling” the wrong benefits to the wrong people—no clear mention of the most important selection criteria top players are looking for!

If you want to attract top players, you need to understand that your challenge is not to find them, but to attract them! Hiring is like marketing—if you do not know what top players are looking for, they will never show up. You have thousands of competitors when it comes to attracting the best, knowing that the war for talent is raging and that every business like yours is willing to over-pay, compromise and sacrifice in order to attract top players.

The four selection criteria for top players

You can always evaluate an applicant against four general levels of motivation in finding a job. The first two criteria are quite logical and your margin of negotiation is rather limited. The last two criteria are much more irrational, more emotional and have proven to be so much more important to top players.

The good side of it is: you have ample room to compete on these last two. As a matter of fact, the four criteria below are presented in increasing sequence of importance:

1. Nature of the job. Top players look at doing what they like to do. No matter how tough the job market conditions might be, you want to detect and attract those who would not compromise too much on their life-long aspirations. Communicate clearly in your ad that you are looking only for those who are passionate about what they do. Always give priority to those applicants who demonstrate a good persistence in their professional orientation.

With young applicants, it is important to detect why they decided to take a specific academic orientation. Were they purpose-driven or merely going through school without any specific future intention? Watch out for the purposeless applicants who mostly look for a job “to make a living.”

2. Salary and other compensations. Qualified applicants know how much they are worth. Even if the current job market is a “buyer’s market,” make sure you offer your selected players an attractive package which will motivate them to work for long-term rewards.

But if you really want to attract top players, offer performance-based rewards, such as bonuses or profit sharing. Reduce the fixed part of the salary and provide larger performance-based rewards which drive personal and organization-al efficiency—and also reward commitment to the future.

Watch out for the skilled or experienced applicants who try to sell you their talent at a higher fixed salary with no desire for performance-related rewards. The coming years will be bright for you and your business, provided you are able to surround yourself with able, group-minded and future-driven collaborators!

3. Working environment. While your employees will say that they want a new job for better pay, reality might be different. People do not leave their company, they leave their boss. According to recent studies, nearly three out of five employees feel that their bosses frequently fail to honor their promises and 37% say they do not give credit when due. Another 23% said their supervisors blame others to cover up mistakes or minimize embarrassment. Most employees leave because of a difficult relationship with a supervisor rather than dissatisfaction with their salary. Over 77% of them find a new job with no higher pay.

Be aware that top players will first judge your company through the same irrational criteria as any potential customer would with a supplier. The recruiter’s attitude, employees’ friendliness, the smile on the receptionist’s face, etc. are factors which will attract—or scare away good applicants. So be clear in your message: you will hire only someone who wants to have fun on the job, enjoy a great team work and contribute to others as much as he/she will be contributed to.

4. Challenges & future. Many applicants primarily search for job security. Top players don’t care about it. They mostly want to face challenges and meet their potential. They are future-oriented and they want to prove that “they can do it.” They instantly respond to those “mission impossible” types of assignments. They buy a bright future to which they feel they can contribute. Being part of a future-oriented team is a major reward by itself; financial reward comes on top of it.

The key factor is: does the applicant want to take an active role in the expansion of your business? Is he/she responding positively to your challenges? Many employers tend to be too nice and too promising during the hiring process. The truth is: scare your applicants by being clear and totally transparent about the current challenges or difficulties. Then, and only then, show them the future.

Top players will love it. Other applicants will naturally shy away, which is exactly what you want! If you don’t present challenges first, you will indeed attract the wrong prospects for the job. Job security should be the reward of creating and contributing to a bright future, not a God-given right that you, the employer, must assume for yourself with able, group-oriented collaborators.

Industrial Firms... Excess Vacant space in the Inland Empire; but the industrial agents in the Los Angeles Basin are now reporting Excess Demand (no vacancy) for buildings of 500,000 SF and larger. Most of the vacancy is in the medium and smaller size buildings often occupied by small businesses that have not experienced much growth since the Great Recession.

Industrial agents are now suggesting there will be a new wave of construction for buildings larger than 500,000 square feet. When this is coupled with the fact there are only four sites in the Los Angeles Basin that can accommodate a building greater than 800,000 SF, it is logical to conclude it will not be long before the High Desert will be able to successfully compete for the larger warehousing and distribution tenants. A higher level of industrial development will occur in the High Desert, though the timing is uncertain, and unfortunately very much a function of public policy that will be determined in Washington and in Sacramento, California.

In spite of all the political and economic uncertainty, the big box industrial market in the High Desert is likely to add one or more users each year for the next few years before the increase in demand accelerates in the second half of this decade. This will probably be the case because large industrial users will continue to relocate from Los Angeles County to the Inland Empire in order to build larger, more efficient facilities. As the availability of large industrial sites in the Inland Empire diminishes, those seeking larger sites will have no choice but to locate in the area of Banning or in the High Desert. Only an economic depression would defer this from happening.

No More... debt, and other essential economic development activities. Other charter and general law cities in California must decide whether to pursue similar actions. Ideally incorporated into any such model would be broadened surplus property disposition, ability of general law cities to create TIF-based reimbursement agreements, and capacity for cities to sell property below market to encourage private investment and job creation.

Montclair in Montclair. Both garden-style communities were built in the mid-1980s and feature one- and two-bedroom apartments, resort-style swimming pools and clubhouses. Collectively the assets are 95 percent occupied. Both assets fit perfectly into Triumph’s current strategy of acquiring both market rate and senior living multifamily assets at today’s attractive pricing and adding value through strategic common area and interior improvements, according to Noah Hochman, vice president acquisitions and dispositions.

We’ve been active in the multifamily market the past 18 months spending nearly $40 million on well-located properties in Los Angeles, Ventura, San Bernardino, Orange and San Diego Counties, said Hochman, Triumph’s vice president of acquisitions and dispositions. Both demographic and economic trends are creating a demand for rental housing, and with supply constrained in many parts of Southern California, we feel it is a very good time to buy.

Triumph Management Company is involved in acquisitions, property rehabilitation, property management, and new development with a focus on the Southern California market.

SOCAL GROCERY-ANCHORED CENTERS POPULAR WITH INVESTORS

Here’s an update on the recent sale of a SoCal, grocery-anchored shopping center in Palm Desert.

The Marketplace @ Palm Desert contains 96.5k square feet and is located on 12.4 acres at 78206 Varner Road in Palm Desert. Situated at the northeast corner of Washington Street and Varner Road, directly adjacent to the popular Sun City retirement community, the property is anchored by Stater Bros and Walgreens. Other notable tenants located at the shopping center include True Value Hardware, El Paseo Bank, Mario’s Italian Café, Postal Annex.

The property, which has immediate access to the I-10 Freeway, was 90% occupied at the time of sale and included two undeveloped pads. The sale price was $22.85 million. The seller was The Rinker Company of Newport Beach, while the buyer was Marketplace LP of Orange. Edward B. Hanley of Hanley Investment Group represented both parties in the deal.

“The Marketplace at Palm Desert was sought after by a multitude of investors due to its grocery and drug store anchored component in addition to the potential upside the property offered with leasing the remaining 10% of vacancy and two undeveloped pads,” said Hanley. “We are seeing investment sales activity increase in the Coachella Valley as investors take advantage of low interest rates and improving leasing conditions.”

Asian Grocer Leases 35k Square Feet of Temecula Retail Space

Asian grocer 88 Seafood Supermarket has leased 35k square feet of retail space at Tower Plaza Shopping Center in the Riverside County city of Temecula. The value of the 10-year lease was not disclosed. Built in 1969 and remodeled in 1997, Tower Plaza Shopping Center contains 134k square feet of retail space and is located at the northwest corner of Rancho California Road and Ynez Road. Other retailers at the center include UltraStar Cinemas, Big Lots, Michaels, Chili’s and Bank of America.

The space 88 Seafood has leased was previously occupied by Orchards (a regional grocer) and was originally a Von’s Supermarket. 88 Seafood Supermarket will begin reconfiguring and rebuilding the space in order to open the new store at Tower Plaza during the fourth quarter of 2012. Argent Retail Advisors’ founder Terry Bortnick represented the property owner in the transaction. Speaking about the transaction, Bortnick said, “Because Tower Plaza sits along I-15 in a regional location and because all the “traditional” Anglo-oriented grocers have locations serving the surrounding neighborhoods, we wanted to bring in a grocer that would draw from beyond Temecula and attract customers from the greater South Riverside County and North County San Diego trade areas.”

He added that, “The owners selected 88 Seafood not only because it is the only Asian-oriented supermarket in the region, but also because they like the way they operate their stores and their ability to complement the other tenants in the center.”

He noted that given the “mainstream” nature of traditional grocers’ merchandising offerings, the new lease with 88 Seafood Supermarket should provide a merchandising mix that is much more exciting to the consumers in the center.

Economic Development—A New Wave is Coming

As the burden of redevelopment dissolution and the roles and responsibilities of the various successor entities become clear, it is also becoming evident that there is significant room for differentiation in how cities cope and position themselves for future economic development efforts. Cities should be assertive in their pursuit of asset strategies, starting with full consideration of an upgraded and updated economic development strategy. Now, more than ever, local governments will need to be creative in their exploration and implementation of economic incentives and public financing tools for economic development projects. While redevelopment was the most widely used revenue-financing tool, it was in fact just one tool in the toolbox at the disposal of California cities.
Industrial Firms Continued to Absorb Space in the Inland Empire at a Very High Rate in 2011
By Ronald J. Barbieri, Ph.D., CPA

One of the primary economic drivers of the Inland Empire and therefore the High Desert is the expansion of warehousing and distribution facilities as well as manufacturing operations in the Inland Empire. Such industrial operations provide Base Employment for the region which, in turn generates Secondary Employment in other economic sectors of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties. Over 60,000 residents of the High Desert commute to the Los Angeles Basin for work. This represents approximately half the workforce of the High Desert. Hence, an increase in the demand for industrial space in the Inland Empire has a positive indirect effect on the High Desert.

Also, the absorption of industrial space in the Inland Empire would further reduce the limited supply of industrial land in the Los Angeles Basin. A study by John Husing dated August 2008 determined there were only 4,860 acres of land in the Los Angeles Basin portion of the Inland Empire that could be developed for industrial use. This number could be significantly reduced over the next few years, thereby reducing the number of sites that are rail served or can accommodate the development of large industrial buildings. It will not be long before the very large industrial tenants or firms that require rail will have to locate in the High Desert or in the area along the I-10 Freeway in Banning, California; The migration of more industrial firms to the High Desert would create more Base Employment in the area, which in turn could generate additional Secondary Employment. This would lead to lower unemployment rates in the greater Victor Valley area.

There is 499 million Square Feet (SF) of industrial space in the Inland Empire. This is equivalent to half the inventory of industrial space in the greater Chicago area. Costar defines 482 million SF as Warehousing/Industrial space. The remaining 17 million SF is in smaller Industrial Flex space. The High Desert currently accounts for slightly over 4% of the total inventory; but in the intermediate term and beyond it is expected to be the primary expansion area for industrial development in the region. Southern California is home to almost 2.0 billion SF of industrial space. Much of the increased demand for industrial space in the Inland Empire is attributed to firms relocating out of Los Angeles County in search of industrial sites on which to build larger, more efficient facilities. The vacancy rate for Warehousing/Industrial space in the Inland Empire has increased from 5.2% at the end of 2004 to 12.2% by the end of 2009. The increase in vacancy was the result of overbuilding rather than a decline in industrial demand. The vacancy rate at the end of the Fourth Quarter 2011 declined to 7.5%. Very little inventory was added in 2010 and 2011; but there was a substantial absorption of large box industrial space during that two year period. If the vacancy rate declined to 5%, the industrial market in the Inland Empire would be in equilibrium. That could occur by 2013 if the developers do not build an excessive amount of inventory that is not preleased. Developers are beginning to build spec large box industrial space in the Los Angeles Basin.

There are a limited number of sites in the Los Angeles Basin that can accommodate 400,000 SF. Net Absorption in the Inland Empire was a positive 12.1 million SF in 2010 and 15.0 million SF in 2011. A portion of the increase in Net Absorption was caused by the acceleration of demand due to relatively low rents compared to prior years.

The increase in industrial demand in the Inland Empire in the last two years is substantial, especially in light of the slow economic recovery in both the U.S. and California. In fact the Inland Empire only experienced one year of negative industrial absorption during the last recession.

From 2005 through 2008 an average of 26.1 million SF of Warehousing/Industrial space was delivered annually in the Inland Empire. Deliveries declined to 7.0 million SF in 2009. Only 1.7 million SF was delivered in 2010; while 3.8 million SF was completed in 2011. The level of new construction has definitely increased in the last year. This limited level of construction coupled with the unanticipated increase in industrial absorption has resulted in the elimination of half of the Excess Vacancy in the market place.

The vacancy level was 22.1 million SF at the end of 2005. It peaked at 57.9 million SF by the end of 2009. As of the end of 2011 it had declined to 36.5 million SF. There is still an estimated 15 million SF of Prisoners by 25% and for juveniles by 78%. As a result of this agreement, the average 11 minute phone call to a family member outside the immediate area was to be just over $5 dollars.

Despite a nation-wide movement by such groups as Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE), the Center for Constitutional Rights and others who have filed lawsuits against this practice, fierce opposition from prison officials and telephone companies, it remains to be seen whether and to what extent these practices will continue. The “prison telephone monopolies remain firmly in place and ineffectively regulated throughout large parts of the country.”

Corporate Interests: The Role of ALEC

A little know fact about the prison industrial complex is an organization known as the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC). The mere existence of this organization demonstrates the classic connections between politics, economics and the criminal justice system. The membership consists of state legislators, private corporation executives and criminal justice officials. More than one-third of state lawmakers in the country (2,400) belong and they are mostly Republicans and conservative Democrats. They also get involved in school vouchers. It was started in 1973 by Paul Weyrich (who also co-founded the conservative Heritage Foundation and the National Establishment). The organization known as the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) is a “Criminal Justice Task Force.” Among the duties of this group is to write “model bills” on crime and punishment. Among such members include “truth in sentencing” bills, which passed in 25 states. One member boasted that in 1995 alone they introduced 199 bills, including “truth in sentencing” bills, which passed in 25 states. Tommy Thompson, former Wisconsin governor and previous head of Health and Human Services in the Bush Administration, was once a member of ALEC. He was recently quoted as saying that “I always loved going to these meetings because I always found new ideas. Then I’d take them back to Wisconsin, disguise them a little bit, and declare that ‘It’s mine.’”

The web site of ALEC is an educational experience in itself. It proudly lists some of the bills it has been involved in getting passed, plus indicates some very important keynote speakers during the past three annual meetings. Among the notables giving speeches include Attorney General John Ashcroft, Secretary of Health and Human Services Tommy Thompson, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Mel Martinez, president and CEO of American Home Products Robert Essner, chairman and CEO of Pfizer, Hank McKinnell, Florida Governor Jeb Bush, Secretary of Labor Elaine Chao and ultra conservative syndicated columnist Cal Thomas.

In addition to a board of directors (consisting of several members of various state legislatures, mostly Republicans), they have a Private Enterprise Board. The latter group includes representatives of some of the largest corporations in America, such as Coors, AT&T, UPS, Wal-Mart, ExxonMobil, Coca-Cola, Johnson & Johnson, Bayer and State Farm, among others. It is interesting to note that the current chairman is Jerry Watson of the American Bail Coalition which, according to their web site, is: “Dedicated to the long term growth and continuation of the surety bail bond industry.”

The web site also states the following:

America’s premier underwriters of criminal court appearance bonds; Allegheny Casualty Company, American Surety Company, Associated Bond and Insurance Agency, International Fidelity Insurance Company and Underwriters Surety, Inc. (the “Founders”) have formed a new national organization, primarily to perform a two-pronged task to educate local government on the benefits of commercial bail bonding and to advance the interests of the Founders’ many retail agents.

This organization also puts together papers and policy statements on a wide variety of issues reflecting conservative ideas, including one about the “myth of global warming.” Bill Berkowitz, who carefully follows conservative trends, has noted that ALEC sponsored more than 3,100 pieces of legislation between 1999 and 2000, with more than 400 of these bills passing. Within ALEC there is a “Criminal Justice Task Force.” Among the duties of this group is to write “model bills” on crime and punishment. Among such “model bills” they helped draft include “mandatory minimum sentences,” “Three Strikes” laws, “truth in sentencing” and the like. One member boasted that in 1995 alone they introduced 199 bills, including “truth in sentencing” bills, which passed in 25 states.

The web site also states that the current chairman is Jerry Watson of the American Bail Coalition which, according to their web site, is: “Dedicated to the long term growth and continuation of the surety bail bond industry.”

The California Correctional Peace Officer’s Association

California is a good example of union influence. During the 1990s and early 2000s, the California Correctional Peace Officers Association (CCPOA) became a political force in that state. The union was begun in the 1950s when a prison guard was upset about working conditions, wages and...

listening to what their needs are (even if you can’t meet them, just listening), taking an interest in their career and building a shared bond. This makes them feel their manager cares about them as a person, not just an employee.

5) Praise. You may have experienced a manager with this philosophy: “That is what they get paid for. Why should I thank them? They should thank me for having a job.” How did you like it? Compare that to a manager with this philosophy: “Thanks, I know it is just part of your job, but I appreciate the pride you take in your work. It helps everyone in the department.” How did you like that?

A little praise goes a long way to motivate people. In difficult times when people are doing more than expected and yes maybe they should be glad to have a job, demonstrating appreciation will be returned when the economy turns and they don’t have to be working there any longer.

6) Education and Growth. Top talent insists on getting better. They know once their learning curve flattens out, future opportunities can become limited. Top talent does not like to have their growth potential limited. Giving your best people the opportunity to take some additional classes, lead a project outside their normal job, challenge them with new opportunities, give them a chance to serve on a cross functional team or take an on-line class will ensure they are becoming better. All these not only ensure your top talent is growing, but also makes them a more valuable employee.

Consider these six areas as a way to motivate your top talent. Your best people will appreciate this more than most managers realize. The increase in productivity by having motivated employees is the best ROI any company can receive.

Prison Industry... continued from pg. 32

In 1957 the California Correctional Officers Association (CCOA) was formed. It continued to grow over the years and by the 1980s became involved in supporting legislation that improved working conditions and benefits for correctional staff. They also began to affiliate with Republican and conservative politics under the leadership of Don Novey as they became strong supporters of harsh sentencing, such as the campaign to pass “Three Strikes and You’re Out” in the early 1990s.

In 1992 alone this group was the second largest contributor to Political Action Committees, as they contributed just more than $1 million to various candidates. In 1990 they gave almost $1 million to Pete Wilson’s successful campaign for governor. The total contributions given in 1990 were 10 times that given by the California Teachers’ Association. They contributed $101,000 toward Proposition 184, which created the “Three Strikes and You’re Out” law.

Under Novey’s direction the union saw a vested interest in growing prison populations as reflected in the following figures. In 1980 California had 22,500 prisoners, while the average salary of a prison guard was $14,400, and the budget for the California Department of Corrections was $300 million. By 1996 there were more than 140,000 prisoners, the average salary of the guards stood at $44,000, 58 percent above the national average (more than $10,000 above teachers—a very telling statistic), while the budget was $3 billion. Prison jobs constituted almost half of the growth in state jobs during this time. The union had only 5,600 members in 1980; currently they have around 28,000 members, collecting about $8 million in dues annually and have a budget of around $17 million.

Another example of the politics of this union at the time was their stance toward a program that allowed prisoners to earn college credits at Ironwood State Prison in Blythe. This program is one among many examples demonstrating that the more education a prisoner receives while in prison, the lower the recidivism rate. But apparently lowering recidivism rates was not on the agenda. In typical exaggerated conservative language, the union complained that it is not right for taxpayers to fund college courses for rapists, murderers and the like. A union memorandum complained about a similar program at another prison, saying that it is wrong to provide education to prisoners rather than offering tuition assistance “to people in the community who pay taxes and may benefit from these services.” A flyer sent to union members working at the Ironwood prison urged them to boycott “all management functions” and urged them to “Just Say No” to taxpayer-funded college education for inmates, suggesting that “lifers, some of who [sic] are rapist [sic], molesters and murders [sic] receiving a free college education.”

College officials countered this charge, saying that with this program they were able to expand some of the programs, hire new faculty and increase opportunities for disadvantaged students not in prison. National figures cited by the Los Angeles Times show that such programs are successful and a program in Arizona resulted in a recidivism rate of only 10 percent, compared to about 60 percent nationally.

California prison guards have not been without their own share of controversies, including criminal conduct ranging from having sex with prisoners, running drugs into prison and even manslaughter. One story, which appeared the day before the article about corrections and rehabilitation services within the prison system. On their web site it is noted that “CCPOA recognizes the important role that rehabilitation can and should have in the corrections mission—but that this is impossible without the necessary resources and a strong commitment to evidence-based programs to assist inmates in succeeding upon their release.”

Examples of profits being made from designing, building and supplying prisons with various products have now been discussed. However, a key component of the prison industrial complex is the trend of states turning to private companies that specialize in the entire operation of prisons, from the design to the daily operation. The next section explores this topic in more detail.

8 “Be-Attitudes”... or one born out of laziness, greed, or revenge, then stronger measures are needed.

People cannot be allowed to continually fail to meet expectations. The corrective measures will be based on the severity and longevity of the problem. One caveat: gracious behavior cannot be faked, so be sure you are calm and have dealt with your own emotions before speaking to the employee.

8. Be Balanced. This is an incredibly important concept. There is nothing written on a stone tablet that says all forms of accountability must be negative. In fact, most people love it when someone holds them accountable for all the wonderful things they have done along the way. If we view accountability as both a positive and a corrective concept, then we can remove much of the stigma associated with the word. When we hear a top manager say, “We need to hold our people accountable,” it means negative feedback in most cases. This is an easy thing to change by simply modifying our pattern of feedback.

Holding people accountable is a great concept if it is used in a consistent, kind, and thoughtful way. Try changing the notion of accountability in your work area to incorporate the 8 “Be-Attitudes” above, and you will see a significant improvement in your culture.

Large network connections—Fast and redundant connections are obviously critical for a successful cloud deployment. Always have at least two fully-redundant Internet connections from two different providers in place.

10. Ensure a professional review of all contracts before signing—If your organization’s legal team does not have experience negotiating agreements with cloud service providers, consider retaining legal counsel with this expertise.

Analyst firm Analysys Mason predicts cloud computing services will grow from approximately $13 billion in annual revenue in 2010 to more than $35 billion in 2015. However, for IT teams to maximize the benefit, they must take a “let the buyer beware” approach and thoroughly analyze and understand exactly what services they are purchasing and the costs involved prior to taking the plunge.
At first glance the co-authors Nie and Dowell appear to be the odd couple. Ms. Winter Nie, Ph.D., was born and raised in China. She received her degree from the University of Utah and is a business consultant and professor at IMD, a leading business school in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Dr. Nie has extensive experience instructing executives of multinational corporations as well as some of the most dynamic Chinese companies. William Dowell has more than 30 years’ experience as a Time magazine correspondent in Europe, the Middle East and Asia. He ran the magazine’s Hong Kong Bureau during the time just before the British crown colony was returned to China. Whatever the reason, they decided to collaborate, and it was a very wise decision for the rest of us.

We often see the results of outsourcing manufacturing whenever we go shopping. In most cases, we only carry the marking “Made in China.” The net result, especially for those whose companies couldn’t compete on a price basis, was frustration, confusion and anger. There is another side to this situation. As the authors state:

“Western attitudes toward China often seem schizophrenic. On the one hand, the United States and Europe often seem dazzled by China’s immense potential as a market for Western goods and services. In a global market where competition is fierce, who can ignore 1.3 billion potential customers? The expectations are not farfetched. For example, despite the high cost of Swiss watches—around $550 each—more than 40 percent of the roughly 26 million Swiss watches exported annually are bought in Asia.

“The other hand, China’s sheer size and energy can appear threatening, not just to Westerners but to the Chinese as well. But the Chinese are looking at the situation from a very different perspective than that held by most people in the West. Thirty years of isolation, extreme poverty, and deprivation have created an enormous pent-up demand for a broad range of consumer products. While many Westerners focus on their leisure and quality time, most Chinese are now obsessed with catching up and getting ahead no matter what the cost. At the same time, most are intensely patriotic and proud of the recent achievements.”

The authors go on to say:

“…The entry of China’s new private-sector entrepreneurs on the world stage promises to be the most significant development in global business in the next few decades. At the same time, both these companies and their competitors have a steep learning curve and very little time to master it.” One of the most fascinating chapters of the book is the compact view of what China and the rest of the world may expect in both the short and long range. The authors’ viewpoint is neither optimistic nor pessimistic. They are clearly realistic as they comment:

“Despite scare talk of China taking over the world economy, the Chinese realize themselves to be the odd couple. Ms. Winter Nie in particular has emphasized on the rights of individuals.

“The co-authors add:

“Fears of China’s impact on the U.S. economy also tend to be exaggerated. A recent study by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco pointed out that 55 cents out of every dollar spent in the United States on imports from China goes to an American company. The Chinese share of that dollar is only 45 cents.”

Both countries have many lessons to learn about each other. In China, for example, we would like to see a greater emphasis on the rights of individuals. As the authors point out, the greatest supporters of this are the Chinese people themselves. This could be one of the most important books for us to read.

Barstow Casino & Resort Project

The Barstow Casino & Resort Project, which is being pursued as a partnership project between the Los Coyotes Band of Cahuilla & Cupeno Indians and Bar West Gaming, is still a viable initiative that is in the review process. In order for the initiative to move forward, both the Federal Government and the State of California will have to agree to allow the project to be constructed.

Currently, the Federal Government’s Department of the Interior is evaluating the proposed Barstow Casino & Resort project, and a public hearing on the environmental impact statement was held last July. If the Department of the Interior approves the project as meeting federal guidelines, the next step in the process would be negotiating a contract with the Office of California Governor Jerry Brown. That contract would also have to be approved by the California State Legislature. In an effort to give the Barstow Casino & Resort Project the best chance of gaining state approvals, the city is in the process of determining how to hire a state lobbying firm. If all the approvals are obtained, the overall casino project could be constructed in 2013 or 2014.

So, in order to attract the best and avoid the rest, put all your attention on developing your competitiveness on the last two criteria. While the first two do not give you much room to successfully beat the competition, these two irrational, emotional criteria offer unlimited possibilities to show—and make the difference!

region. Studies have shown that Asian consumers are willing to travel beyond their immediate neighborhood in order to shop for seafood, meat, produce and Asian-branded products. Additionally, a tenant such as 88 Seafood Supermarket will help to increase the demand for the other spaces in the center, since there is a group of small in-line shops who piggyback off of the traffic Asian grocers generate, and several of them may follow the grocer to its new locations.

SIERRA LANE PARTNERS COLLECTS $8.4 MILLION FROM TRIO OF NNN PROPERTY SALES IN MURRIETA

Newport Beach-based Sierra Lane Partners LLC recently sold three newly constructed properties within a neighborhood shopping center located adjacent to the 215 Freeway and Clinton Keith Road interchange in the Inland Empire city of Murrieta. The buildings, all single-tenant NNN leased properties, are leased to Del Taco PIC, Davita Dialysis, and Mountain View Tire and Service/Goodyear, and sold for a combined $8.4 million. The transactions were part of a break-up sales strategy that maximized the value of the properties by selling them off individually to increase the buyer pool to include smaller investors. The sales were overseen by Donald MacLellan, senior managing director, and Christopher Tramontano, director, with Faris Lee Investments, who repped the seller in the deals. Faris Lee began marketing the properties before they had completed construction as part of a pre-sale strategy. Del Taco and Goodyear had signed absolute 20-year NNN leases while Davita had signed a 15-year NNN lease. Below is information on each property:

• The Del Taco property is located at 27596 Clinton Keith Road and totals 2.2k square feet. The property sold for $2.4 million to a 1031 multifamily private investor from Los Angeles. Charles Dunn Company represented the buyer.

• The Davita Dialysis property is located at 27602 Clinton Keith Road and totals 8.6k square feet. The property sold for $3.36 million to a 1031 Exchange buyer from Los Angeles. The buyer was represented by Marcus & Millichap.

• The Mountain View Tire and Service/Goodyear property is located at 27584 Clinton Keith Road and totals 5k square feet. The property sold to the franchise operator, Mountain View Tire, for $2.64 million.

The three properties are well-located adjacent to the 215 Freeway and Clinton Keith Road interchange in Murrieta, which are major thoroughfares within the area and are being expanded to support the population growth.

immunizations. To aid in these efforts, he produces and publishes a quarterly patient newsletter providing insight on vaccinations as well as to dispel any myths and concerns.

As president of the Latino Health Collaborative and a former San Bernardino County First 5 commissioner, Dr. Arteaga advocates for increasing funding for childhood immunizations. He also served on the California State Managed Risk Medical Insurance Board as the physician representative for Healthy Families, advocating for an increase in childhood vaccinations. “Dr. Albert Arteaga’s leadership and collaboration with others to build support for and increase immunization rates for hard-to-reach and under-immunized populations is commendable,” says Senator Gloria Negrete McLeod. “His work with disease prevention of children and minorities is a testament to his commitment to improve community health. I want to congratulate Dr. Arteaga for his work and recognition as one of California’s CDC Childhood Immunization champions.”

Eadie and... Energy credit

The energy credit can be claimed by an owner of energy property placed in service in 2012. Energy property is property acquired, constructed, reconstructed, or erected by the taxpayer which uses solar energy to generate electricity, is used to produce or use geothermal energy, is qualified fuel cell, microturbine or small wind energy property, or uses the ground or ground water as a thermal energy source. The credit can be as much as 30% of the cost of each energy property. (IRC Sec. 48(a))

Todd Landry, CPA, CFE, AEP, also a tax partner at E+P, adds that two other tax deductions are useful to business owners who acquired or are planning to acquire property in 2012: Section 179 expensing and 50% bonus depreciation. These incentives will drastically decrease or will expire in 2013, so it is important to consider them in tax planning for 2012.

E+P is a full-service CPA firm with offices in Redlands and Ontario. This material is for informational purposes only and is not considered legal or accounting advice. For more information on the above mentioned tax incentives or for help in tax planning for 2012, please contact E+P at 909-793-2406 (Redlands) or at 909-466-5252 (Ontario).
Girls Only
By Christine Rolfe

Luxury spa treatments, boutique shopping, customized perfume blending and an abundance of wine tasting. A backdrop so stunning that it attracts travelers from across the world. Gourmet dining. A best friend’s weekend.

The three of us have been best friends, well...ever since I can remember. Although we see each other often, we rarely tear away from our busy lives to dedicate the bonding time that a few days together provide. So, the best friends were loaded in the car and armed with MapQuest directions, GPS (aka “Lola”), a printed Thomas Guide and the map app on the iPhone. It was a comical necessity as we tend to have trouble navigating and were determined not to miss a turn on our drive up north to Monterey/Carmel. We left at the crack of dawn, sacrificing sleep for an early arrival and the chance to enjoy as much time in Monterey as possible. As my friend said, “You can sleep when you’re dead.”

As expected, the parking lot. The first, TusCA restaurants (we ate at all of them). The second, Ristorante, features Tuscan cuisine prepared with fresh, seasonal Californian ingredients (the swordfish and filet mignon were both tasty). For more casual dining, Knuckles Kings fought for championship. For cocktails and light fare, The Fireplace Lounge was quite lively at night as live Jazz music filled the lobby with festivity – it seemed only fitting our girly mood—whether to fulfill our food cravings, refine our wine tasting skills and satisfy our girly mood—whether it be to swing to the tunes of jazz or pound our fist at the losing Celtics.

The hotel offers three restaurants (we ate at all of them). The first, TusCA ents (the swordfish and filet mignon were both tasty). For more casual dining, Knuckles iments gave their approval for this blissful sanctuary. I particularly liked selecting my aromatherapy scent—a selection of essential oil blends based on the unique seasons of Monterey. One slow, deep whiff and I immediately knew the renewal blend representing spring was made for me. The oils are blended by Ajne, a natural perfumery that creates the most beautiful synthetic-free fragrances—one of the world’s only entirely natural perfume apothecaries. The scents are quite addicting but we will get to more on the “liquid art” of Ajne later. After selecting our oils, we each chose from a menu of spa treatments ultimately deciding on either a facial or massage. We could have stayed at the spa for many more enchanted hours, but the best friends had work to do. Rejuvenated with facials and massages, we were ready to shop. There were boutiques, art galleries and jewelry stores that needed tending in the picturesque town of Carmel, about 10-15 minutes from the hotel. We plugged in our destination address and Lola navigated us straight to Ocean Avenue in Carmel.

It is no surprise that shopping is the quintessential way for girls to bond. And shopping in Carmel is an elevated sense of the experience. It is the perfect way to spend the day with your best friends. The stores range from national chains such as Coach to small boutique stores including Paloosh. There is also a number of jewelry stores—from
