Evans' letter stirs controversy

The following is a letter from Dr. Anthony Evans, President of CSUSB, addressed to the Chancellor of the CSU system. This letter has created some disturbances among minority students, who feel that Evans has, at least, written them off, if not having come to the situation with good intentions in the first place.

The Coyote Chronicle learned of the letter through a copy of it which has been distributed here on campus, and which had been published in The Black Voice, a newsletter circulated locally. That publication interviewed Dr. Evans and he insists the letter shows only his concern, not biases. Evans says that it continues the on-going process on our campus. I will not discuss the details of that plan in this communication other than to say that it continues the on-going process on our campus to improve significantly our service to underrepresented students. To be sure, it reflects a university-wide priority about which we feel very deeply.

I wish to share with you, as a matter of record, my concerns about the difficulty of the task before us. While the opportunities for service to underrepresented minorities are enormous, we must not minimize the practical difficulties in this area. My own appreciation of these difficulties grows almost daily. Despite growing legislative pressures for quick improvements, I fear that short-term gains will be minimal, at best. Just to prevent further erosion may be as much as we can expect initially. The prospects for long-term improvements are somewhat better, in my judgement, only because of the new standards for The Chronicle.

Permit me to explain briefly why I feel such increasing impotence in this area. Worsening social problems affecting Blacks and Hispanics, of which you are as well informed as I, are the primary basis for my concern. I am confident about improving instruction and educational support services at CSU institutions, but I am not about changing present social conditions in any significant way. Our own campus' early intervention efforts with underrepresented minorities, which I find impressive and encouraging, are dwarfed by the increasing social and economic problems of our region. I see no quick changes in these conditions—indeed, they will probably grow more serious and effective antidote.

I make this point, not because it is known to you, but only to urge caution against our promising too much too quickly. In the past, American higher education has sometimes promised too much in social areas and also has acquiesced to ever-increasing societal expectations. While I am a reformer at heart, I keep reminding myself that the business of education is education. We educators alone just cannot reform American society, or even California.

The second reason why I doubt that we will see in the near future a major turnaround around in our educational equity efforts is that educators can only facilitate learning and student educational advancement. I have concluded that one of the important reasons why our current educational equity programs have not achieved our expectations is that we have not succeeded in making underrepresented students more independent learners. To the contrary, I believe that we have actually nurtured student dependence. Our own experience at CSUSB is replete with examples of this particular problem. We have so much to do in retraining our staffs in this area, and even if we are successful, I am not sure just how many underrepresented students are ready, emotionally and intellectually, for a university experience. In short, there are natural impediments over which we educators have limited control.

I have commented in writing to Dr. Carter that one of the examples of the EEAC Report was our failure to address this issue. We educators must become more adept in providing motivation, instruction, and educational support services, but the primary responsibility for student persistence must reside with the student. We can influence student behavior, but we cannot control it. Our legislators must understand this.

A final reason why I am less optimistic about making any immediate gains among underrepresented minorities is the enormous prescription associated with our current educational equity programs. I cannot overemphasize the number of constraints under which we operate: separate target populations, separate program requests, separate budget allocations, separate student recruitment and counseling, separate tracking systems, separate reporting systems, and separate staff. This long history of separateness works against efforts to achieve meaningful integration of fundamentally different student populations.

You have heard all this before, but I want to impress upon you how much worse it is in practice than what you might have been told. Only a modern day Gulliver could appreciate the number of strings that bind us in these program areas.

Moreover, far too many existing educational equity staff members are wedded to separateness and oppose, sometimes quietly, the implementation, programmatic integration. This is lamentable, especially when changes which the EEAC Report recommends are met with charges of neo-racism.

I am pleased that on our campus most educational equity staff members have endorsed the principles of the EEAC Report, and some with much enthusiasm. However, we have too or three individuals, all key leaders, who are diehard resisters. It has been a hellish experience trying to work with these individuals. Rarely have I known such self-servings persons. I seek no help or sympathy, but you can expect occasional outbursts and campus turmoil.

Please do not construe this communication as a lessening of commitment on my part. Not at all! Coping with the realities that I have mentioned has only made me more cautious in trying not to overcommit our university and not to create false expectations throughout our service area.

Thanks for taking the time to consider these thoughts. I am not expecting a formal response from you or your staff. I only have renewed appreciation of my limitations which I wanted to share with you.

Sincerely,
Anthony H. Evans
President

Public Misinformation goads students

There are many contemporary intentional propagations of exaggerated facts and misinformation deceptively disguised as truth with the intended purpose of manipulating public opinion toward a desired direction. One example surfaced recently in a memo released by one of Reagan's under-echelon staff members in which it was ordered that the press be supplied with false information about Monammar Kadafy with the intent of further increasing an already aroused negative public opinion (probably for the purpose of further justifying this country's bombing of Tripoli); rather like pouring gasoline on a raging fire to create a smokescreen for other activities.

Another recent instance of public misinformation was brought to light in a letter published in this paper (October 1). While the intent of preserving mental health may be as honourable as Reagan's intent to protect us from terrorism, the perpetual labeling of illegal substances as necessarily harmful is a popularly endorsed untruth fabricated to support a particular perception of morality. In particular, the misleading reference to marijuanas as "harmful" and "causing the birth of deformed babies" is a form of pure conjecture (as defined: the expression of an opinion without sufficient evidence for proof) in vogue among many publicly-standing figures whose opinions vastly outnumber their facts and who would also warn us of the dangers to society in certain forms of music, books, movies, and ideas. Such a diet of facts should not be unquestioningly swallowed whole.

In March 1975, Consumer Reports magazine published a survey of marijuana studies that had been done up to that time. The most negative, fear-inducing and often ill-founded studies were sponsored and published by (and used to justify the policies of) the federal government. The Consumer Reports survey also noted a study carried out by the Research Institute for the Study of Man, commissioned by the National Institute of Mental Health. This study centered in Jamaica where the daily use of ganja (marijuana) has been encouraged among certain groups for generations. This study of the effects of long term marijuana consumption found no substantial differences, in health of body or mind, between users and non-users. Three years after its completion this study was still unpublished in this country (and may still be withheld from publication, I haven't had time to check).

There is a definite distinction between harmful and abusive consumption of any consciousness altering substance. The epidemic abuse of drugs is a symptom of deep underlying disease in the American body politic. The attempt to eradicate drug abuse alone without dealing with the causes inherent in our culture is like burning out a chancre sore as a means of curing syphilis. There are many different motivations leading to substance abuse, from recreational to anesthetic to the drive for success. Fierce competition in certain groups induces the use of substances that would enhance one's efficiency as a competitor. This is not only limited to steroid use among athletes, but also amphetamine and cocaine use among college students (especially medical students) where long hours of alert attentiveness may be medically induced in order to put one at the head of medical competition. Continued use of such substances cannot persist for very long before physical debilitation renders the opposites of the desired effect, but habits used to attain success may be even harder to break than patterns of failure.

The use of consciousness-altering drugs is like that of fire: it can enhance creativity and awareness if used productively, or it is a means of self-destruction when abused. This metaphor occurred to me nearly twenty years ago when I first began using marijuana and LSD. Though I still enjoy and respect the expanded perceptions attained through some experiences, I would no more encourage a person to use drugs than I would recommend that they abstain. This choice is a matter of personal decision. I have known hundreds of marijuana smokers (staff included) who have become parents of perfectly healthy children. The spreading of misinformation about drugs with the intent of reducing their abuse only has the opposite effect. When I first realized I'd been lied to about marijuana I felt compelled to experience and uncover further dangerous distortions and to seek the truth behind the rest of the fog of society's indoctrination, it an ongoing, never-ending process. Lies are what is killing this country from the inside. It's better to remain silent than to fabricate falseness from fact.

In light of the recently collapsed summit meeting, at which neither Reagan or Gorbachev was able to give a little in the name of world peace or humanity, we here at The Chronicle have put together a 'top ten' list of things to do in case of nuclear attack. We note cheerfully that this list was constructed after gruesomely interrogating a group of local ground squirrels.

TOP TEN
1. Pay off all those overdue debts.
2. Wear clean underwear (and try to keep it that way).
3. Have sex (sorry ladies, no time for foreplay).
4. Stick your head in a toilet so that your face doesn't melt off.
6. Learn to belch.
7. Try LSD.
8. Burrow two feet into the dirt and pretend you're a potato.
9. Request a blindfold, hang yourself with it.
10. Be glad you're not suffering a more gruesome or ridiculous death. (Say, being ground up in the jaws of a wheat harvester).

Reagan, Gorbachev stalemate at summit

by Suzy Zidebeck
Special to the Chronicle

President Reagan arrived late Sunday night from summit meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland. He arrived home with a grim face and nothing to show.

The meetings concluded in a stalemate. Although at one point it seemed as though there might be some agreement on the issue of nuclear arms, it never quite came together.

The argument of whether or not to continue Star Wars was the main problem. While Reagan said that he would withdraw from Star Wars to protect the U.S., many students were not very probable. In fact, Gorbachev stopped short of calling the summit a complete and total failure.

Operation Gold-coast headlines merger try

Special to the Chronicle

"Operation Gold-coast is underway. That is what First Interstate, the ninth-largest banking company in the U.S., is calling their strategy for merging with Bank of America. A four-page letter sent by President Reagan to Gorbachev, America's board was a merger offer worth about 2.8 billion dollars. The letter stated that if the merger collapsed, First Interstate would BankAmerica (the parent of Bank of America) retain it's name and San Francisco headquarters, but also that the current boards of both banks would be combined. First Interstate also said they would put BankAmerica in the climb toward interstate banking.

Earthquake leaves 970 dead in El Salvador

El Salvador earthquake on Friday the 10th has left 970 people dead as of Monday night. The death toll is still expected to climb. Over 10,000 people have been injured and two hundred thousand are homeless.

Relief efforts started almost immediately with medical supplies being shipped along with doctors and nurses. Collection plates are being passed around in many churches here to help. Monday morning a big aftershock occurred.

Presidents to meet with students

University President Anthony Evans and Associated Students President, Penni Overstreet, will meet on Thursday, October 16 with as many students as possible to discuss current campus issues.

The forum is for students-who may rarely have had the chance otherwise-to meet the presidents, who have had the experiences of adding or dropping classes, and to contribute your input and to contribute your input and participate in the political process, thus, all students, regardless of political affiliation, are encouraged to join.

Drop deadline set: Critical date is October 15th

By Vida Mabrouk
Chronicle Staff Writer

Who ever thought that changing a course was an easy job? I mean if you are new at Cal State or are a transfer student, you would probably not have any idea of how to go about adding or dropping a course; and those who have had the experience of adding or dropping would say that it is a long and tiresome task. In order for those who wish to have a schedule change without going through the same task, here are some helpful tips on adding or dropping classes.

Students who are currently enrolled in a class which they wish to drop should do so as soon as possible. At Cal State any course that needs to be changed or dropped has to be taken care of by October 15th. If students miss the deadline they will receive a grade of U, an unauthorized withdrawal, which shows up on school records.

Of course, there are exceptions in any case.

Students who have a doctor's excuse or any other official reason for not being able to drop by the 15th are allowed to drop after the deadline. The program charge forms are available at Admissions and Records, and for students who attended night classes they are available at the Evening Office at the east side of the library. Students should keep in mind the deadline for dropping because it is essential to have any changes made as soon as possible.

Unfortunately, the time for adding courses has already passed, but there is an alternate. Students who have the permission of the instructor and the approval of the dean can add new courses to their schedule.

Young Democrats to meet

The "TSUSB Young Democrats Club" will hold its first meeting October 17, from 1pm-2pm, in the Senate Union Lounge. It's advisor is Professor of Political Science, Carol F. Goas. The "Y.D.S." function is to increase student awareness and participation in the political process, thus, all students, regardless of political affiliation, are encouraged to join.

Preparations are now being made, with cooperation from the San Bernardino Democratic Party Headquarters, at allowing club members to help man the H.Q. on Election Day, November 4. Car pooling for those needing transportation will be discussed at the October 17 meeting.

Officers for the 1986-87 school year will be chosen at the next meeting, time and place to be announced later. For more information, contact Patrick Lewis, at (714) 888-9846.

Gay and Lesbian Union to meet

The next meeting of the Gay and Lesbian Union will be held on Wednesday, October 22 from noon - 1:00 p.m. in Student Services 171. We will discuss program plans for the fall quarter. Students, faculty and staff are encouraged to attend.

For more information, contact faculty advisor Dr. Craig Henderson, Dean of Students Office, 887-7624.

M.E.C.H.A. plans for new year

The M.E.C.H.A. organization has set each year's 15th noon in the Senate Chambers, as their meeting place to plan up-coming events for the 86-87 school term. We invite all interested students to join the organization that was voted CLUB OF THE YEAR last year and to contribute your input and talents in making it another outstanding year. M.E.C.H.A. Dance is currently in the planning stages and your participation in this event will make it a wicked time of fun and dance. We look forward to hear your suggestions and ideas for other social and community activities along with our annual Cinco De Mayo and Scholarship Banquet. See you at the meeting!

Debate: See-saw strikes elusive balance

by T.C. Hannan
Chronicle Staff Writer

G. Gordon Liddy debated Dr. Hasan Hussaini on Monday Oct. 6th before a standing room only crowd of over 600 students and community members. The debate, which was moderated by Dr. Bulgerella in the Commons, was centered on the topic of terrorism—how to define it and how to end it. The event was sponsored by the A.S. Special Events Committee and coordinated by the CSU Intellectual Life Committee.

Dr. Hussaini opened the debate by providing an historical perspective on the nature of terrorism, citing incidents from as far back as Roman persecution of the Jews to as recent as the massacre at Mai Lai. He defined terrorism as being, essentially, the killing of innocent civilians, adding that there is also psychological terrorism, as in cases where governments stifle opposition with the threat of torture and jail.

"I'm sorry to say that throughout history every nation... has committed acts of terrorism," he said. Hussaini's position is that there is no justification for killing innocent civilians, that it is an act which originates in desperation and culminates in the loss of respect for human life. The solution, he contends, is not to go out and bomb known terrorist bases—this, in itself is an act of terrorism, he explains, and it can only lead to a cycle of vengeance and bloodshed where innocent people pay the price.

Dr. Hussaini outlined what he suggests is the best way to deal with terrorists: An increase of security at airports world-wide; a consistent policy which each nation adheres to—a policy which deals with the roots of terrorism (which Hussaini insists is a "local phenomenon"); a strengthening of international law; a universally accepted educational program which would foster respect for human life, a process by which known terrorists can be brought to trial and, through due process, punished in accordance with the crime they have committed.

Petition protests campus funding of Liddy

by T.C. Hannan
Chronicle Staff Writer

The Liddy/Hussaini on terrorism was the source of much discussion on our campus. But, perhaps the most controversial issue concerning that debate had little to do with the topic of terrorism. It concerned the question whether or not a man of Liddy's character should have been sponsored by university funds to speak on our campus.

Dr. Michael Clark, from the school of Public Administration, circulated a petition which stated: "Liddy is a self-confessed murderer. He is also a convicted felon. Certainly he exhibits values and behavior that undermine the spirit of the university's mission. Liddy's fame is based on his conviction in the Watergate affair and on his involvement in plots to subvert liberty and freedom of expression... (we) should cherish freedom of expression... Let Liddy come, let him speak. But need we contribute our precious resources?

The petition goes on to say that by paying Liddy to speak "we have witnessed a cherished right—freedom of expression—be wielded against itself," and that we have financed that assault. It concludes, "we demand that the Special Events Committee seriously re-evaluate the philosophy that could lead to such an invidious choice of speakers as Liddy.

Dr. Doyle Stangel, Associate Dean who heads Student Life, the main financial backer of the debate, says that our university is a state institution and that the Freedom of Speech clause in the U.S. Constitution. Most important, he says, is that the debate was co-sponsored by the A.S. Special Events Committee—a committee formed of students, staff and faculty.

"We trust the Special Events Committee to give due consideration to all the factors addressed in this petition. The judgment is upheld by the administration," he said.

Dr. Stangel also stated that "all speakers are not universally popular," George Pympton, Wally George and Angela Davis—former speakers on campus—had each stirred negative reactions on campus, he noted.

"What we strive for is a balance—to provide a full spectrum of speakers for the university community," he explained.

"Search them out and kill them"

Dr. Hussaini's primary assertion was that any act which results in the death of "innocent civilians" is an act of terrorism—be it an act of war, political insurrection, or even personal vengeance, as when the man opened fire in the McDonald's in San Diego county a few years ago. G. Gordon Liddy disputed that assertion. He said that an act of terrorism occurs when (and only when) there is a "deliberate targeting of civilians in order to advance a political cause... with no regard to whether innocent persons die in war," but they are not the targets, Liddy said. He went on to suggest that the causes of terrorism are irrelevant and should not be taken into consideration when we are deciding how to combat terrorist activities.

"America is founded on respect for life" "Terrorism is engaged in because it has proven to be effective... the minute we take into account what they want, the minute we sit down and start wriggling our hands and worrying about what causes—and so on and so forth—they are being effective," Liddy declared.

Much less sophisticated than Hussaini's outline for dealing with terrorists, Liddy presented a two part plan to counter terrorist activities: The first thing that must be done is never, ever, ever acquiesce in the political plan of the terrorist. The second thing is to search them out... and to kill them. Liddy addressed Hussaini's proposal that we should create a universal respect for human life, by saying that such a project is impossible because we can't change human nature. "Remember," he said, "that the Jews are still awaiting the coming of the Messiah, and that the Christians are still awaiting the second coming of Christ... it is then and only then that the millennium will be upon us. It is then, and only then, perhaps, that the nature of man will change."

"Search them out and kill them"

Following the formal debate, questions from the floor were taken, and the two men addressed the effects of the media on terrorism, the possibility of escalating terrorism through violent retribution, and the real effects of the U.S. raid on Libya.

Both Liddy and Hussaini reiterated their major points during this session. Liddy added that terrorists seek media coverage, while Hussaini declared that no terrorist looks around for T.V. cameras when a strike is being made.

Throughout the debate, applause was divided equally among both Hussaini and Liddy, but Liddy came away, clearly, as being the most dynamic speaker of the two. Said one audience member, "Liddy is a fantastic speaker, but his ideas are just a tad bit frightening."

The issue appears to center upon whether Liddy's presence on our campus was designed to educate us, or to entertain us, Hellenbrand said.

Soccer squad pushing to consistent goal

From a bine Monday to a "Super" Saturday, the Cal State Coyotes saw it all the week of the 4th. CSUSB saw a 4-0 loss to a dominant CSU, Dominguez Hills team, a tough 2-0 win over a stubborn Azusa Pacific squad, and a 7-0 blowout of the Poets from Whittier College.

The Coyotes Coach, Carlos Juarez, did not take the week's sole matchup lightly, "Point Loma is tough, they were a very difficult team for us last year. We will have to earn a victory over them," said Juarez.

In anticipation of next week's acid test, the Coyotes will have most of this week to work on the team's offense, said Juarez. Even though the CSUSB squad scored a season-high 7 goals in the shut out of Whittier College. The win brought the Coyotes' record to 9-5.

Scoring goals for Cal State were: Jerry O'Hara (junior, Fontana, Lake Shore HS, NV), with two, Trevor Coleman (fresman, San Bernardino, San Gorgonio HS) also with two goals, freshmen Sean Karna (San Bernardino/BBHS), Hector Venegas (Coachella/Coachella HS), and sophomore Nicky Aravsky (Taft Co/WA) spanaway Lake, and Kiko Montes (Coachella/Coachella HS) each scored one goal for the Coyote squad. The win included the second straight shutout for CSUSB goalie Randy Green (Chico/Chico St).

Coach Juarez said, "Jerry O'Hara been in a dry spell and it's good to see him playing strongly again." In looking ahead, "The team will have to push itself now to remain consistent," said the Coyote Coach.

Great attitude paces Coyote cross-country teams

The CSUSB Women's Cross Country team is undefeated and the Men's team took great strides towards finding a solid replacement in the fifth running spot.

Saturday (4th) meet was the first head-to-head competition for the Coyotes and was run in a double-dual format, (each team runs only once but is scored separately against the other two teams in the order that the runners finish).

The CSUSB Women were led by sophomore Rebecca Hodde (Riverside/Notre Dame HS) over the three mile course in a time of 19:45. Hodde captured a second place finish against Azusa Pacific University and CSUSB's Coach, Tom Burleson, in describing the remaining half of Saturday's meet. The CSUSB Men scored 40 points to Azusa Pacific University's 17, and CSUSB scored 18 versus Mount St. Mary's 38. The lower score in Cross Country wins giving the CSUSB Men a current record of 1-1 in head-to-head competition.

Brad Phillips paced the Coyote runners with a lifetime best time of 28:36 over a five mile course. Just seven seconds after Phillips was Carlos Gallegos, and only 21 seconds behind was CSUSB's strongest runner (slowed by a leg injury), freshman Robert Horvath.

Coach Burleson says his teams have the right attitude and the Men's team is working hard to overcome their lack of experience. This weekend will test both for the Coyotes as they face NCAA Division II schools, Southern Utah State and Chapman College.

Lady Spikers jump to Top 5 in region

CSUSB's Volleyball team is currently 11-5 and despite Saturday, the 4th's, loss to Biola University, the Lady Coyotes should be ranked among the top five teams regionally in the week's ratings. Ruderman felt the week's loss was a positive experience for CSUSB and that playing a tall, powerful team like Biola University enables the smaller CSUSB to develop and progress within their style of play. CSUSB played the Biola to four games with the final scores: 10-15, 15-10, 9-15, 8-15.

"The team didn't play consistently against a much taller Biola team that hit the ball much better than we did," said CSUSB coach Naomi Ruderman. Earlier in the week the Cal State team was a model of consistency. The Lady Coyotes faced Pomona-Pitzer and the University of Redlands for the third time this season and defeating both teams for the third time. CSUSB vs. Pomona-Pitzer: 16-14, 15-11, 15-6 and CSUSB vs. The University of Redlands: 15-2, 15-4, 15-5.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.

Volleyballers, ranked fourth, defeat Masters

By Matt Pollock

Although it took them a full game to get warmed up, the Lady Coyote volleyball team came back to defeat Master's College in four games last Tuesday night. 8-3, 15-9, 15-3, 15-4.

Head coach Naomi Ruderman stated that her team began the match really slow and tentative. "We were not playing our game. Slow is exactly how the volleyball match started for the Lady Coyotes. The Mustangs from Master's blew out to a 3-0 lead before CSUSB even got on the board. The Mustangs built that lead to 11-3 when Bridgett Austin put some life into her team with a spike, making the score 11-5. Master's team went on to win the game, though, 15-8. The pendulum quickly swung in the Coyotes direction as the second game began. CSUSB rushed out to an 8-1 lead before the visitors responded. After Master's came within three points at 11-8, Austin once again got her team rolling. Her service ace made the score 13-8. The freshman then made two diving saves on defense to keep a play alive in which CSUSB earned a side-out. Teammate Lissa McDonald followed with a pair of spikes to seal the game, 15-9.

The Coyotes continued their torrid pace into the third game and assembled a 6-1 lead. They ended the game with seven unanswered points and a 15-3 victory. CSUSB broke open a 3-3 tie in the next game by rattling off five straight points. A stuff by McDonald gave the home team an 8-3 lead. Hitter Kim Casey ended the match soon after as she drilled a spike into the Mustang defense. The Coyotes, who are ranked fourth in the Western Region of the U.S. among Division III schools, were led by freshmen Austin and Hodyd L. Austin was perfect on 18 serves and came up with three good digs as Li had 11 kills. Ruderman stated that both players "very alert defensive volleyballers, ranked fourth, defeat Masters".
History-making Coyote baseball team to debut

A. Christine Stanfield
Special to the Chronicle

Opening day for the CSUSB baseball team will be remembered as the first team of Coyotes ever fielded. For head coach Chuck Deagle that day will be against the team that he led as College World Series in 1985, the University of Hawaii.

Before taking on the challenge to start a baseball team from scratch, Deagle spent four years coaching the Redlands team. Besides being at the helm when the team ventured off to the College World Series, he was honored with the Coach of the Year award in 1985. But Deagle didn't see himself as a coach, he sees himself portraying the role of counselor. Deagle said anybody could tell a player to hustle, steal a base, or square, but it takes someone special to be a coach. Someone with understanding, Deagle is happy with the role he plays. "That's the way coaching is. People have the tendency to look at W's and L's, but that isn't success. Counseling is the end result."

Deagle said he believes his team should be close to one another. The key, he says, is that closeness. College life, according to Deagle, is life in a bubble. Students have no worries except to do well in classes. For those students living in the dorms there are no dirty dishes to wash nor other responsibilities to overburden someone.

During times like these, the player's coach becomes almost like a second father. No matter what anyone else says, coaches influence the young men. It was this type of influence that inspired Deagle to become a coach. One of Deagle's players, Ramee Richards, a transfer student from Redlands, said: "He has a good rapport with the players; it isn't a player-coach relationship, but rather, friend to friend."

"He expects 110 percent. He wants you to do the best you can for yourself. He wants the closeness to be able to relate to one another on the field," Richards added.

Deagle University of Redlands background influenced his view on the role education plays for an athlete. "I still believe the main purpose for being here at college is to go on an education." Deagle stressed, but added that out on the baseball field, baseball is first. "I like players who play because they want to play. That's how I grew up. Players weren't paid money to play," he said.

Deagle did mention, however, that he missed out on some players during recruitment because they didn't have the grades to participate. Education was the primary reason that Deagle moved here from Redlands. "I felt it would be a better opportunity for a full-time teaching position," he said. Besides his work here, Deagle is a full-time teacher at Fontana High School.

A good look around Deagle's office reflects the small amount of time he spends here. There are no pictures on the walls. The only personal item is a desk calendar.

"It is important that we do well this year, so we can attract other players. Though it is going to take a little time. "This team is going to be a history team. We are starting from scratch. It is going to be an interesting year. All I see are questions. Everything is brand new," he added.

"I'm happy where my career is going. I'm not complaining. That's just the way it is."

Not just another student...

Lissa McDonald is quite different from any other student that you might meet on the Cal State campus. Besides being a team captain and a talented outside hitter for the lady Coyote volleyball team, the coarse-haired, brown-haired, hazel-eyed junior is studying to become a mortician.

Billy Joel's new album, The Bridge, is a welcome swing back toward the piano man sound that made him famous.

The Bridge is the long-awaited follow-up to Joel's An Innocent Man album. Fans were left wondering about the direction Joel's music would take with the release of the '30s style music of An Innocent Man. While the record was a tremendous success, it left fans wondering if the new sound was a permanent change.

The release of Joel's greatest hits album earlier this year made for nearly a three-year wait between albums of new music. The new album is a treat, with Joel showing traces of his old brilliance. The nine-song album contains tunes that are bursting with the same energy that inspired hits like 'Piano Man', 'The Ballad of Billy the Kid', 'Miami 2017, (Business Time)' and 'Uptown.'

The Bridge is the long-awaited follow-up to Joel's An Innocent Man album. Fans were left wondering about the direction Joel's music would take with the release of the '30s style music of An Innocent Man. While the record was a tremendous success, it left fans wondering if the new sound was a permanent change.

The release of Joel's new album is a return to a piano-man sound. Which have Joel once again beating the piano keys into submission.

One of the songs, 'Baby Grand,' is a duet with Ray Charles. Joel and Charles share vocals on this blues number, but each play separate piano's. While Cyndi Lauper gets credit for sharing the vocals on 'Code of Silence,' fortunately—does little more than sing background on what is a fine tune.

While the lyrics on this album don't quite match the standards of the gut-wrenching, 'Piano Man,' or the drug-abuse commentary of 'Captain Jack,' Joel shows that he can still turn a phrase in 'Getting Closer,' which features a Hammond B-3 synthesizer solo by Steve Winwood.

Joel reflects on his road to stardom, 'What was ripped off by professionals/is not all that it seems/While I must live up to contracts/I did not give up my dreams.'

If you've been waiting for the old Billy Joel to return, this is probably as close as you are going to get. It seems that all artists evolve as their careers go on. Yet not many stand up to the test of time as well as Joel does. While his music has changed and been experimented with, he has never put out an album that did not contain quality music.

She's gotta have it is a smaller release which title sounds misleadingly, sleazy, is an interesting and funny film about a black woman and her three lovers which has just left the high rent district in Hollywood, and found its way to our local screens.

Cleverly done, the movie twists the traditional sex roles in a way that gives Nola, the swinging bachelorette (and centerpiece of the film), a territory more familiar to young men on the loose, in which to stomp around. Meantime, the men in her life that care about her become secondary to young men (in the loose, in a bachelorette (and centenarian) role), so much so that Nola's ways eventually come to light. Eventually though, Nola's ways catch up to her and she finds that very few men want to be treated like sex objects. (Hey grown up, okay?) Indeed when the situation inevitably blows up in her face, mostly through her own doing, there may be more than a few "bachelors afraid of commitment" out there who see themselves magnified for what they really are (incredibly lucky to get away with it, for awhile).

Will she settle down and raise a herd of nymphomaniacs? Will she move in with Warren Beatty and Don Johnson? Some people never change and some don't change until they're ready. The answers to these questions are well worth the price of admission. The film is funny, but short and poor, another is a male model with great looks and a superhuman body, but is incredible obsolete, even to the point of being labeled a "pseudo-negro" by one of his rivals. The third woman, her main interest, is solid and respectable, caring, a good citizen, not bad looking, in short: a mind-blowing bore.

Nola likes sex, and the film is admirably blunt about that. What she doesn't like are the ridiculous taste, she distances herself and she doesn't like are the ridiculous taste, she distances herself and she distances herself, and she sets ground-rules. In the beginning one tends to order Nola's independence, if not her promiscuity (I mean, you have heard of AIDS haven't you?)

THE ALTERNATIVE IS HERE!
Student Counseling available

Feeling depressed? Having difficulty in a relationship? Worried about work?

Free help is available through the Community Counseling Center at California State University, San Bernardino. Staffed by quality counselors with diverse backgrounds, the center provides counseling services for emotional problems caused by divorce, death in the family, loss of a job, change of careers, lack of motivation, relationship problems. Counseling also is available for sexual problems, child rearing, premature information and the elderly. The center is operated during the university's academic year, October through June.

"This is an ideal public service because few people can afford private counseling," remarked Dr. Edward Teyber, associate professor of psychology and director of the center. "In an era when the Reagan administration is reducing funding for social services, there are few government-supported mental health resources left."

Free counseling is offered primarily for individuals and couples, rather than children and families, Teyber stated. "Anything that is troublesome, conflicting, or problematic is appropriate for someone to seek counseling. Many clients who use the services are normally able to cope with life's ups and downs but may suddenly face a crisis which has disrupted their lives."

The counseling is conducted by graduate-level psychology students ranging in age from 22 to 45, who work under the supervision of clinical psychologists on the Cal State, San Bernardino faculty. Each counselor undergoes a rigorous acceptance procedure and is evaluated on the basis of grades, background and experience, letters of recommendation and interview performances as well as several other factors.

Potential clients may call a 24-hour message phone, (714) 887-7272, to request a call back. Dr. Teyber will return all calls and schedule an initial interview to answer further questions and introduce clients to the clinic. He then will appoint a counselor whom he feels will best meet the needs of the client.

Although the Community Counseling Center does not provide services for persons who are suicidal, psychotic, alcoholic, addicted to drugs, or who may need medical help, the director will refer the client to someone who may be of assistance.

Clients meet with counselors for 50-minute sessions once a week. The length of the counseling is not limited; clients may continue through June when the center closes for the summer. Many return in September to continue with the same counselor or be reappointed to a new one, Teyber said. All counseling sessions are kept strictly confidential.

ARE YOU A LEADER?

Associated Students Board of Directors has two openings and representatives from the school of Social and Behavioral Sciences and Undeclared Majors. If you are interested in finding out how you can become part of this dynamic Board please contact Vice President Steve Hekman at 887-7494 or just stop by the A.S. office in the Student Union.

Attention Potential leaders, you must have a 'C' average or above, and must not have class on Tuesdays 10-12. You just might have filled all of the qualifications to become a leader!

GOOD LUCK! ! ! !

New chair promotes "philosophy of growth"

by T. C. Hannan
Chronicle Staff Writer

More students. More faculty. More buildings. These are but the obvious signs of expansion on our campus—the physical result of what can aptly be termed a Philosophy of Growth. This philosophy is at the heart of a well coordinated effort to maintain a high quality of education here at CSUSB, while at the same time increasing campus visibility throughout the community, the state, and eventually, the nation. With this in mind, we are pleased to welcome to our campus a man who takes these goals seriously—the new Department Chair of the schools of Accounting and Finance, Dr. Mohamed Vaziri.

Dr. Vaziri comes to Cal State with an array of impressive credentials and experiences. He received his M.S. in Engineering from the University of Oklahoma, where he also earned his Doctorate in International Finance. He went on to do Post Graduate work in Investment Analysis at George Washington University. His experience in financial management ranges from his work as an accountant for such firms as Lylands Motors, England, and Town and Country, Inc., in Oklahoma, to his work as a financial analyst for Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. Dr. Vaziri has also done pioneer work on quality control for the Washington Metro Transit Authority, the results of which were published nationwide. In addition, Dr. Vaziri has worked for the Department of Energy as well as the Small Business Administration.

Presently, Dr. Vaziri is merging these experiences with this University's expansionist philosophy. He has outlined a three-part plan which he hopes will insure a profitable future, not only for the school of financing and accounting, but, ideally, for the whole University. While he emphasizes that his primary goal is "to provide the highest quality of education through a flexible curriculum and a dedicated faculty," Dr. Vaziri also says that he intends to work consistently at making his department highly visible in the local business community. This visibility will be established through the involvement of local businesses in the curriculum of the Finance and Accounting Department. Dr. Vaziri refers to this as the "external" phase of his plan. It involves creating an Industry Review Board comprised of local CPA firms and financial institutions which would review curriculum, provide internships and job opportunities, as well as providing funding for the establishment of new institutions here on campus. Another item on this "external" agenda will be to visit with the local high schools and junior colleges in order to create an enrollment base, as well as to insure that incoming students are prepared for the University experience.

On his "internal" agenda, Dr. Vaziri hopes to establish a "master departmental syllabus" which will offer more core classes per quarter in order to insure a more consistent quality of education. He notes that "based upon the percentage of people passing the CPA exam, CSUSB currently ranks number one in the state and number eleven in the nation." In order to maintain those high ratings, Dr. Vaziri wishes to add more flexibility to the curriculum, and an Accounting Lab has already been established where students can work for fifty hours per quarter (in addition to class instruction) on a computer, to enhance their general problem solving skills. Another item on the "internal" agenda is to change the composition of the faculty by hiring new PhD's and by converting lecture positions to tenure track positions. This is to help integrate the professors into the new curricular changes.

Dr. Vaziri also hopes to establish, this academic year, a center to promote international business—an idea, he says, which came from Dean Porter. The idea is to get local businesspersons to train international business skills in matching products with an international market through appropriate lines of information and consulting.

Students wishing to receive a Certificate in Financial Planning may not have very long to wait. Dr. Vaziri is currently writing a proposal to solicit funds for the establishment of an insurance and banking center. This will provide students with a better working knowledge of financial services, and pending a certificate license which Gov. Deukmejian may sign any day now, will provide a Certificate in Financial Planning.

Most important is that the changes in curriculum will attempt to improve the quality of education on a national level. Dr. Vaziri notes that a Certificate in Financial Planning and Accounting students will be prepared to participate in national proficiency examinations such as the Certified Financial Planner exam and the Chartered Financial Consultant exam.

Dr. Vaziri is also planning to institute interdisciplinary programs which will help students in all schools market their skills effectively upon graduation.

Students who have even the smallest interest in any of the changes which Dr. Vaziri outlined here should go see him in A.D. 160. He is especially interested in fostering student involvement in the department, and would also like to help undecided majors find a field where they can develop to their full potential.

Certificate in Spanish now offered

By Deborah Carter

The Bureau of the Census has predicted that Hispanics will constitute the largest minority group in the United States by the end of the 1980's. The enormous increase in the Hispanic sector of North American society will bring about a proportionate increase in consumers of all kinds of goods and services. However, only those trained in the Hispanic language and culture will be able to successfully communicate within the vast economic marketplace of the Hispanic North American.

According to Dr. Rafael E. Correa, professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, Cal State University is offering a certificate in Spanish for Public Services. "In this program we will offer practical application of the language. We seem to be having people training more and more as interpreters and translators, especially for the court system."

The program includes upper division Spanish courses, as well as courses being offered through extended education. Advertisements of this certificate program have been sent to high schools and junior colleges in this area, as well as to the Chamber of Commerce for distribution.

Next quarter, Dr. Tatiana Galvan, a Fulbright scholar, will be teaching one of the required courses, Spanish 316: Spanish in Communication Media. Galvan is from the Universidad Nacional Autonoma De Mexico (UNAM). Correa said, "this is a unique opportunity for students to be exposed to someone who is a bilingual expert in communications."

In order to qualify for the certificate, a student must be enrolled at CSUSB, as well as taking the required courses in sequence. After the requirements have been met, the student is then eligible to apply for the certificate.

For the student wishing to practice the Spanish language, Correa suggests that, “students go to the Commons between 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. on Wednesdays and make use of the Spanish table.” The Spanish table is for students, staff, and faculty who wish to practice their Spanish language, make friends, talk to professors, and practice, practice, practice.

The Devil has gained more attention in the Inland Empire. At least that’s what police officials and religious leaders in the Fontana area would like people to think. In fact, there is not only evidence of Devil worship in the area — Satanism is on the rise in the Fontana area. But more of it has appeared in the Spring of 1986.

And that has them worried. One of the problems in the area is that people who say that Fontana area residents are over-reacting to various incidents of alleged Satanic practices. They say the worry is a misinformed or are being led astray by bias.

With this in mind, more supporters in the Inland Empire are really a matter of opinion. Depending on who’s opinion it is, people — teenagers, especially — are either taking their cues from Hell or they’re just doing something they can’t explain. Law enforcement officials say one thing, authoritative religious organizations say another. "I try to keep my ear to the ground," said Gillett Dugget, pastor of Calvary Chapel in Fontana. "You can’t be accurate, some aren’t."

According to reports in the Fontana Herald and The San Bernardino County Sun, Fontana and San Bernardino Sheriff’s Department officials have found graffiti encompassing various Satanic symbols. Law enforcement officials have also found what they claim are remnants of Satanic altars and animal sacrifices in different parts of the county.

Attention is also being paid to alleged increases in heavy metal and punk rock lyrics. Those who say Satanism is on a rise both locally and nationally believe that Satanism practices such as sexual perversion, drug abuse and violence are "camouflage" being made between rock music, anti-social behavior and some say is the ultimate in rebellion.

Satanism is becoming the banner for the rebellious teenagers. "There are a lot of Nazis, unholy, of Satanic窜

That leaves people concerned with the alleged rise of Satanism with only fragments of evidence or exist in a cult that’s only directly with someone said to be 'possessed' by Satanic demons.

"Police are the most object at as far as giving you occult, satanic definitions," said Dugget.

Even Warnke’s book, which follows his tenure as a high-ranking occult member in the Inland Empire, leaves few clues. No last names, dates or specific locales are offered in The Satan Seller to attribute to Satanists in the area.

Despite what some may regard as a loose, subjective view of religion, or simply an emotional reaction to things that seem Satanic, Inland Empire law enforcement officials still think the public should know Satanism may exist in the area.

This only complicates what’s become a legal, moral and emotional issue in the Inland Empire.

"The philosophy (of Satanism) is secrecy," said Jim Pomercy, an Upland teenager who is a student of widely labeled Satanist Aleister Crowley. Pomercy does not claim he is a Satanist. He does say, though, that a true Satanist does not reveal himself or herself.

The School of Hope, also referred to as the Association for Retarded Citizens, operates under a dual license that includes a Work Activity Program (WAP) and a Day Training Activity Program (DTAC). It is run with the promise that retarded citizens can become partially self-reliant and functional in society. WAP clients are those deemed most functional. Under this program, retarded citizens are trained in areas such as lawn maintenance, janitorial training, work training center (includes recycling program), and woodshop. Also included are basic studies in language stimulation, independent living skills and assertiveness training.

A behavior modification program plays an important role in reducing inappropriate behavior.

The Day Training Activity Center, designed for severely retarded citizens who require close supervision and additional training.

While vocational training is taught, emphasis is placed on communication, cognitive development, self-help skills and physical adaptation. These basic skills are vital to helping retarded citizens become functional and independent in society," said Dugget.

"Every individual has a Critical Skills Model (ICSM), a relatively new program, is being implemented at Inland County Regional Center. The retarded clients come from board and care facilities, private homes, and convalescent homes. The clients at the School of Hope range in age from 18-72 years. Prior to entrance into the School of Hope, clients may have attended special schools, mainstream schools or other institutions of learning. While academic skills are encouraged, it is not a requirement for admission.

Sexual Assault: Exploring the Myths

by Sunnie Bell
Health Center Intern

The timing of Sexual Assault Awareness Week, October 13-17, fits well with the start of college. As never before, young women and men will face threats of force with which they must cope. Ideas that contrast with previous learning will be explored both formally and in those "classrooms" of everyone's private world.

Mental exploration of alternatives is good, but it can also be confusing and upsetting. The confusion may be temporary, but its consequences can be lasting. Let the choices that may affect your life be your own. Let the choices that may affect your life be your own.

Next week, we'll discuss Alcoholism, Alcohol abuse along with sexual harassment and unwilling submission have some things in common — one of which is that both harm self-esteem. Ponder this: Do behaviors that result from diminished inhibitions (e.g. after alcohol ingestion) represent the "real" you? Or is the "real" you a composite of many things, including those inhibitions? Think about it.

There's a small correction to last week's Health Corner. The Student Health Center hours are Monday through Thursdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Fridays and Quarter Breaks from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Do come in and use this service. It's here for you! Call 887-7641 or stop in.

If you have article suggestions, questions, or any communication at all in regard to the Health Corner, please address mail to: Sunnie Bell, Student Health Center.

Successful students enroll in adjuncts. Adjunct courses carry two nonbaccalaureate units! Adjunct courses are FREE! They are available for these courses:

- Political Science 203 - 12 noon MW & 12 noon TTH
- English 170 - 8:20 AM MW
- Psychology 100 - 2:40 PM MW

I heard a Preacher Say
by J Russell Horton

I heard a preacher of the gospel say: "Noah's days weren't like ours." He's right, of course, for no discerning a clergyman. A bombshell Noah never knew, neither saw a volume of Allen Ginsberg; both enough to wrench your guts with flesh-rotting stench. Noah never heard the whisper of 1.4 million-a-year babies jerked like so many slimy stocked fish from a pay-per-pound derbypond, two pounds on the hook. Old Noah never inhaled the deep brown cancer mist of faggot nicotine; the corrupted gasoline vapors that erupted the eyes on a hot city day; never took on the mind numbing agent orange, mustard gas, or napalm, the gold, frankincense, and myrrh offered by the wise doctors who disciple the religion of Universal Hate: humanism. No, Noah never saw the torch red flames to a spectacle haunting ghost of the primateval fall. I suppose he must have known about child molestation and abuse; rape of somebody's thirteen-year-old fair-haired daughter; sodomy of your ancestor. That's news? And he didn't even have a Tribune to read about AIDS; organized oven-stuffing of his progeny; to read of brother-nuggets, wife-beaters, omnipotence-haters. And what of Noah and atheists? Was he neighbor to a down? Did the better of his sister's brothers, sons and daughters of men, uniform God in unhallowed halls, where dark robes are donned to celebrate the cloning of lectrum thumping mythology. Do this year's baccalaureate exams? I guess Noah never watched satellite pornography, except in his 25 inch diagonal black and white window frame. No, Noah's days weren't like ours. Jesus Christ come quickly, I don't suppose we thought of quite that way. Yes, that preacher must be right. Noah's days weren't quite like ours. Jesus Christ come quickly, I don't have the minister's discernment.

Students desiring to participate in on-campus interviews must be registered with the Career Planning and Placement Center and have attended half-hour informational orientation session. Orientation sessions are held weekly in the Center (SS-116). The sessions are designed to register you with the Center as well as explain in detail the steps you need to take to schedule an interview(s) with recruiters visiting our campus.

The schedule of orientation sessions for the 1985-86 academic year includes:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Mondays</th>
<th>5:00-5:30 p.m.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

For those unable to attend any of the above times, please contact the Career Planning and Placement Center at (714) 887-7551 concerning your needs.

Unless otherwise specified, Senior, Graduate or Alumni status is required to interview with employers requiring appointments.

All students must visit with recruiters on the South side of the Library who do not require individual appointments.

Appointments are scheduled on a first come, first served basis.

A final resume must be submitted for each employer you sign up for at the time your interview is scheduled.

Changes in the recruiter calendar will be posted as soon as new additions are confirmed.

Tour of art studios planned for public

The public is invited to join the Friends of the Gallery at Cal State for a tour of art studios in Venice and Los Angeles Oct. 18. Membership in the Friends is open to all who support the gallery and its programs.

Dr. Julius Kaplan, Cal State professor of art, has said the tour will provide an opportunity for art students to see where the art world is heading, as well as helping them to add to their own dimensions of art. He noted that the gallery here at the University is the only one that enables world class art exhibits to be shown in the San Bernardino area. "This is one way," he said, "that the people of San Bernardino and other nearby areas can experience the pleasure of seeing international works of art, because the gallery is open to the public."

Nava believed Garth Clark helped draw people to attend the opening. Clark is acknowledged as a high authority in the art world. He has written several books on art and owns galleries in New York and Los Angeles. Clark's exhibition consisted of 20th century art. The theme for this exhibition was "New City" which fit perfectly considering the show itself consisted of ceramics, porcelain and sculpture. There was a variation in the 31 artworks displayed, but they all seemed to have one thing in common, quality. This was the first major ceramic exhibition to come to the University in years. Clark's quick wit and personal way of explaining the art works and the artist added flavor to the show itself. Both Nava and Clark were pleased at how well the art works were displayed in the art gallery room, along with the dramatic lighting.

The exhibition will open from Oct. 2 to Oct. 30. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Nava is trying to arrange evening hours, if there are any students interested in helping out, contact the art department. Nava was so encouraged by the reception that Clark received that he will try to have more guest speakers to cover other areas in art.

High schools to attend speech tourney

More than 500 high school students from five states are expected to bone their public speaking skills Oct. 18-19 during the Third Annual Coyote Invitational Speech and Debate Tournament at Cal State, San Bernardino. Applications, which will be accepted until 5 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 15, reflect increased interest in high school debating as well as Southern California schools this year, said Dr. Fred Jandy, chair of the Cal State Communication Department, which is sponsoring the event. "Past participants have included Bonanza High School from Las Vegas and many area schools, including Claremont, San Bernardino, Alta Loma and as far south as San Diego," Jandy commented. "This year we will have competitors from Nevada and Arizona, as well as many more area high schools of which are as far away as Bakersfield."

The tournament is expected to occupy most of the Cal State, San Bernardino classrooms over the two-day contest, offering competition in dramatic and humorous interpretation, original oratory, extempro impromptu and expository speaking. Coincident with the construction of a campus radio station at the university, the tournament will focus on "radio speaking" during a special feature of the competition known as the "Coyote Challenge." Contestants will be asked to prepare and deliver a mock five-minute radio newscast.

Team debate contestants will tackle the proposition: "Resolved: That the federal government should implement a comprehensive, long-term agricultural policy in the U.S." Competitors for the Lincoln-Douglas style debate will speak to: "Resolved: The juvenile justice system does not meet the needs of contemporary American society."

Talented alumni offering art exhibition

The Graphic Design Alumni Art Exhibition is now on display in Gallery II in the Art Department, located in the Visual Arts building. The show will run until Oct. 31. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m.

The artists represented in the show were CSUSB art majors who graduated with their art concentration in graphic design. The artists are: Jeff Adair, Terri Adams, David Everett, Grace Fermier, Paul Gonzales, Lisa Lopez, Jeff Rey, Thomas Ruvolu and Rick Schnebel.

Jeff Adair (1983), is now a graphic designer for the CSUSB Office of Extended Education and a former student. He produces brochures, posters, logo designs and other promotional materials. He is also involved in advertising design and marketing strategies for various businesses throughout the Inland Empire.

Terri Adams (1980) is a graphic designer and technical illustrator for Tetra Tech, Inc., a subsidiary of Honeywell located in San Bernardino. She does layout and coordination of computer maps for use in environmental impact statements for the Air Force. She also produces illustrations and designs of support collateral materials relating to that environmental impact statement.

David Everett (1986), is a graphic designer/illustrator for Robert Shaw, Controls in Corona. He creates brochures, flyers, catalogs and technical illustrations.

Grace Fermier (1984), is Art Director at Color Image Systems, Inc. in Riverside. She is responsible for every aspect of this company's graphic designing, including advertising design and concept, and art direction in photography. She directs a staff of graphic designers, illustrators, air brush artists, copywriters, photographers, and sales representatives.

Paul Gonzales (1986) is an Editorial Artist at The Press Enterprise in Riverside. He designs newspaper feature covers and in-formational graphics.

Lisa Lopez (1985) is an industrial artist for TRW, Inc., Ballistic Missiles division/Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino. She designs brochures, logo designs, flyers, posters and slide presentations.

Jeff Rey (1984), is an illustrator for the San Bernardino County Department of Public Health. He creates and produces posters, brochures, flyers and logo designs.

Thomas Ruvolu (1981), is a graphic designer for his own graphic design firm, Roman Design, located here in San Bernardino. Tom produces illustrations, publications, advertising designs, brochures, direct mail pieces, logo designs and promotional concepts.

Rick Schnebel (1983), is a graphic designer for the Aerospace Audio-Visual Department at Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino.

More information on the show can be obtained by calling Prof. Janice Goloinich, the Gallery II curator, at 887-7461.

QUESTION #2.

HOW CAN THE BUDGET-CONSCIOUS COLLEGE STUDENT SAVE MONEY?

a) Save over 50% off AT&T’s weekday rates on out-of-state calls during nights and weekends.

b) Don’t buy textbooks when “Monarch Notes” will do just fine.

c) Save 40% off AT&T’s weekday rate on out-of-state calls during evenings.

d) Count on AT&T for exceptional value and high quality service.

e) Hang around with the richest kids in school; let them pick up the tab whenever possible.

If you’re like most college students in the western hemisphere, you try to make your money go a long way. That’s why you should know that AT&T Long Distance Service is the right choice for you. AT&T offers so many terrific values. For example, you can save over 50% off AT&T’s day rate on calls during weekends until 5 pm Sunday, and from 11 pm to 8 am, Sunday through Friday. Call between 5 pm and 11 pm, Sunday through Friday, and you’ll save 40% off our day rate.

Ever dial a wrong number? AT&T gives you immediate credit if you do. And of course, you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections any place you call.

To find out more about how AT&T can help save you money, give us a call. With a little luck, you won’t have to hang around with the rich kids. Call toll-free today, at 1 800 222-0300.

English help for foreign students

By Karen Reese
Special to The Chronicle

Hidden on the fifth floor of the Phipps Library is an office better known to foreigners than to CSUSB students. It is the central information for 42 people from a variety of countries: Japan, Saudi Arabia, Korea, United Arab Emirates, Columbia, Jordan, Indonesia and Malaysia.

The office is headquarters for the American Culture and Language Program (ACLP) on campus directed by Linda Chaffee, the 42 people are students in an intensive English language learning program. The ACLP challenges students five hours a day, five days a week of English instruction in areas of grammar, vocabulary, reading, pronunciation and conversation. ACLP’s goal is to enable the students to experience American culture and become fluent in its language. The program includes field trips to Disneyland, the Brea Mall for ice-skating, lunch at a Mexican restaurant and various other activities.

Some of the students want to become fluent in English because they believe it will open up job opportunities in their own countries such as hotel or international business jobs. Other students are interested in getting into an American University which requires them to first pass an English proficiency test. Because ACLP students are trying to learn American culture and language, they’re thrilled when they’re able to meet an American their age, according to Chaffee. She also mentioned that the ACLP would love an opportunity to practice speaking English. She encourages all CSUSB students to participate in the program. For more information students can stop by the ACLP office in PL 503 or call 887-7666.
