CSUSB
INVEST IN “U” EXPANSION ’86

by Sandra Boyd

Are you aware the Student Union and Associated Students fee referendum being held on May 13 and 14? Your student body vote will decide whether or not to increase campus facilities and services offered to the CSUSB student population.

The Associated Students fee has not been raised in the twenty years of Cal State’s existence. In 1966, a loaf of bread cost you 23¢. Today, that same loaf of bread will cost you $1.23.

In order for Associated Students and Student Union facilities you depend on to continue, a small increase is necessary.

You may ask yourself why the fees need to be increased. The reason for the proposed increase is that certain programs and services which benefit you right now are in jeopardy.

Although A.S. now offers such services as Emergency Student Loans, interlibrary loans, Book Co-Op, Child Care funding, and recreational sports, our ability to continue to offer these services will waver into non-existence if an increase is not supported. Expansion ’86 concerns our future — together.

The Student Union is asking for a fee increase at the same time as A.S. in order to be able to provide an expanded facility. The Student Snack Bar now serves up to 800 students per day and the demand is increasing each month. Unless expanded facilities are supported, the ability of the Student Union to meet the social needs of our exploding student population will not be met.

This fee increase will provide a much greater variety of food services; meeting rooms for clubs, activities, and campus interest groups; and additional recreational areas.

Our campus is growing by leaps and bounds. The dreams conceived of by the founding fathers are now becoming a reality. To keep pace with our exciting, overall campus growth, Associated Students and the Student Union need your help.

For more information, please come in and see us or call campus extensions 7494 or 7757. Thank you for your support in this vital move towards the future. The Expansion ’86 campaign will culminate in a student body vote to be held May 13 and 14. Invest in “U”, Expansion ’86.

CSUSB tennis teams promise optimistic futures

by Randy Smith

The ball is 2 1/2” in diameter, the net is only three feet high, and the racket is big enough to kill a basketball. Easy, huh? Wrong again. The game of tennis may look easy on paper, but when it comes to really playing the game, it turns out to be a challenge. A challenge that can only be overcome through hard work and practice. This is the work ethic that first-year coach Jim Ducey tries to pass on to his players. Having talent certainly helps, but as Coach Ducey puts it, “you have to play, nothing comes from nothing.”

His motto seems to be working because in their second year of competition, the men have a record of 5-10 and the women sport a 6-8 mark. These records may not sound too great, but if you consider who they’ve played against, the records are very respectable. Many teams just starting out will schedule easy opponents to give them a good record and something to brag about. But in order to improve, you have to play teams that are better than you are. As Coach Ducey says, “We intend to play as good as talent as we can.” This year’s schedule included many NCAA Division 1, 2, and top-ranked 3 schools.

Coach Ducey feels the biggest plus for his teams is their mental attitudes; “they all have very competitive attitudes and they fight for each other. I don’t decide who plays, the scores do.”

For next year, Ducey hopes to strengthen both teams by having 8-10 players on both teams who can practice every day. On the men’s side there will be six returning players, including top singles player Tim Streck, who has a 9-6 record ranked 12th in the district. Also returning for the Coyotes is the number two singles player Richard Blackey, who has a team-best 11-4 record. Streck and Blackey have also combined for a 9-6 record as a doubles team.

On the woman’s side, the four returning players will be led by the number one singles player Stephanie Comadena (7-6 record) and number two singles player Eileen Santa Maria. Coach Ducey also hopes to add some players who have shown interest from the San Bernardino area.

With the mental attitude of the players and greater numbers for next year, Ducey is optimistic about the future as well, he should be.

Faculty Art Series Continues

Pianist Larry McFatter will be featured as the CSUSB Faculty Art Series continues Wednesday, April 23, 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

Dr. McFatter, assistant professor of music, will perform four pieces. Featured will be Haydn's "Sonata in E flat," Bartok's "Romanian Dance No. 1," Ravel's "Pavane Pour une Infante Defunte" and Debussy's "Minstrels" from "Préludes." The Preludes were inspired by Debussy's encounters with the theatre both in France and the United States.

Dr. McFatter has been at Cal State since 1983 teaching music theory, composition and piano. He has performed many of his own works at Carnegie Recital Hall, New York's Symphony Space and the Charles Ives Center for American Music. He also won several awards for his music (including first prize at the 1981 national Composer's Competition for Young Ensembles). Dr. McFatter possesses a masters in music and a doctorate in music from Memphis State University.

Admission to the artist series is $2 for students and seniors and $4 for general admission. The public is invited to attend. For more information phone 887-7454.

Meetings of the commission will be open to all members of the campus community.

The members of the commission include representing staff: Karla Hallum of Radio, Roberta Stathis-Oebos and Mary Williams, San Bernardino, and Sandi Weiser of San Bernardino, Penzi Overstreet, Rialto and Bayo Snedaker.

Health Administration Masters Offered

A Master of Arts degree with a special major in health care administration will begin this fall quarter at CSUSB.

The program, offered by the Department of Health Science and Human Ecology, will be available on a regular basis for students admitted for graduate study at the university.

The health care industry has been one of the two major industries in the U.S. for the last few years and employment opportunities continue to increase, explained Dr. Thomas C. Timmreck, associate professor in the Department of Health Science and Human Ecology who specializes in health care administration.

He said health care institutions such as hospital and convalescent centers are often what people think of when health care careers are mentioned. There are more than 7,000 hospitals and 35,000 nursing homes in the United States today.

"Even though many opportunities continue to exist with these types of health care facilities, numerous new kinds of opportunities are becoming available. Services such as immediate care centers, outpatient centers and emergency care centers are now being located in local neighborhoods and industrial areas. Health maintenance organizations, preferred provider organizations and other new services are coming on line every day. These are the wave of the future and all need administrators," according to Dr. Timmreck.

The degree offered in the Department of Health Science and Human Ecology can also provide upward career mobility opportunities. Timmreck said many persons with bachelor's degrees who are working in the health care field want to move up in their career but lack the required masters degree. "Through the program at Cal State, this person can keep his or her job while working on the masters degree," he added.

Dr. David Null, acting chair of the department, said the master's degree can also be focused on other health-related career areas such as community health, environmental health, health education and health promotion and community nutrition. Many people seeking career mobility find it usually comes through a health administration degree.

The courses to be offered this fall quarter are not listed in the fall schedule of classes, however; students may secure information from the department office and may register through computer-assisted registration this summer or at the fall registration in September.

A bachelor's degree in health care administration and planning.

VD Awareness Month

April is VD Awareness Month. Sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) are in the news these days. Herpes and AIDS have received prominent attention, but the traditional venereal diseases, such as syphilis and gonorrhea, are also of concern.

There are five kinds of STDs, each transmitted by a different germ during sexual relations. These germs cannot invade the body through the outer layer of skin; therefore, they enter through mucous membranes, such as the tissue that lines the male and female genital tract. Occasionally, these germs get in through the mouth, throat, eyes, rectum, or a cut on the skin, but most commonly the original entry is through the sexual organ. The most common STDs are gonorrhea and syphilis. The others are chancroid, granuloma inguinale, lymphogranuloma venereum, genital warts, and nongonococcal urethritis (chlamydia).

As a reminder of the importance of VD Awareness Month, here are some points to consider about sexually transmitted diseases:

1. Both partners must be treated. Cures for certain STDs are available; however, the germs are transmitted even after cure.
2. Condoms are necessary as a form of contraception. Condoms help prevent reinfection.
3. Medications should be taken throughout the prescribed course of treatment, even though symptoms may subside or the menstrual period may begin.
4. Patients should be advised to avoid foods rich in iron (beef, leafy vegetables, etc.), milk, and milk products for 2 hours before and 2 hours after tetracycline absorption.
5. Some infections may cause slightly abnormal Pap smear results.
6. If you suspect you have STD, you can do one of the following:
   a) go to the Student Health Center (887-7641), b) see your private physician, or c) call the VD Hotline at 800/982-5883.

For more information on these infections, their prevention and treatment, contact the Health Center.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

INTERNSHIPS:

JUMP

Ahead of the Competition

What is the single most important qualification one can bring to a job interview? No, it's not education; it's experience. Employers look for applicants who have experience in their fields. They don't want an extended, and expensive training period before their employees are productive workers. Internships are perhaps the ideal situations in which to gain experience - and they provide outstanding side benefits as well. Look at what an internship can do for you:

ON THE JOB TRAINING
Internships get you out of the classroom and into the field. You can note the experience on your resume.

EDUCATIONAL CREDIT
Approved internships can carry credit toward graduation in many majors. Check with your advisor.

CAREER DECISIONS
Internships will help you decide whether a particular career will really fit your needs.

A JOB!
Some internships may pay a small wage, but money is the least important reason for becoming an intern. Many companies which provide internship positions find they cannot do without the student and hire them on!

NETWORKING
A very valuable aspect of working in the field is becoming known. As an intern, you get to meet and know people who can be important in your future. If your intern position does not lead to an immediate job, you can be sure your letters of recommendation and introduction will open doors for years to come.

With all of these excellent reasons for becoming an intern, it would be a wise career decision to check one out. An internship will typically offer 2.5 to 5 units of credit per quarter. Students will work with close supervision on a job site for one or two quarters, usually an average of ten or more hours per week. A faculty advisor keeps in contact with both the field supervisor and the student to monitor academic progress, and assure the experience is meeting the needs of all concerned.

Below is a partial list of internship programs available at Cal State. If your department isn't listed, call the secretary to find out who to talk to for an internship in your major.

'NOW THEN, IN THE STRESS INTERVIEW..."
Career Center People Profiles

Who are those people anyway?

It's uncomfortable sometimes going into an office for information or help, not knowing what or whom to ask. Well, being the considerate and just plain nice people we are, we in the Career Planning and Placement Office thought we'd give you a hand before you come see us. That way you'll feel confident and comfortable and we'll have a good time. (We do enjoy having a good time.)

Dr. Paul Esposito, Director

Dr. Esposito has an extensive background in Student Personnel Services. He is dedicated to providing the best possible service to our student community and runs the Center with that goal in mind.

An avid sports fan and ballplayer, Dr. Esposito also helps students throw 'strikes' when it comes to resume and cover-letter writing. He is the man who secures on-campus employment interviews for our students with major national corporations, government agencies and school districts. Although Dr. Esposito sees his main function in providing placement services, he is quick to point out that helping students develop a career plan which will carry over after they leave the University is a very important function of the Center.

Come see Dr. Esposito to register for On-Campus Interviews and for help in job search strategies.

Ed Schneiderhan, Career/ Vocational Counselor

"Career development is self development. One does not separate individual values from career values. Job satisfaction relates to how much your personality can be expressed within your career field." Sounds pretty serious doesn't he? He is Bill Ed Schneiderhan also believes in laughing, fun and motorcycle racing (He's District 37, Senior Motorcycle champ). Ed is our Career Counselor and the man to talk to if you are experiencing questions about majors or career choices. He'll help you think about yourself (and have a good time doing it if you let him). Ed runs our group sessions and career exploration workshops and is committed to helping students really discover what they need in an education and career. He also puts in a few hours of consultation for Academic Advising, which keeps him current with the programs and majors at our University. Come see Ed for any of your career needs and questions.

Lynn Morse, Educational Placement Advisor

Lynn wears a variety of hats in her position. She is a counselor, specializing in educational careers, placement advisor for teaching positions, maintains the placement files, and educational resume workshop leader. Beyond her duties on the job, Lynn can attest to first hand experience in understanding student issues because she is currently finishing her own graduate degree in Counseling Education.

She and her husband are avid sailors, abandoning the Inland Empire for week-end excursions to Marina del Rey and their sailing club. She hopes to skipper her own boat before too long.

Prospective teachers, teaching candidates, and educationally oriented students should seek out Lynn when setting up placement files and educational resumes. She's wonderfully nice, supportive, and is dedicated to helping students find the career which will best suit them.

Barbara Smith

Eight months isn't that long but that's how long Barbara has been on the job as the Center's secretary. And like all excellent secretaries, she has the place in order and under her thumb. Go ahead, ask her where anything is, who to ask, or when it will happen. She's amazing.

Barbara is quiet and considerate, qualities which make her delightful sense of humor tickle the unguarded souls around. Come in and get the information you need, and make your appointments to see Dr. Esposito and Ed Schneiderhan with Barbara.

In addition to our regular staff members, the Career Planning and Placement Center has a wonderful assortment of Student Assistants, Graduate Assistants, and Counseling Interns all eager and willing to help you. You'll not find a more responsive and dedicated office anywhere else on campus. Guaranteed. Come see for yourself.

How to-- Seminars Presented

A quality education does not end with academic success, as many unemployed holders of university degrees can attest. How many students spend.in preparation for a degree in comparison to the time spent learning how to market themselves in the workplace? After all, isn't gainful employment a major purpose of continuing one's education? The Career Planning and Placement Center is producing a Spring Career Seminar Series to help complete the practical aspect of education for the students at Cal State.

Paul Shilk, a noted expert in career counseling from U.C.L.A., says: "Most people spend their whole lives trying to get ahead, but spend only a few moments examining themselves and their life strategies. "Many people," he mentioned, "seek their careers backwards, trying to fit themselves into a career - rather than trying to find a career which will fit them."

The Spring Seminar Series will help students get ahead in their search for themselves, their majors, and their future career direction. Those attending can be assured they will not "back into" a career direction. Below is a listing of the Career Series Schedule. Tear it out, paste it up, and above all, Challenge yourself to attend one or more of the seminars.

Vocational Testing: Know Thyself

You know those people, the ones who knew exactly what they wanted to be when they were in the third grade and proceeded directly to that goal non-stop. Are you one of them? Chances are fairly good that the average student at Cal State doesn't have a solid idea of where they are going. In fact statistics show that 80% of incoming freshmen will change majors before they graduate. 68% of the Sophomore class, 36% of the Juniors, and even 11% of the Seniors will change their direction. Didn't you know you were in such a good company, did you?

Why do students change majors and graduates change careers? Perhaps it's because in their efforts to reach 'success', they apply themselves to meet criterion which has been set by society and others rather than themselves. When the reality of disinterest and incompatibility sets in, students jump majors, workers jump jobs, professionals jump careers. All this jumping around may not be such a bad thing. After all, if one considers life a process, each step in that life leads to another. A little pre-emptive caution to know where your feet will land, however, may help avoid an unpleasant surprise by what you step into.

A healthy curiosity in yourself can save much time and energy. Ed Scheiderman, a Career Counselor in the Career Planning and Placement Center at Cal State says: "Everyone can use some outside help when it comes to career exploration - it's hard to do by yourself. You're too close to the problems to see your options clearly - it helps to have someone keep you honest."

Career testing is a tool which can help clarify one's direction. Care should be taken for what they are designed to do. Career and vocational inventories will not tell you what to do, be, or major in. They will do is tell you the interest areas, career fields, job types, working conditions, and social concerns which will most likely satisfy your needs as a unique individual.

Life seems to be a growth process. An education at Cal State is one step in that process. A thorough understanding of yourself can only help make the transition smoother and with greater chance for fulfillment. The Career Planning and Placement Center urges you to come by and complete your education with some intelligent, honest, and practical self-exploration. They offer modern, up-to-date vocational testing, including the new, values oriented, SIGI PLUS computerized career exploration program.

Change is natural and good when one outgrows present circumstances. Change stemming from a lack of self-knowledge is good only if you can learn from your mistakes and not repeat them.
Opportunity Knocks On-Campus

A reminder that the Career Planning and Placement Center’s annual Career Opportunities Fair will take place tomorrow, Thursday, April 24th, from 10:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m. The Fair will be located in the Student Union Multipurpose Room (SUMP). The Fair is for all students, freshmen through graduates in all academic areas. Employer representatives from 46 different organizations (both public and private) will be available to informally answer questions regarding career opportunities within their professions. A complete listing of employers who will be in attendance includes:

- Williams, Allstate Insurance Co.
- American National Insurance Co.
- Arrowhead Drinking Water Co.

Good Things Come to Those Who Wait?

Not when it comes to job hunting and career development. However, there could be one thing better than going out on a job interview; having the interview come to you.

That’s exactly the service the Career Planning and Placement Center provides to graduating students and alumni at Cal State each quarter. Dr. Paul Espesito, director of the Career Center, spent many hours coordinating on-campus employment interviews with national corporations, local businesses, school districts, and government agencies. His efforts produce continuing employment opportunities, as well as wide recognition for our students searching for career opportunities within their professions. A guaranteed interview is a real bonus for those with little practical experience in their field. Would you pass up a sure-bet opportunity to show your best stuff to a prospective employer?

There are two major advantages for those who interview on campus. First, you’re already here. Secondly, and most important, when you sign up for an interview on campus you avoid being “paper-screened” out of contention because of minor qualification irregularities. A career interview is the first step for those with little practical experience in their field. Would you pass up a sure-bet opportunity to show your best stuff to a prospective employer?

Do You Have Any Questions?

All too often, in preparation for that important job interview, we carefully formulate the answers to inquiries about our education, experience, and goals. But in our effort to answer these there is a tendency to neglect one very important question often asked by employers: “Do you have any questions?”

1. What is the most important function of this (department, position)?
2. What would be the duties of someone in this position?
3. What are the qualities you are looking for in an employee?
4. What would be my direct (superior, supervisor)?
5. What other departments would I be working with regularly?
6. What type of equipment would be available to me?
7. What sort of performance reviews might I expect?
8. Are professional associations important to the company? Are fees paid?
9. What are the opportunities for continuing education?
10. What type of schedule would I be working?
11. (An ‘Anything Else?’ question) What is the next step in the interviewing process?

Career Center Acquires SIGI PLUS!

SIGI PLUS, the latest computerized system available to students searching for career information, was recently acquired by CSUSB’s Career Planning and Placement Center. The system provides not only information about academic preparation necessary to achieve occupational goals, but also assists in achieving those goals.

Additionally, this program is unique in that it responds directly to the individual’s input and does not compare that individual to a group. The system is also divided into areas such as prospective income, security, and leisure time to help users narrow down their career options. The “user-friendly” system, available to all students free of charge, provides priceless information upon request.

“The system is supplemental to career counseling,” said Lynn Moss, placement advisor. “After using the system, the student can set up an appointment to meet with one of our counselors to find out more about their choices.”

"91.9 in the Shade"

by Janice Waters
(A review of the PBS radio program "A Prairie Home Companion")

There seems to be a reemergence of network radio, and at the forefront is "America's hottest humorist," Garrison Keillor. Mr. Keillor, creator and host of "A Prairie Home Companion" (Recorded at the "World Theater" in St. Paul, Minnesota, and broadcast by public radio 91.9 FM in San Bernardino), and author of this year's surprise best seller "Lake Wobegon Days", has risen to and maintained an astonishing level of popularity in a remarkably short time, through his reveries about Lake Wobegon, Minnesota, a small (fictitious) mid-western town "that time forgot and decades can't improve".

Life in Lake Wobegon is slow and quiet. It is a place where men go to a barber to have their hair "cut" not "styled", where places you shop don't encourage your vanity, and where trust is considered in terms of "I hope that you will and I know that you can". As a perpetrator of anticipated values, Garrison Keillor is the incarnation of Lake Wobegon's motto "Summus Quod Sumus" ("We Are What We Are"). "A Prairie Home Companion" recalls a time when a Hudson motorcar equipped with an A.M. radio, heater, and power-glide transmission was wowsy-dowzy, and a Mercedes Benz was an automobile only utilized by Nazis, kings, and other foreign types.

Garrison Keillor's immense success has been attributed to a genius as a humorist and story teller... favorably compared with the likes of Mark Twain, James Thurber, and E.B. White, his voice has a mesmerizing effect as he recounts tales that create a "marvellous kind of time machine" that can, for two wondrous hours (The length of the program), return us to our childhood - "The small town everyone came from." Mr. Keillor's syntax has the calm elegance of a bed-time story, and he offers a traditional mid-American sense of God, home, family, friends, belonging, and love.

In addition to being "just plain fun", the popularity of Keillor, and his "Uncle"s, are based on a common desire to return to an era when life wasn't so sophisticated as it is today, but where families and friends were bonded together and only separated by death or necessity... to get back to where we came from, to a time before the pressures of a chaotic world filled with "fast food", big business, inflation, credit buying, high crime rates, terrorism, and pollution were upon us.

In today's fast paced society, it is pleasant to look forward to Saturday afternoons, when at 3:30 p.m., Garrison comes to remind us of a more comfortable world. It is a time once again to relax and be enchanted by the slow and regular baritone of this "yarn spinning champion" from St. Paul. Personally, I plan my weekends around the broadcast and it takes something pretty drastic to make me miss it. I like to sit and knit in front of where the fireplace would be if we had one. My husband always listens with me and I imagine him smoking his old pipe he gave up two years ago. While we sit and listen, Garrison creates a swell world that is a real reprieve from my own chaotic existence of debts, two jobs, college classes, and trying to squeeze some quiet time in between.

Cool Sounds in the Coyotes' Den

by Chris Ellis

Cal State's Coyote Pub was dazzled by another appearance of the Tyrone Anthony Group. After playing to a packed house last Fall, Tyrone Anthony was back following numerous requests for another performance.

This is the jazz quartet's fourth year of performances at Cal State University. With Tyrone Anthony on bass, Vince Denham on alto and tenor saxophone, Matt Snyder on keyboards and Bernie Driel on drums, this dynamic foursome has established quite a following here.

In view of this outstanding show put on by what may very well be the premier jazz group of the Inland Empire, Tyrone Anthony almost certainly will be on the lookout for more in the near future. By the way, if you are wandering why no original songs were performed, Tyrone Anthony is currently working on an album that is due out within the next six months. According to Tyrone, the band will hold off on performances of cuts off the album until it is released. The reason he is taking his time on their first LP is Groups first album. Also, if you don't want to wait until their next appearance here at CSUSB, check out the "Local quality music will result". So be watching the record store for this. The Tyrone Anthony group meets at Sarafino's - right across from the Black Angus in Montclair, just off the I 10 freeway.

For fantastic jazz sounds, from a fantastic jazz quartet, the Tyrone Anthony Group is virtually without equal anywhere.

Last Call For Halley's

by Steve Karen

Ray Fraunholz started off his lecture about Halley's comet by asking the members of the audience if there was anyone among them who had seen the comet make its last appearance in 1910, and sure enough there was.

An elderly man described seeing "Halley's comet is also a good way to measure a life span, because it only comes once every seventy-six years," he said.

Fraunholz went on to speak about the history, composition and orbit of the famous celestial body. He also explained why this has been a poor year for viewing the comet.

It seems the comet was on the other side of the sun during its closest trajectory to earth, and in effect the sun blotted out the comet. Fraunholz also gave tips on the best place and times to see the comet, which this time of the year is somewhere in the Southern Hemisphere such as in Australia or New Zealand.

Unfortunately, if you have not seen the comet by now, you probably will not be able to, as the comet and the earth have begun moving in opposite directions.

Fraunholz has been a member of the Navigation Systems section at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena for the past fifteen years. His lecture was sponsored by the university's Intellectual Life Committee, which is hosting several speakers this quarter at Cal State.

SAN BERNARDINO — There is an identity crisis lurking around the San Bernardino City Unified School District. The board has voted to increase the separation between school board members and the community. Board members, including Robert Johnson, a theatre arts major, show that students are feeling the strain. Johnson said, "We need to make sure that students feel connected to their school district." Dom Grossman, a realtor for seven years working for the San Bernardino Unified School District, has noticed a trend where students are more likely to transfer to suburban districts. He said, "I've noticed that students are looking for a more diverse community." Brian Binkley, the board president, believes that the district needs to focus on improving the quality of education. Binkley said, "We need to focus on improving the quality of education and making sure that students are prepared for the future."
The Libyan Issue:

Is Bombing the Answer?!

Editorial:
Flash to a Boeing 727 flying 15,000 feet over southern Greece. A bomb planted under seat 10F explodes and four passengers are blown out a gapping hole in the side of the airplane. One passenger reports that "a piece of flesh landed on my boyfriend," and a coroner informs us that three of the four dead were killed on impact, rather than by the explosion.

Flash to a disco in West Germany. Proof once again that metal roles, as two people are killed and scores injured by a metal r^es, as two people are seriously injured.

A bomb planted under seat lOF rather than by the explosion. It is fairly obvious that Libyan-sponsored terrorism needs to stop. Surely they have not cornered the market, but they are a dominant force. In this case, unfortunately, both inaction and the actions taken seem to have yielded negative results. We knew the result of this attack would be increased terrorism and we did it anyway. Perhaps Reagan sees this just as the first step in what may be a long and drawn out process. He should realize instead that he has done is sacrifice the lives of over a hundred people, including two of our own, for the sake of our pride. We proved that we had pride, and we are resilient, but what is that world? A country of our stature should have known that already.

Even as this situation begs for a solution, there are those who sit back and watch as the world's discos are destroyed (well,) and airplanes are continually hijacked and blown out of the sky, and yet the action we take should lead to positive results, and of course, not negative ones. Seventy-seven percent of Americans polled recently were in favor of the attack, yet the majority of those conceded that it would lead to increased terrorism.

Seventy-seven percent of Americans polled recently were in favor of the attack, yet the majority of those conceded that it would lead to increased terrorism.

On the other hand, our other options have been limited by the ridiculously appreasive attitudes of most of our European allies. If there were unity, then there would be a chance of pursuing less violent means. Instead we have a situation were countries terrorized by Libya continue to trade and communicate with Libya. A large portion of the Libyan skilled labor force is supplied by southern European countries and it is their dependence that we should be able to use to our advantage. Unfortunately for those that have died, they are no longer civilians.

In the absence of any unified effort to isolate Libya economically, the situation requires action. The action taken on Monday did nothing to eliminate the problem. Rather, terrorists feed on the blood, agony, and despair of conflict to fortify their violent impulses.

If we hope to end the bloodshed we should look at ways of eliminating Kadhafi personally. Perhaps his successor would continue his policies, but the chances of this are not too great. Of course, if that is supposed that nothing could be worse than the Shah...

Political assassination is as distasteful as any other concept presented here, but when the man in power is so lawless and contemptuous of human life that he refuses even to recognize the bloodshed he is causing to his own people, then the time must be right. This would be easily preferable to the kind of bombing that occurred last week, which no matter how carefully planned, was bound to injure and kill non-targeted civilians.

The Failure of Constructive Engagement

Dear Editor:
The Reagan Administration's policy of constructive engagement, or quiet diplomacy, has left me more perplexed today than when I first heard this term of disinformation used a few years ago in a major change in South Africa. In actuality, what this course of action by the current administration has done is given the Pretorian government of President Pieter W. Botha the green light to brutally crush any and all opposition to South Africa's disgusting and despicable utilization of apartheid within their borders. From Washington. If the United States can implement leverage for change against aliens such as El Salvador and the Philippines, then why not South Africa?

According to the Reagan Administration, those who are involved in internal conflict for the right of self-determination have produced "fratricidal" results. As the rebels in Angola, the contras in Nicaragua, and the rebels combating the Soviet-backed government in Afghanistan, it is difficult to say what are the South Africans who are fighting against the barbaric, inhumane practice of racial inequality called apartheid? In the past 16 months, since the imposition of a state of emergency, over 1,000 people have been killed, television press coverage of police crackdowns has been banned, and South African troops regularly invade neighboring countries in search of African National Congress (ANC) activists, and the supposed release of jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela on humanitarian grounds turned out to be a vindictive hoax.
The Reagan Administration naively continues to welcome the conciliatory speeches that spew out of the Botha regime. Botha talks of an undivided South Africa with equal citizenship, equal education for all races, and the involvement of all groups in having a voice in governmental policies that affect them. In an eagerly anticipated address in the Congress on March 5th, Botha asserted: "We have outgrown the colonial system of paternalism and the concept of apartheid."

The current U.S. administration swallowed it hook, line and sinker. While the South African human rights reforms to take shape in South Africa, would someone please explain to me what the hell constructive engagement is? Don Richard
