Coyotes take giant step, move up in Fall of '91
by Kevin R. Horney
Editor-in-Chief

CSUSB will be making its entrance into Division II athletics, and the California Collegiate Athletic Association conference, in the Fall of '91, the university announced Monday.

President of University Relations, said, "This is a major step forward for our institution, for our athletic program, for our student athletes, and for the community."

Serious discussion about the move began in April when Dave Suennam was named the new Athletic Director. Suennam pushed hard for the move to Division II, and initiated conversations with various campus and community groups, as well as the director of the CCAA.

The prime reason for the move was the university's lack of a conference affiliation. CSUSB's lack of affiliation has been the major reason for the lack of post season competition by the Coyotes. CSUSB teams with outstanding records have been denied, while teams with poorer records, but with conference titles, have been advanced.

"Being an independent in California is not a desirable position to be in," said Suennam. "There are only 12 schools in the state left in Division III and we are the only school in the CSU system left in the division."

The major question raised by the move comes from the ability of Division II schools to offer athletic scholarships. Serious debates on where the monies necessary for scholarships will come from have raged during the past few weeks. While a small minority of students have voiced their lack of support for a referendum to increase student fees to pay for part of the scholarships, most school administrators and faculty committees have given their support to the referendum.

It has been projected that CSUSB will need about $200,000 per year to pay for athletic scholarships. The scholarships would fall somewhere around $5300 per student athlete, per year.

"We are presently working on the wording on the referendum as to the amount of funding ASI is willing to put forward," Presently, the referendum

Education at CSUSB a family experience
By Paula Johnston
Special to the Chronicle

Joann Bates brings more than a back pack to school every morning. Along with her red backpack full of books and anytime snacks, she also brings her 3-year-old son, Ryan.

Joann isn't the only student in the family who attends Cal State San Bernardino. Ryan is also a full-time student. He attends CSUSB's Children Center located at the north end of the campus along with more than 100 other children.

According to Kimberly Harris, the Children's Center director, the center's greatest asset to the campus is the convenience it offers Cal State students. The center accommodates not only full-time day students but also part-time evening students.

Lisa Willis, a student and single mother, brings her son and daughter to the center two nights a week. The use of the center allows her to continue her education while not having to worry about the high cost of child care.

The center staffed with 4 head teachers and 12 student assistant aides, provides a warm, stimulating learning environment. Both morning and afternoon snacks, along with a well balanced lunch and dinner are also included. The hour eligibility is based upon a ratio of 2 hours of childcare for every one hour of coursework. This allows more students to use the center, which is only licensed to hold up to 40 children at one time.

The Children Center fulfill's a very important need in both Joann Bates and Lisa Willis' lives, as well as many other students on CSUSB's growing campus. It allows many parents the opportunity to further their education which may otherwise not be possible.

At commencement this year, Joann Bates and Lisa Willis will not be the only graduates in their families. Instead their entire families will have taken part in their educational experience and even the grown children and celebrating as well.

Night students fearful of lot safety
By Kim Perkins
Staff Writer

"It's scary. "It's dark," and "it's so far out" are just a few of the phrases used by students of CSUSB regarding the school's parking lot at night.

Women in particular, are concerned about walking from the classes to the parking lot after nightfall.

The very distance a student must walk just to get to their class is incredulous and inconvenient, much less to walk it at night.

"Passing the library on the way out is when I really begin to feel tense. I feel that if I were to scream and something really happened, no one would know," Dallas said. "I think it's neat how the parking lot is so damn convenient for the teachers when the students are the ones who make the school. Without us there wouldn't be on. We're treated like it doesn't matter and we're the ones who pay. The school seems like it was built by a rapist."

With the fear of evil that the darkness brings, what do people do to ease their minds?

CSUSB student Carolyn Tacklund said, "I carry an anti-rape whistle on a keychain."

Dallas said that she set up a partner to walk out to her car with and then she drives herself home. "I think that all night students should have to tell all their students to get partners to walk out with at night because it's hard to do yourself when you don't no anyone," Dallas said.

In this decade, safety is at the forefront of a woman's mind. They think about it whenever they're alone and even when they're not.

CSUSB student Shoshana Johnson said, "Now days it doesn't seem to matter if you're walking in pairs or not. People don't care anymore."

Though many students fear for their lives each time they walk to their car, some say that it doesn't bother them at all.

Student of CSUSB, Lucy Sanchez said, "I feel that if I'm alert and paying attention then I don't need to worry. I also pray that God will protect me and his angels be with me while I'm walking alone."

Student Chris Mol lenkamp said that he thought that other campuses were worse as far as places for people to lurk about. "I think that the blue-lighted emergency phones really help," said Mollenkamp.

CSUSB hosts Small Business Seminar

A seminar entitled "Small Business Management Strategies for 1990s" will be held at CSUSB on Feb. 20 from 7:30 a.m. - noon in the Sycamore Room, Lower Commons.

The seminar is aimed at increasing the small business owners' and managers' awareness of today's market and to introduce them to a wide range of managerial, marketing, and financial strategies for success. Topics will include: how to analyze and forecast market changes in the 1990s; how to prepare and meet consumer needs; how to create a business plan, operating plan and cash flow project; advertising methods and costs; and ways bankers can assist small business entrepreneurs.

One of the seminar leaders is David Maupin, master business counselor with General Business Services, Inc., a nationwide small business counseling firm specializing in taxes, records organization and profit development. Other leaders include J. Casteel, vice president of the Pacific Inland Bank in Ontario, and Dr. Mary Smith, associate professor of marketing at CSUSB, who teaches advertising, advertising management and promotion management.

The preregistration deadline is Feb. 18. For more information call (714) 880-5730 or (714) 880-5770.

MBA gains new concentrations

Two new concentrations in taxation and professional accountancy are being added to the graduate program in business administration at CSUSB.

The concentrations consist of five courses each, which, coupled with the seven core classes required of all MBA students, will total the 48 units necessary for the master's degree.

Preparation for the concentrations began in 1987, following research in 1985, which showed a demand for these specific areas within the MBA program. At present, the university offers concentrations in finance, general management, industrial relations and personal management, information management, and marketing management.

The first of these new classes will be offered through the Accounting and Finance Department in fall quarter, 1990. For more information, call (714) 880-5704.

Should crime rates go public

Congress this month will consider a bill that would force colleges to reveal campus crime rates.

Many school administrations oppose the bill because it could make their schools look bad. A group of college security experts resolved Jan. 12, 1990, to oppose the bill because it would be impossible to force all colleges to release crime statistics.

"We're not in favor of the law because it's not policeable," said Jan Sherrill of the Center for the Study and Prevention of Campus Violence (CSPCV).

The major supporters of the bill are students, parents and faculty members who say they need to know about local crimes in order to protect themselves.

Currently, only 352 of the average 3,200 two- and four-year colleges in the country bother to report crimes to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

While one school may report a crime committed on what is legally a city-owned curb near the school, another school may decide not to report it as a "campus" crime. Consequently, the college reporting the incident may appear to be more dangerous than the school not reporting the crime.

While they may, in fact, have similar crime rates.

"Students often have a false sense of security on college and university campuses," said Rep. Bill Goodling (R-Pa.), who in September introduced the federal bill that would re-

The Board of Directors of Associated Students, Inc. (ASI) is preparing a referendum to fund CSUSB's proposed move to Division II athletic competition.

ASI will soon vote on whether or not to send the referendum to President Evans.

If approved by the president, CSUSB students will be asked to vote on a proposed fee increase of $12 per year. Of the $12, $6 would go to intercollegiate athletics to help pay for scholarships, and $4 would be used to fund other ASI programs.

Recreational sports and physical education programs do not fall under the heading of intercollegiate athletics and would not receive funds from the proposed fee increase.

The ASI Board has mixed feelings on the issue. Rima Said, ASI vice president and chair of the board of directors, wants to move to Division II, but does not want to take a position on initiating the referendum.

Aaron Watson, ASI president, said, "I do feel our board should move more cautiously." He would like them to look at the possible effects of the move in the long run.

Doug Gonzalez, ASI treasurer, is the only officer who has admitted supporting the move to Division II athletics, but with a qualification. He is not in favor of an increase in fees for all students, in order to pay for athletic scholarships for a few other students.
'Ether' back and even better

By Larry Rippee
Staff Writer

"Ether", the one-woman musical based on the life of famed blues singer and Broadway actress, Ethel Waters, returned to the CSUSB stage Jan. 26. This restaging of "Ether" is a somewhat revised version of the play that made its debut at CSUSB earlier last year.

"Ether" was an instant success when it opened as part of CSUSB's Black History Month celebration. Local theater critics were impressed, calling the performance "dynamic and inspired".

Although basically the same show, a number of changes have been made. New, more elaborate costumes have been added. The opening of the second act has been reworked and an additional five songs have been included.

The result is a faster paced, more polished show. Overall, the new "Ether" is a more professional, pleasing production.

The show is co-authored and performed by Val Limar, a CSUSB senior theater arts major. The other half of the writing team is theater arts professor William Slout, who also directed the play.

Significant contributions were made by choreographer Warren Juba Lucas, musical director Frank Jansen, with costumes designed by Margaret Perry. Some impressive lighting effects are achieved by Philip West.

The play follows the life of Ethel Waters from a Philadelphia ghetto to her successes as a singer working with such blues and jazz greats as Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, and Fletcher Henderson to ultimately becoming the first black woman to star on Broadway. The play is simply structured with Limar as Waters talking directly to the audience. Most of her costume changes are done on stage behind a dressing room screen.

On stage, Limar is backed by a trio consisting of David Williams on piano, Art Esparza on saxophone and clarinet, and—this time around—Glenn Mitchell on drums.

The drums are a valuable addition to the musical accompaniment serving to pull the ensemble together, giving the music a fuller sound.

The musical content ranges from bawdy and risque tunes such as "My Handy Man Ain't Handy No More", and "Shake That Thing," to the sorrowful and soulful "Supper Time". Perhaps the finest piece was Limar's stunning rendition of "Stormy Weather". Dramatically, Limar easily moves from humor to pathos and back again.

Many of the vignettes are quite funny, such as her portrayal of a dishonest, cigar-chomping theatrical agent. Her characterization of a fundamentalist preacher delivering a fireand-brimstone sermon is brilliant.

Overall, "Ether" is a well-handled, thoughtfully executed piece of work that is truly funny, moving, and entertaining.

Those who missed this even better second run of "Ether" will have one more opportunity to see it—but a journey to Santa Barbara will be required.

"Ether" has been nominated to compete in the western regional American College Theatre Festival, Feb. 16 and 17, in Santa Barbara.

The play is one of seven finalists chosen from 153 entries.

"Ether" is the first one-person show ever to be selected to compete in the western regionals. The show could advance to the national competition held at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

College is fun and interesting, but college is also challenging, and it can result in hectic schedules for family, and of course, love. I can understand an occasional sleepy-eyed student, or one whose head softly bops against the classroom wall (or desk) to the rhythm of tapping chalk (up all night studying no doubt)—but, for the life of me, I have trouble understanding those college caffeine junkies.

I'm talking about those people you see who exit the Biology building (or library basement for that matter), with eyes bugging out to Timothy, colas or coffee in hand, and numerous Snickers bars and M&M's in pocket. And off to class they go (test time).

Now, don't get me wrong. I enjoy an occasional cup of freshly brewed exotic coffee in the morning. My family has been known to celebrate birthdays with tiny cups overflowing with little candies and nuts, and my Christmases are always filled with Hershey's kisses, Andes mint bars, and of course, peppermint sticks galore.

But, what about that college caffeine junkie? The one you see running up three flights of stairs, two steps at a time, in order to experience that needed bladder pressure relief just minutes before class starts?

So much for fair class involvement, sharing, open communication, and active listening. We know who's going to be doing the "caffeine ramble" during this class.

And what about those hours of personal study (both desperate and devoted) deep within the library cubicles? You could hear a pin drop, and surely you would, if it wasn't for the silence being interrupted by the occasional cracks of cola cans (illegal, mind you!).

Just what is it about the college caffeine junkie? The one you see running up three flights of stairs, two steps at a time, in order to experience that needed bladder pressure relief just minutes before class starts?

What is most interesting is caffeine's undesirable side effects. Among those mentioned earlier, caffeine in excess can produce fatigue, body dehydration, increased stomach acidity irritable bowel syndrome, and perhaps most importantly, arrhythmia problems. Add to this list increased blood pressure, birth defects, increased body temperature, and the possibility of experiencing symptoms of anxiety, depression, nervousness, and diziness.

Stated quite simply, caffeine is a risk and excessive amounts have been proven to be self-defeating.

Financial Aid Workshop

Need money to attend college?

Students are invited to attend a financial aid workshop presented by the Financial Aid Office. The workshop will provide information on the various forms of financial aid available, the 1990-91 application process deadlines, and scholarships awarded by CSUSB. Students are encouraged to have reviewed the 1990-91 college scholarship service (CSS) student aid application for California (SAAC) prior to attending the workshop.

Know When To Say When

...A Campaign for Responsible Drinking

For most adults, having a drink is a way to relax and enjoy the company of family and friends. Only when alcoholic beverages are abused do they pose a danger, leading to drunk driving and other serious problems.

Anheuser-Busch and your local distributor are proud of the products we sell...the world's greatest family of quality beers. We want you to enjoy our fine products but to remember to drink sensibly and to know your personal limits.

That's why we're encouraging consumers to "Know When To Say When" in a campaign to promote greater awareness of the responsibilities associated with drinking. So, enjoy your favorite beverage...responsibly. Please. Know When To Say When.

Response to Speaker of the Truth

Dear Sir,

I would like to respond to the “Speaker of Truth” who complained in your January 24 edition about the conversion from five-unit to four-unit courses. His allegations of a conspiracy to get more work out of students and/or extract additional fee money are misinformed and misguided.

As a member of the taskforce of students, faculty and staff which studied the issues involved in converting to a semester system or abandoning the policy of awarding five units of credit, I can assure you that the issue of money was never discussed.

Our primary concerns were the effect on class size, faculty staffing and the quality of education. The Faculty Senate and administration clearly recognized that there would be a moderate increase in class size since after the conversion students enrolled in 15 units would be required to spend 15 hours a week in class rather than the 12 required under the former system. This was of some concern because we knew the campus would receive no additional faculty positions to compensate for this change.

Indeed, one of the many issues prompting the discussion of abandoning the former practice of assigning one of the five units to an independent study component was that a 1983 analysis by the CSU Chancellor’s Office indicated that the campus was greatly overstuffed and that 35-40 faculty positions should be cut. Regardless of the above reasons for the change, there simply is no incentive for the campus to increase student fees: In the CSU, only 14 percent of the operational budget is based on student fees and these funds are used primarily for direct student services. (In effect, each full-time student receives a $6000 scholarship from the state.)

Our instructional budget (which provides faculty and staff salaries, library support, maintenance, and other operating expenses) is based on the total number of Full-Time Equivalent Students. (FTES = Total units generated divided by 15).

Thus, any change which has the potential of reducing the number of units taken each term (as the 5 to 4 conversion did) could reduce revenue, not increase it. In fact, the campus budget is based on a projection of enrollment done two years prior to the current term and all anticipated fees included in the budget are automatically deducted and returned to the state general fund in Sacramento.

Furthermore, our fee structure is not directly based on the exact number of units taken. An examination of the fee schedule shows that students pay the same amount for 1 to 6 units and higher flat rate for 6.1 or more units. Students taking one 5-unit course before the conversion still paid the same fee for one 4-unit course after the change; students taking two 5-unit courses would still be above 6.1 units break point whether they were taking one 5- or 4-unit courses.

The anonymous critic of the change from 5 to 4 also decries the number of extra courses he might need to take. Please see RESPONSE page 9.

Response to Speaker of the Truth

Dear Editor;

I’d like to say a few words about how the average student feels about what is going on with this university as of late. We’re upset about the average student fee; we’re upset about the average student fee; we’re upset about the average student fee. As the soccer coach explained it, most campuses use this method. I really don’t care what other schools use as their criterion for awarding athletic scholarships. That sounds like a very lopsided proposal. If it doesn’t pass, can they then rename the referendum so that it is more fair to the average student? I don’t know who the ASI representatives have been talking to, because most of them think that the student body is in favor of this referendum. Everyone I’ve talked to is against it. And no, all friends and acquaintances on campus are not liberal left wingers. They are students who are more concerned with the academic quality of this institution than about any athletic program.

It is ASI’s responsibility to inform the students, to represent their interests, and to talk to a more representative section of students.

ASI fails to keep students informed

Dear Editor;

I attended the Associated Students Board of Directors meeting on January 30 only to find that I was the only student there who had anything to say in regards to the proposed change to Division II. Oh, well, I take that back. The athletes and coaches who would benefit from the proposed change were there to give their “yes” stamp.

So the question arises - why were there no other students there? Because the Associated Students made no effort to get the message out that a meeting was being held. No flyers. No announcement in the school newspaper. And they accuse us of being apathetic?

It can’t be that the faculty doesn’t have an opinion on this matter or were they also not informed? Maybe they (athletics and ASI) didn’t notify anyone so that they could build the measure through.

When I went to this meeting, I found out that the rationale for the referendum proposals would be used to fund athletic scholarships. Are they telling me that I have to pay for some athlete’s education?! That’s what it sounds like to me. Not only that, but the standards that I have to meet to receive a scholarship. Athletes only have to have a 2.0 GPA, whereas, the average student has to have a 3.0 GPA to receive a scholarship. As the soccer coach explained it, most campuses use this method. I really don’t care what other schools use as the criterion for awarding athletic scholarships. I think that athletes should have to meet the same academic standards as anyone else would to receive a scholarship.

The purpose of college is an education, at least it was the last time I checked. What if the referendum doesn’t pass? As the referendum is being worded now, for every one dollar the goes towards ASI programs that will benefit the average student, two dollars will go let us not have to meet the same academic standards that I have to meet to receive a scholarship. That sounds like a very lopsided proposal. If it doesn’t pass, can they then rename the referendum so that it is more fair to the average student? I don’t know who the ASI representatives have been talking to, because most of them think that the student body is in favor of this referendum. Everyone I’ve talked to is against it. The arguments will never end

Dear Editor,
The most fallible arguments are those in which the arguer does not adequately know the facts about which he is arguing. Such is the case in Grotke's defense of homosexuality.

The first point which makes Grotke's argument inconsistent is the acknowledgement of an attack on the homosexual community by fundamentalist Christians. To demonstrate the Christians' willingness to attack the homosexual community, didn't Grotke make reference to the Bible as coming from the "Dark Ages," and that the "Christians' loss," I can only respond by saying that even Grotke cannot escape the influence of the Bible to a slight degree. Let us not forget that anytime we write a date, we are writing that date relative to Jesus Christ's death on the cross. Also, let us not forget that the country which allows homosexuality to flourish in their form of sexuality, it is the same country which was set up on the principles founded in the Bible. The Bible, whether believed or not, has been the moral guideline in establishing laws for the past two hundred years in this country.

I'm quite sure that the Christian community and the homosexual community will never come to a peaceful resolution about the question of homosexuality. Each group will continue to argue their side, and more than likely, the tensions will increase rather than decrease. But, to compare Christianity with homosexuality is (as the saying goes) like apples and oranges. Homosexuality is not a religion and gives no practical answers to the problems which the Bible deals with.

The ultimate question in this ever increasingly heated debate is this. What will happen to me after I die? I'm not sure if Grotke, or any other homosexual has come to know what is the truth. The Bible doesn't teach modern morality. Let us not twist the truth of God's word. I am not ashamed of being a fundamentalist Christian. "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today, and forever." There is still a right and a wrong and I am determined to stand up for what is right...

Sincerely,
John Kocher

P.E. facilities swamped

Dear Paul Lindberg,
I regret any difficulties you might have experienced in using the PE building facilities (The Chronicle, January 24). The increased number of programs and student participation in physical education, athletics, and recreation has crowded all areas of this facility. We are delighted to see so much activity! Two areas that you referred to - the swimming pool, and the weight room - are open for recreational use when monitored by student assistants. This is necessary to safeguard users and is customary in such facilities on other university campuses. We try to schedule open times to match the free periods of the majority of students. These are posted around the PE Building. I might add that we have this information by calling ext. 5348 or 5235.

I know all of our faculty and staff who work in our programs share my interest in serving Cal State students. Thank you for your understanding and support.

Jery Freischlag, Chairman
Department of Physical Education

But, is it right?

Dear Mr. Editor,
I have read the rebuttals to my letter on homosexuality which I wrote a couple of weeks ago. I would like to say this to all the gay professors and gay people who read my article. I did not mean to come across as being condemning or judgmental. If I did come across that way, I would like to apologize. However, I do not apologize for God's word. The fact is that, like it or not, the truth doesn't change.

In the 1940s and 50s there was a clear definition of what is right and wrong in America. With the 60s and 70s there came a muddling of these two extremes. There is so much gray area today that it's hard to tell what is black and white anymore. That term has become a word to me as dogmatic and intolerant. May I ask you, do you right and wrong the same? Do you think dogmatism and intolerance? I am here to say that there is still a right and a wrong whether you choose to recognize it or not.

You are right in one sense that Jesus Christ did not come to condemn the world. 'For God did not send the Son into the world to judge the world, but that the world should be saved through Him," John 3:17. However, John 3:18 reads, "Whoever believes in Him should not put it to His service. God's will, Paul, the following, "Or do you not know that the righteous shall not enter into the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor thieves, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor swindlers, shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Corinthians 6:9-10. I would like to know why it is that when homosexuals or lesbians express their freedom of speech on campus (i.e. sporting rallies, etc), none of these have been altered. However, when Christians try to exercise that same right to stand up for the truth, all hell breaks loose. You can try to muddle and twist the truth of God's word. I am not ashamed of it. Nor am I ashamed of being a fundamentalist Christian. Does it matter what you choose to do? Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today, and forever. There is still a right and a wrong and I am determined to stand up for what is right...

Sincerely,
John Kocher
Community service opportunities available for personal growth

Become more involved through the Community Service Program (CSP) at CSUSB. CSP provides student volunteers opportunities to enhance their education, lifelong experiences, and personal growth.

Michael Senera, a senior at CSUSB, is a great example of volunteerism at work. He has shown great commitment and enthusiasm—he has been part of CSP for three consecutive years. During his sophomore and junior years, he was an assistant at the Fourth Youth Program in San Bernardino County. He is currently working at the Riverside County Marshall’s Office.

CSP has gained more participants during Fall of ‘89 and is rapidly growing in numbers. The program has over 40 volunteers and this figure reflects the first two weeks of fall quarter. Students are becoming more aware of the Community Service Program and its many advantages.

The requirements are simple: students are asked to complete 50 hours of volunteer work at a nonprofit agency during a 10-week period and to attend a two-hour training session. Most students work five hours per week and are able to balance this with their studies. After completing the project and the training, all volunteers receive a grant and a mileage allowance for the time traveled to and from the agency. Student groups may also receive funding for doing service in the community.

For more information call 880-5237 or stop by the Student Life Office, SS-122.

Scholarships available

Scholarship applications are available for the 1990-91 academic year. Some of the scholarships will be awarded based on merit only, but most of the awards are based on financial need as well as merit.

1. You must have a grade point average of at least 3.0
3. Submit two letters of recommendation (at least one must be from a present or former instructor).
4. Submit a Student Aid Application for California Schools (SAAC) if it applies to be considered for the scholarships based on need as well as merit.

Scholarships are awarded to new and continuing students in accordance with the terms of the gift. Students will be eligible.

'Pacific Review' available

The long awaited seventh issue of "The Pacific Review" is now available at the bookstore or by contacting the English Department. This issue of the magazine contains not only poetry and prose but also drama, as well. The outstanding visual art begins on the cover, with a reproduction of Polly Selby’s "Waterfront L," and continues throughout the magazine. As a special treat, several pieces by the magazine’s founder, Sherod Santos, are included.

Qualifying papers and letters will be accepted for future issues. The magazine is published by students in the English Department.

Softball looks for championship
By Jeff Zelenak

As the winter sports come to the end of their respective schedules, and the thought of national championships are brought to mind, the CSUSB softball team is already gearing up for their season.

The Lady Coyotes will have a slightly different look this season, with the addition of head coach Sue Strain. Strain became the head coach for the successful years at San Bernardino Valley College where she guided her teams of national championships the season.

The Colossus rollercoaster at Magic Mountain couldn't offer the same highs and lows that the Coyotes, led by proud and talented head coach Jim Ducey, experienced this year.

The Coyotes included five seniors, including Dave Webb, Ron Bettiga and Greg Tomlin. The team was in the thick of things in the NCAA Division II Cage Classic. The Coyotes included five seniors including Dave Webb, Ron Bettiga and Greg Tomlin. The team was in the thick of things in the NCAA Division II Cage Classic.

The Coyotes lost their last two games in the Redlands Tournament to UC San Diego and to host University of La Verne. "We couldn't figure out what was wrong with our club. We just couldn't get it together," said Coach Webb. CSUSB posted a win over Pomona-Pitzer College, but then lost to Claremont College the following evening. The Coyote team defeated Whittier College and lost to NCAA Division II Cal Poly San Luis Obispo to round out Cal State's schedule at the Christmas break.

"We were hoping to come back after the break fresh and ready to play," said guard Ron Bettiga. It looked like CSUSB would do just that, defeating Loma Linda University handily in the first round of the Coyote Cage Classic. The Coyotes then went into a tailspin that looked as if it were irrecoverable, losing to Division I powers UC Riverside and Cal Poly Pomona. CSUSB pulled out of its slump with a 13 point victory over the Merino College Oakdale on April 3. The Coyotes have a talented group of freshmen, including Jennie Leopante, and Tara Poole that will make an impact.

Our goal is to make the regionals this year. The last couple of years the team has missed them," said Strain. "If we are ever going to get on top, this group will do it this year. This group is great because everyone is in it for the team.

The Coyotes' record last year was 25-16 and with the help of nine players returning from last year's squad the Coyotes will look toward the nationals this season.

The Coyotes open their season on Feb. 17 against Loyola Marymount at home.

uire schools to tell the public about the crimes committed in their communities.

"It's interesting that students do things on campus that they would never do at home," said Sherrill of the CSPC, which is based in Towson, Maryland. "You would never prop your front door open for the pizza man or leave the window open for your boyfriend to crawl through at home, yet it happens routinely in the dorms," Sherrill said.

Just such an incident sparked the current move to force colleges to confess that crimes happen on campuses.

In 1985 Lehigh University freshman Jeane Cley was brutally beaten, raped and murdered in her Pennsylvania dorm room. Her attacker got into the dorm because a pizza box was propping the main door open, and Cley's room remained unlocked while she slept.

Jeane's parents, Howard and Connie Cley, sued Lehigh for negligence claiming that, given the dearth of crime statistics, no one knew such an assault was likely or even possible at the school. They were awarded $2 million in an out-of-court settlement from the university.

The co-op used the money to start a non-profit organization, Security on Campus, dedicated to helping community to the concept of the Co-op. The CCAA, nicknamed the "Conference of Champions," will not be a cakewalk for CSUSB.

The conference is comprised of Cal Poly Pomona and San Luis Obispo; CSU Bakersfield, Dominguez Hills, and Long Beach campuses; Chapman College, and UC Riverside.

CSU Northridge is presently making the move to Division I, and it will be their position that CSUSB will be making the move to Division 1 by 1993-94.

One of the factors in Suenram's decision to make the move was the lack of community support at CSUSB, which drafted a "Conference of Champions." Streak reaches record 17

By Jeff Zelenaki
Staff Writer

The CSUSB women's basketball team, currently ranked fifth in the western region, extended their winning streak to 17 games with a 66-48 pounding of Biola University last Saturday night.

"We played very well. [Biola] was 15-4 going into the game and were having a good year," said Coyote head coach Gary Schwartz. "We had some good efforts. We really did it with our defense."

The victory, which improves the CSUSB record to 18-3, sets up a showdown with Colorado College on Friday. Colorado is ranked third in the nation, in Division III, and first in the Western Region. CSUSB is yet to be ranked nationally despite one of the best records in the Western Region.

Lori Peters fights for a rebound against Masters College.

"(Colorado College) will be our most important game of the season with no question. I feel that we have been pretty well ignored in the ranking," said Schwartz. "It will be a great opportunity for us to play them because they are number one in the west. If we beat them, the [the NCAA] will have to take notice of us."

Coyotes defeat Eagles, 89-82

The Coyotes nearly gave up a 12 point second-half lead in the closing seconds, but were able to hold off Loma Linda University, 89-82, in the Coyote Den.

Senior guards Greg Rowe and Dave Webb led the Coyotes in scoring with 22 and 18 points, respectively. Ron Ligon followed with 14 points, 11 rebounds, and a block with Steve Hickey finishing with 13.

The game was close throughout the first half as both teams exchanged leads. The Coyotes finally took the lead shortly before the end of the half on three-pointers by Webb and Rowe. Both guards finished with four three-pointers.

The Coyotes entered the locker room up by five, 47-42.

The Totes extended their lead to 12 early in the second half and then simply exchanged baskets with the Golden Eagles. With five minutes remaining, however, the Golden Eagles had cut the lead in half.

Senior center Chris Melton was instrumental in maintaining the 'Yotes' advantage. He scored four points in the last four minutes and played aggressive defense despite having four fouls.

LLU's Daniel Chonkich sank a three-pointer with 10 seconds left to bring the Golden Eagles to within three. Webb was fouled immediately, but sank both free throws. Ron Bettiga sealed the victory with a key steal on LLU's next possession.

This was the Coyotes' second victory over LLU this season, and lead the series between the two schools 2-0. The victory improved the Coyotes' record to 8-13 overall, and will travel to Santa Cruz this Friday.

The Coyotes' next home game will be against Christian Heritage College next Tuesday. This will be their last home game of the season.
