Baldino wins run-off

By Ray Byers

Joe Baldino was elected freshman class president in the run-off election Nov. 3.

Baldino narrowly won the election with a total of 27 votes; his opponent, Anthony Duncan, received 24.

Voter apathy was apparent when only 51 freshmen cast ballots out of 62 that were eligible to vote, making that a turnout of 8.5 percent.

In that election held Oct. 27 and 28, a total of 68 ballots were cast for freshman class president, a turnout of 14 percent. At that time Baldino received 32, Duncan 31 and Mark Womack 22.

Baldino was not available for comment on his victory.

Cal. State student is finalist at Disneyland

Lauri Reinhardt, a 22-year-old resident of Whittier, was selected as one of four finalists for the title of Disneyland's Ambassador to the Park's Sleeping Beauty Castle.

Reinhardt will be hoping to succeed 1976 Ambassador through the undemandingly funny entertainment of that era, opened in January 1935 in New York. A successful 1969 revival was staged by George Abbott, who was the co-author with John Cecil Holm.

The weekly plot revolves around a young man, played by Morris Ridgeway of San Bernardino, who writes greeting cards for a living and picks winning horses for a pastime, without actually betting on them.

Things start to happen when he meets three down-and-out gamblers, played by Paul DeMee and J.C. Wright of San Bernardino.

Lauri Reinhardt, a 22-year-old resident of Whittier, was selected as one of four finalists for the title of Disneyland's Ambassador to the Park's Sleeping Beauty Castle.

Reinhardt was born in Whittier, California, and graduated from that city's Sierra High School. She received her B.A. in psychology from the University of California, Riverside this June, and is currently seeking a Master's degree from California State College, San Bernardino.

Reinhardt, who enjoys the theater, playing volleyball, swimming and skiing in her spare time, began her Disneyland career as a hostess in Sara Lee's Cafe Orleans. She subsequently became a Ride Operator in the Tomorrowland area, where she is now a permanent part-time employee.

In addition to Reinhardt, the other contestants are: Susan Donald, 21, of Tustin; Dawn Parish, 19, of Huntington Beach; and Vicki Pender, 20, of Laguna Beach.

The individual chosen will succeed 1976 Ambassador Christina Schendel as the official hostess for dignitaries visiting the Park. She will also represent Disneyland in her travels throughout the United States and the world during the coming year.

Metric class offered

Drivers who object to the 55-mile speed limit may be happy to learn that before too long they may travel briskly along at 88 kilometers per hour. Those in the metric now are aware that it's really the same thing. The uninitiated may be interested in a three-session class, "America Goes Metric," offered in Lake Arrowhead starting Nov. 12.

The Cal State, San Bernardino extension class, a practical workshop experience in the use of the metric system, is designed for everyone. This includes educators, health service employees, homemakers, engineers, students, firemen. In fact no one is excluded.

Meetings are 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Friday, Nov. 12* and 9 a.m. to 12 noon, Saturdays, Nov. 13 and 20 at Rim of the World High School.

Teachers are beginning to teach the metric system this fall, with the centimeter introduced in the first and second grades.

In other areas, metric measurements are showing up: some soft drinks may be bought in liters, some cars are converting.

New metric cookbooks are out. Hane says, but adds, "Don't panic. The measurements we're used to will be listed also."

In the future, a man who weighs 176 will get on the scales and find that his weight is 80 (kilograms).

Cost for the one-unit education course is $22. Registration is at the first meeting or in advance through the Office of Continuing Education at Cal State, San Bernardino.

Dean Hane, the instructor, who is mathematics coordinator for the Riverside County Schools, assures prospective students that they need not be a mathematician to take the course. Only prerequisite, and that's not official, is third grade arithmetic. The course will be easy-going, he promises, with films and actual measurements of tables, weights, etc., accompanying the study of figures.

Speaking of figures, how about measurements of 92-61-90 (Centimeters, that is.)

GI Bill costs at all time high

Unprecedented use of the current GI Bill by veterans and service personnel has resulted in higher dollar costs during its first 10 years than the combined total of the two previous GI Bills, the Veterans Administration revealed today.

More than $30 billion has been paid to 6.8 million trainees since the current bill was enacted in 1966. Benefits will continue through 1989, but the period for earning new eligibility will be closed out Dec. 31, 1978, by recent legislation.

Total cost of the World War II GI Bill, which ended in 1956, was $14.5 billion. The Korean Conflict Bill cost $4.5 billion during its 12-year existence.

The GI Bill expenditures of more than $3 billion for fiscal year 1976 represented 5 percent of the total VA budget outlay.

Increased enrollments and higher monthly allowances are chief causes for the greater expenditures, a VA spokesman explained. Almost 64 percent of the eligible Vietnam Era veterans have received some form of training under the current GI Bill. Slightly more than half of the eligible World War II veterans enrolled in training while only 43.4 percent of the total eligibles from the Korean Conflict participated.

Monthly allowances for a single veteran under the World War II GI Bill started at $50, eventually reaching $75. The single veteran training under the Korean Bill received $110 monthly. Today's single veteran, attending school full time, receives $235 monthly.

The VA expenditures include $23 million paid during the past 10 years to almost 750,000 active-duty service members enrolled in GI Bill training.

College level courses continue to be the most popular form of training for veterans and service personnel. Almost 3.7 million persons have enrolled in college courses, compared to a combined total of 3.4 million under the two previous programs.

Saga of a returning woman student

By Mary Martin

(Author’s Note: In the following article I make mention many times of the Returning Woman Student. For reasons of brevity, after the first mention, I use only the initials, RWS. Sometimes it is meant to be plural and sometimes singular. The reader will have to judge the person number meant by it used in the sentence. It feels so great to be able to set my initials, RWS. I wondered, what did make we do it? What makes anyone return to school after such a long absence? After talking with many Returning Women Students (RWS), I found there was no specific reason. The answers varied from “because I was bored” to “I want to make something of myself.”

Most of the women I talked with were like myself — their children were school in all day, or in some cases the children were old enough to be already left home. Also, some of the RWS are divorced or widowed and are trying to find the work force for the first time. By returning to school, they hope to improve their chances in an employment market that is generally oriented toward the young.

Others are those who have been married, seemingly all their lives, and whose every positive action has been towards their family. They are the ones who thought their own education was not important. It was the husband who would be the breadwinner. It was he that needed the education. So she worked and supported the family while he went to school. After her graduation, she either kept working at her job, which by now was paying fairly good wages for a woman without an education, or she quit and started working full time at being Super Mom.

Either way, she was still regarded as an extension of her husband and-or children. The one comment that I heard more often than any other in talking with these RWS was, “I seemed to have no identity of my own.”

Probably in my thirties I replied I was from one woman who very sensibly told the other, “the one day I was washing dishes and I came to the realization that in five years all my children would be in college or on their own with their own plans for the future. My husband has his career which takes a lot of his time. In five years I would be forty-four years old. Not exactly ancient, but what would I then? I started seriously thinking about myself and I panicked. What would I do? Was this it for me? Was my future going to be that of a middle-aged matron baby-sitting her grandchildren with maybe a card party or volunteer work thrown in a couple of days a week?”

Most of the other replies were similar in content. Others, like myself, just sort of fell into it. I started with just one night class in a subject that interested me. I had no particular goal in mind. As I got into the quarter, however, I found the class stimulating and I thrived on the challenge it presented.

After that first quarter, I started full time and then I found the challenge not to be so much at school as at home. Coping with the responsibilities and demands made at home and at the same time meeting the responsibilities and demands that school presents takes a lot of fortitude and nerves of steel. For those who have not experienced this phenomenon, it might be hard to believe that a son can knock out his two permanent front teeth, a daughter can fall off a horse and get a knee fracture, another son get the flu and a husband with mononucleosis can all happen in the space of one afternoon, but it does happen. Believe me.

Of course, there are also the normal everyday responsibilities of transporting kids to band practice, baseball practice, dental appointments, ad nauseam.

All the work notwithstanding, probably the hardest problem to contend with is the guilt associated with the diminishing time one can spend with members of her family, especially if you have accustomed to it. It takes while for a family to adjust to the new circumstances. They don’t understand why she doesn’t have the time to play tennis, or go with them to the ballgames, or why she can’t go on those weekend trips anymore, or why she is asking them to do a lot more work around the house that she used to do automatically.

It takes a lot of fortitude for the family to cope also.

Next to the problems a RWS has at home, the problems faced in the classroom with teachers and other students are really miniscule. However, they are there.

Teachers, on the whole, do not care about the age of the student they teach. Most are rather noncommittal when asked how they felt about the various ages of students. Some thought that older students added a lot to the class because of their experience and application to their studies. Some others, however, felt that in some cases adult students were more ready to challenge their statements thus causing them to lose a degree of control of the class, especially in those classes that stressed abstract thinking.

Younger students, particularly in the last few years, more or less accept older students as a fact of life.

The principal problem, if it can be called a problem, is only with a few students who think that a RWS gets her A’s “because you’re just a housewife, so you got all kinds of time to study.”

One misinformation applies on the other side too, however. Many RWS, at least at first, feel that they can’t compete with the newly graduated high school students. They feel they will have to work “twice” as hard just to keep even.

Of course, we know that it is not the age that makes a good or bad student, but if it is whether or not one is conscientious regarding one’s classwork and whether or not one takes pride in what he-she is doing.

If the RWS has conscientiousness and pride and a cooperative family, none of the problems presented are insurmountable. In fact, if really she is a competitor, these little obstacles will serve as her anti-Nemesis, making her more determined than ever to succeed. It is as though the RWS is saying, “Look out world, I’ve been held back long enough. You better make room for me because I’m on my way. Somebody is going to feel the impact and it is going to be resounding!”

As for me, I have to get home and get a glass man out to replace the bedroom window the boys broke playing football. Sure hope he gets there before the electrician; otherwise the electrician is going to get rather chily trying to get the power back in the house. You wouldn’t think putting a little metal chain in a light socket would blow out every plug in the house, would you?

Woodturning displayed

By Cheryl Brown

Leo Doyle, associate professor of Visual Studies at Cal State, will be showing his work in woodturning at the Cal State Art Gallery starting Friday, Nov. 12 and running through Dec. 2. Woodturning is the oldest method of working wood. Doyle has created a new, innovative approach to this method which emphasizes design rather than technique.

Among the items to be shown will be a lamp, a chess set, tables, a free-standing mirror, and various types of containers such as jewelry boxes. Traditional methods, those started in England, emphasized technique rather than design. Doyle emphasizes that in his work, "most effort goes into the design, with less emphasis being placed on technique."

Doyle is currently writing a book tentatively entitled, "The Amateur's Guide to Professional Woodturning," which incorporates his ideas about teaching design to the beginning student of wood-turning in a short period of time.

The exhibit will include pieces from Doyle's private collection of show pieces, and new items that have yet to be shown. Doyle has shown his work at California Design and other art exhibits. In his fifth year of instruction at Cal State, Doyle is presently teaching Woodwork, Furniture Design, Design Studies, and Three Dimensional Design.

The present exhibition is Doyle's second show at Cal State's Gallery.

The wood working program at Cal State started three years ago with a limited number of students that were primarily male. The class had grown in popularity over the three years, so as to have a waiting list and about half women and half men. Doyle also teaches the Woodturning class through extension.

Nov. 12th at 8 p.m. will be the opening of the show at the Gallery, which is located west of the book store in the Fine Arts Building. The show will be open to the public.

For help finding a job, see a movie, get fast answers, listen to music, stay in shape, play a game, educate your green thumb.

a winner at last

By Kerry Kugelman

After a year with no new releases ("Here and There" can be ignored as serious album, since it was released to finish a contract), Elton John has come up with another winner — this time with a double album entitled "Blue Moves" and, after hearing the record, think I it was well worth the wait.

Touted as an effort by John into jazz, gospel, and blues, the album certainly lives up to its billing, but in a subtle way. Though the musical styles featured on the album occasionally become obvious, in numbers like "Boogie Pilgrim," "Where's the Shooz," and "Idol," most of the album just sounds like... well, like Elton John: flawless arrangements (thank you, Gus Dudgeon), superb vocals, and perfect melodies.

It is interesting that with "Blue Moves," John's second album made with his new band, has been permitted, and evidently encouraged, members of the band to contribute material for use. Hence, about forty percent of the new album is a joint effort between Elton and the band. Even Bernie Taupin has tried a hand at writing music, in collaboration with Elton, on one instrumental, and another non-vocal track is entirely the effort of Caleb Quaye.

Besides making the new album an amazin hour for the band, John has also managed to use numerous musicians and vocalists on almost every song. The backing vocals on "Chameleon" may sound faintly reminiscent of the Beach Boys, and well they should, because Bruce Johnston both directed and sang in them. David Crosby and Graham Nash, the London Symphony Orchestra, Toni Tenille, the Brecker Brothers horn section, and the Rev. James Cleveland's famous (remember Dodger Stadium last year?) Cornerstone Institutional Baptist Community Choir also make appearances on the album.

Although it is too soon yet to say whether "Blue Moves" will become a classic album, in the tradition of "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road," it is safe to say that it's one more step in the right direction for Elton John, and judging from past experience, that should be a very good step indeed.

Everyone Welcome
Socialism is the answer

By Barbara E. Baird

The most interesting revelation of the recent Ford — Carter debate was the fact that the United States is now importing 33 percent of its oil from Arab countries. At the time of the last oil crisis the U.S. was only importing about 6 percent of its total oil usage from the Middle East.

President Nixon started a program which he said would make this country oil independent of the Arab nations by 1980. That program, which was nothing more than Tricky Dick political maneuvering, quickly faded.

Now the U.S. is slowly going down the capitalist road to doom because the American people will not discipline themselves enough to limit their driving and restore the economy to pre-Nixon levels.

America is blowing it in the other areas just as well. When the vice-president of this country can flip the bird at a group of sincere demonstrators, then I believe this country needs more than a new president, it needs a total revision of its economic and political policy.

Socialism is the answer to the problems in America today. Socialism is the collective ownership by all the people of the factories, mines, railroad tracks, lands and all other instruments of production.

Socialism means production to satisfy human needs, not as under capitalism, for sale and profit. Socialism means an efficient control and management of the industries and social services by the workers through a democratic state. Socialism means an economy based on their nationwide economic organization.

Socialism will not originate from the workers who are presently employed in government based on their nationwide economic organization. Socialism means that the political state will be based on its own control, which will not originate from the workers who are presently employed in government-based on their nationwide economic organization.

PawPrint comes under attack

To the Editor:

I am not as fortunate as you that I must do you a favor to which you are not entitled. What I am about to say is not, as you say, for the PawPrint, but for the Daily Clarion. I am not a student of CSCI, but I have read the weekly PawPrint, and I have noticed a growing number of complaints about its quality and content. I believe that the PawPrint has been consistently poor in many respects, and I believe that it needs a complete overhaul.

Whatever one's feelings about the PawPrint, one can not deny that it is a very important part of the student body's life. It provides a voice for the students, and it allows them to express their opinions and concerns. However, the PawPrint has not been doing an adequate job of this.

The PawPrint is very much a student publication, and it reflects the views of its students. However, it is also a professional publication, and it should be held to professional standards. It should be a place where students can learn to write and edit, and it should help them develop their skills. It should also be a place where students can learn about the world around them, and about the issues that affect them.

I believe that the PawPrint could be greatly improved if it were given the resources and support it needs. It needs more staff, more training, and more time. It needs to be given a proper budget, and it needs to be given a proper position in the university. It needs to be given the same resources as other publications, and it needs to be given the same respect.

I believe that the PawPrint has the potential to be a very important part of the university, and I believe that it needs to be given the resources and support it needs to reach its potential.

Sincerely,

P.S. I would also like to see the PawPrint have a more diverse range of articles. I think that it is important for the PawPrint to cover a wide range of topics, and that it should include articles about issues that affect all students, not just the students who are members of the PawPrint staff.

Republicans losers

In a game played between two of the most prominent teams in the region, the PawPrint and the Clarion, the PawPrint came out on top. The Clarion, which had won the last two meetings, was no match for the PawPrint this year.

The PawPrint won the game with a score of 7 to 3. The game was played in front of a sold-out crowd of students and faculty.

The PawPrint's victory was due in large part to the strong performance of its quarterback, who threw three touchdown passes in the second quarter.

The Clarion, on the other hand, was unable to mount any sustained drives. The PawPrint's defense was strong all game long, and the Clarion was never able to get close to the end zone.

The PawPrint's victory was a welcome respite from the negotiations that have been ongoing between the two teams. The negotiations have been tense and have threatened to delay the start of the season.

Just whose idea is this, anyway?

The PawPrint comes under attack

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my concern about the recent changes in the PawPrint. I believe that the PawPrint has become too political, and that it is no longer a place for students to express their opinions freely.

The PawPrint has always been a place for students to express their views, and I believe that it should continue to be a place for students to express their views. However, I believe that the PawPrint has become too political, and that it is no longer a place for students to express their opinions freely.

I believe that the PawPrint has become too political because of the changes that have been made to the PawPrint's editorial staff. The editorial staff has been replaced by a group of students who are more interested in politics than in the interests of the students.

I believe that these changes are harmful to the PawPrint, and I believe that they are harmful to the students.

I believe that the PawPrint should be returned to its former state, and that the editorial staff should be replaced by a group of students who are more interested in the interests of the students.

Sincerely,

In the game of the week the Ringers (Misfits) beat the Bombers in three straight. But looks and ability (?) make a game with the Misfits enjoyable.

I do have some bad news for the Misfits, however. It seems that Biology Clowns had recruited with (?) and are now a team of "A" loopers.

The "B" league super bowl will bring together the little Ringers, the Misfits, against the big ringers, the Biology Clowns.

Next week's game of the week pits Phydeaux, with the doubtful Ron Henke, the lovely Sandy Bobroack and the very questionable trash Hammerstein against the business majors of the Hookers. If John Sines can leave his calculator at home, and gets some support from John "the Mauler" Herrick and Alex "Dribble Butt Flashes" Sanchez (who is an adopted son of Ben),

The big surprise of this game, however, was that the Tryers, probably valid (?), complaints that Connie's Kids were missing too hard.

If Connie's Kids hit too rough, Tryers, you might try Canasta.

During the game Blackey could be heard yelling at Jerod Bates of the Freshmen something about giving Bates an "F" if he scored. Now Blackey is just that ethical?

Next week's big boys game pits J. C. Wright's cabinet against the incredible with the voluptuous Wall Hawkins and Mike "Pretty Boy" Preston.

"Brainless" passed the ball to Rusty "Champ" SHOP and Korn, for touchdowns while led by Sandra "Hook em Horn" Carter and Christina "Beep, beep" Brown didn't really do much at all.

The only reason the Cougars won the game was that they were lucky enough to outscore the dormies.

During your dormies and go back to the drawing board.

There is a sad sideliner to this week's play. It is been brought to my attention that the Cougars' own Mike Shaffer and Kommander Korn, our own presidential and vice-presidential candidates have been narrowly broken to defeat by some clown from Georgia. It's hard to believe Korn.

Black and Blue

In the battle of the unbeaten the Geeks led by Ivan "Chunkey" Glassco and Ron "Skis & Bones" Himelbein beat the Mickey Mouse Club.

The game saw a great deal of scoring, mostly by the Geeks.

Joe Baldino scored 8 points, Gary Stewart scored 12 points. Ivan Glassco scored 6 points and Pete Uthee scored a conversion in their 27 to 19 victory.

The M.M.C. with a predictable and ineffective offense and an open door door defense must look to regroup if they expect to make it to the super bowl on December 1.

The Raiders must not become complacent as they are balanced two weeks ago now. This league which seemed unbalanced two weeks ago now seems very much to be a 4-team battle to the super bowl.

The Headhunters offensive was non-existent the first week has vastly improved as has the Raiders.

In the scoring department for this game Gerod Bates (HH) scored 13 points while John Perry (R) scored 14 and Steve Hernandez (R) scored 12 points.

A FREE MEAL

This evening I reached into my pocket for a little dinner money and guess what I found — nothing. Do you have this same trouble? If you do, then I have a sure fire method for you to kill the "munchies!"

At 4 p.m. on either Nov. 17 or 18, if you run 1.85 miles (and finish) then you win a free dinner ticket. Plus, if your track star and want to win the race (come in ahead of the other participants) then you win a T-shirt.

Hello!

Let me take this opportunity to welcome all of you whether Freshman, reptile, returning student, Catholic or whatever to our fair campus.

You have made an excellent choice of schools to attend.

This campus has all of the modern conveniences. It has everything from toilets to electricity, Drama majors to Business majors and, yes, even intramurals. What are intramurals you ask? Well, it consists of a number of varying activity, the purposes of which are to relax or recreate.

There are activities for all. Hearts, bridge, jacks, football, softball, frisby to hockey games and skiing among a great number of other activities.

By the way, that's intramurals not intramurals (Paw Print headline, Tuesday, Oct. 17, 1976). Editor's note: Sorry about that!

Many of these activities take place in the P.E. Department. This area is at the northeast corner of campus.

The last bit of civilization before you hit sage and snake country. One of the most popular parts of the P.E. Department is the gymnasium (call gym by close friends and relatives).

There is a weight room, swimming pool, and many other "far-out" facilities.

Also, for those of you who want to find out about current activities there is an intramural bulletin board just across from Bob & Bob's Equipment Room.

Room PE-124 contains the fearless leader of the intramural activities. His name is Joe "Sing Song, Ding Dong," Long.

Go in and question him, if you can afford the fact that he is a relatively incoherent mental midget. His graduate assistants are the lovely J.C. Wright and Sandra Carter (not necessarily in that order), plus he has assorted (disturbing!) student assistants.

Well after all of this you might be wondering why half way through the first quarter I am doing this? Some drummers still don't know this campus has running water.

Escape?

These desired vacation before finals can join other Cal State people on Dec. 3 and at Capo, Fox, on Catalina Island. The cost is a mere $27.00 per person and that includes meals, lodging and transportation. Car pool to Long Beach for departure at 6 a.m. Friday, and return on Sunday afternoon.

Activities include swimming, diving, volleyball, hiking, and use of rowboats. Bring sleeping bag, warm jacket and personal hygiene.

Registration deadline is Tuesday, Nov. 16 at the P.E. Department office with George Weinsty.
