On Sunday, February 10, Johnnie, Jonathan, Justin and Joshua were born, my husband and I have been active with them as much as possible. We have also instilled a sense of discipline. "I get them involved in different sports so they get the idea of teamwork," John said. The couple had also worked with the boys in preparation for kindergarten. "They are ready to go to school," she said.

John and Maria are seeking a sponsor for the team. Persons interested in sponsoring the team may call at (909) 414-2322.

According to Maria, the quads are spirited and have very distinct personalities. "Joshua likes sports and has a big heart, Johnnie, the oldest, is more mature and likes to help his dad around the house, Jonathan is very aggressive in everything he does and Justin is very quiet, but I think he is getting a little brattish. If one of them is doing something, the rest want to do the same thing. This is natural for children in any family. Since they were born, my husband and I have been active with them as much as possible. We have also instilled a sense of discipline." As part of its advocacy for improving minority students' educational attainment and increasing its outreach to minority communities, NEA has signed memoranda of agreement with six major national organizations that have the same or similar goals. The organizations are ASPIRA, League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), National Association for Bilingual Education (NABE), National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), National Council of La Raza (NCLR), People for the American Way, and National Urban League. The understanding is that the parties agree to do the following:

Collaborate on planning major gatherings, such as annual meetings, regional conferences, and selected state conferences and conventions.

Link Web sites to provide direct access to each other's sites to glean policy and other information.

Participate as cosponsors of NEA-coordinated public education advocacy town hall meetings in selected communities.

And, the understanding is that NEA will:

Offer through its Public Education Advocacy Office technical assistance, resources, and programs that are devoted to energizing communities in support of children and public education.

Encourage and facilitate collaboration between the organizations, state and local affiliates and respective NEA state and local affiliates on public education advocacy initiatives.

NABE, one of the collaborating organizations, represents the interests of both language-minority students and the bilingual education professionals who serve them. NABE is having its 25th Anniversary Conference February 20-24, 2001, in Phoenix, Arizona. If you would like to join other educators, business and government representatives, policy-makers, and community members for the world's largest conference on the education of linguistically and culturally diverse students, write to NABE at 1030 15th Street, NW, Suite 470, Washington, DC 20005-1503, or call its customer service center at (888) 414-2322.

The doctor announced the (good) news, Maria was not carrying triplets, but quadruplets! Maria was interned in the hospital for over five months. In the seventh month, the quadruplets were delivered through a caesarian operation, all boys.

The relatives were thrilled beyond description. Maria said. Since then John Maria have jointly shared the tasks of raising the boys. "We love our boys so much," she said.

According to the San Bernardino Health Department statistics in 1996, a set of quintuplets, two sets of quadruplets, 230 sets of twins and nine sets of triplets were born out of 27,892 births. Maria stated that her husband and her are aware of the responsibility to raise the boys to become good citizens and as the boys grow older, the task has become harder, but will be there for them.

At present, the boys are into T-ball. John and Maria are seeking a sponsor for the team. Persons interested in sponsoring the team may call at (909) 425-1051.

TOBACCO CONTROL IS WORKING IN CALIFORNIA

The American Cancer Society and The American Lung Association have similar missions with a common goal: to save lives.

The great news released from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the California Department of Health Services cites significant drops in lung and bronchus cancer rates among Californians. The reason for the drops? Strong public health efforts by the California Department of Health Services, including its comprehensive tobacco prevention and control program.

We need more news to be done. California’s 14 percent drop must be maintained, and we need to continue the downward spiral of lung and bronchus cancer rates.

President Clinton agrees with us. Citing the CDC report, he called for an increase in money for comprehensive tobacco control and prevention. In his statement, Clinton said “the tobacco companies spend 10 times more to market their products than all 50 states combined are spending on tobacco prevention and cessation. California’s efforts demonstrate the progress that can be made when states use comprehensive tobacco control and prevention approaches” recommended by the U.S. Surgeon General.

Lawsuits against the tobacco industry resulted in the Master Settlement Agreement, which is intended to hold the tobacco industry accountable for the disease and death caused by its products. Taking tobacco settlement dollars into tobacco prevention and control would do just that by reducing industry profits and harm to people.

In the state where the first comprehensive tobacco prevention and control program in the world began, it would be shameful to waste the momentum gained in eliminating the ill effects of tobacco products. Our organizations have been urging Governor Gray Davis to invest at least 20 percent of the state’s share of tobacco settlement funds into California’s tobacco prevention and control program. Not one dime of the state’s share of tobacco settlement funds has been spent on the state’s proven, effective tobacco prevention and control program. Still, tobacco ranks as California’s number one cause of death, taking more than 40,000 lives annually, or about 115 people each day.

Californians have voted consistently to fund tobacco education and cessation programs, yet these efforts cannot be maintained unless Governor Davis allocates a portion of the state’s share of the 1998 Master Settlement Agreement funds toward the tobacco education and prevention program shown to save lives. New resources are needed to combat the tobacco industry’s stepped-up marketing campaign for young adults. Eighteen-to-24-year-olds are smoking at rates higher than any other adult age group, an indication that the tobacco industry is succeeding.

California is losing its position as the national leader in tobacco prevention and control. We only spend about 70% of the CDC’s lowest estimate for a comprehensive state tobacco prevention and control program.

The Master Settlement of 1998 provides approximately $1 billion a year for state and local California governments, a reimbursement to taxpayers of about 30 cents on the dollar toward the cost of treating tobacco-related illnesses. DHS figures show that for every dollar spent on the California Tobacco Control Program, taxpayers save $3 in medical costs and another $5 in smoking-attributable indirect costs. But the greatest savings will be seen in the number of lives saved.

Our organizations are highly visible in the fight against tobacco products to protect public health. We pledge to continue our opposition to an industry that makes and sells addictive, deadly products. We urge Governor Davis to keep California a leader in the fight against tobacco to save lives, protect the health of Californians and save on health care costs.

PARENTS; NICOTINE IS A REAL THREAT TO YOUR KIDS

Parents naturally worry about the health and safety of their children. Many parents teach their kids to avoid getting involved with drugs, although sometimes adults forget about the drug most abused by adolescents — nicotine.

Every year, teens continue to light up even though there is strong public awareness about the health hazards of smoking. When you’re young, it’s hard to think about the consequences of your actions. Kids don’t project that smoking today can lead to negative effects in their futures — increased risk of cancer, heart attack, and stroke in adulthood.

Many kids think they’ll just try one cigarette or two or three. These young smokers believe that “they’ll be able to control their habit over time. Young people may experiment with cigars and chewing tobacco, which are also dangerous. Others try_bid, thinking they are a safe alternative to cigarettes. Colorfully packaged with a variety of flavors like cinnamon, orange, and chocolate, these unfiltered cigarettes from India have 28 percent higher nicotine concentration than regular cigarettes.

There is good news — the number of teens who currently smoke has gradually declined since 1996. But there is also bad news — over 4 million youth between the ages of 12 and 17 are smokers. In fact, by the time they leave high school, more than one-third of graduates are active smokers.

Nicotine is a powerfully addictive drug. Once your teen is addicted, it will be very difficult to quit.

The cause of addiction is simple. Nicotine goes straight to the brain. The human brain has circuits that control feelings of pleasure. Dopamine—a brain chemical — contributes to the desire to consume drugs. Nicotine spikes an increase in dopamine.

When your teen smokes, he or she inhales the nicotine. It goes quickly to the brain. In just 10 seconds, the pleasurable effects of smoking reach peak levels. Within a few minutes, the pleasure is gone, and the craving for a cigarette begins a new cycle.

A teen can easily get hooked on nicotine, although it takes much more effort to quit. Many kids think they will be able to quit any time they want to, and some can. But many can’t. Like so many smokers, they find it hard to stay away from the drug’s effects.

Nicotine addiction is a disease. But it is preventable. NIDA continues to fund innovative research to find the most effective treatment and prevention approaches for adolescents.

In the meantime, not starting to smoke is the best form of prevention. Talk to your kids about the threat of smoking. With your guidance, maybe they won’t light up.

Bert Corona, national Latino civil rights and labor leader and activist, fought to the last breath finally, emerging from a series of health ailments Monday, January 15, 2001, at the Kaiser Permanente Hospital in Los Angeles. He was 82 years of age. Let us mourn and eulogize together the tremendous contributions of a great working-class hero and leader of the Mexican, Mexican-American, and Latino communities in the United States with a longer and more versatile trajectory of social struggle in lived networks and imprints for social justice, dignity, and fairness than our beloved leader, brother and teacher, Bert Corona.

Corona belonged to that heroic generation that gave us social security, unemployment insurance and industrial unions. It was a generation hardened by the great depression — the Los Angeles of Corona's youth was the scene of violent industrial wars at North American Aviation and on the waterfront. It was the Los Angeles where immigrants arriving in the wake of the Mexican Revolution were met with the business end of police billy clubs, the city of Sleepy Lagoon where blacks and Latinos sat in one section of a movie theater, and whites in another.

Some might say Los Angeles hasn't changed that much. But what once was the open shop city is becoming a union town. The key to getting Los Angeles barrios, he saw not just a population excluded from the political mainstream, but a very different future in which their votes would eventually shape the politics of the city and the state. The base of Mexican labor that developed the southwest over the last century could, Corona dreamed, become as important politically as it was economically, just a population excluded from the political mainstream, but a very different future in which their votes would eventually shape the politics of the city and the state. The base of Mexican labor that developed the southwest over the last century could, Corona dreamed, become as important politically as it was economically, just a population excluded from the political mainstream, but a very different future in which their votes would eventually shape the politics of the city and the state.

But Corona was not a pure-and-simple unionist. Looking at the huge mass of Mexican immigrants populating Los Angeles barrios, he saw not just a population excluded from the political mainstream, but a very different future in which their votes would eventually shape the politics of the city and the state. The base of Mexican labor that developed the southwest over the last century could, Corona dreamed, become as important politically as it was economically, just a population excluded from the political mainstream, but a very different future in which their votes would eventually shape the politics of the city and the state. Corona became a leader of El Congreso Nacional del Pueblo de Habla Española, and after the war, the Asociacion Nacional Mexicano Americano. Both were leftwing organizations of Mexican immigrants, with close ties to the industrial unions of the CIO. Much of that history is unknown to today's activists, who see globalization and immigration as issues which have just arrived on the political radar screen. Yet, during a period when he lived in northern California, Corona organized an ANMA chapter among smelter workers employed by the American Smelting and Refining Co. Decades before the current cross-border organizing movement was born, these workers launched sympathy strikes in solidarity with coworkers employed by the same company in Mexico and Latin America.

COMMUNITY UNITES IN MEMORY OF CHARLES MENA

Over six hundred family members, fellow musicians and friends from throughout the Inland Empire attended a memorial dance/concert fundraising event on February 25, 2001, at the Gents Community Center for the late Charles (Chuck) Mena, a popular and well-known musician in the Inland Empire. Mena, 43, died on December 23, 2000, as a result of illnesses associated with a severe accident that occurred several years ago.

The fundraising event began at 12:30 PM and finished at 10:00 PM!

"We started planning for a small jam session fundraiser for Chuck and after more discussion, we felt that he deserved a big community memorial fundraising event," stated Jesse Marquez, chair of the Inland Empire Community Musicians Group. "Chuck was well known, very talented and had the kindest heart and shared everything he owned."

The fundraising planning committee and volunteers involved, the IEEMG committee (composed of 18 members), a sound and stage crew composed of 17 volunteers under the direction of Max Priedo and Leonard Colvin, five masters of ceremonies, special speakers Jerry and Monique Almendarez, 15 musical groups, 14 local restaurants, ten music businesses, San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino, and a myriad of other support businesses, San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino, and a myriad of other support individuals.

Mexican food consisting of barbecue beef, beans, Spanish rice, salad, buns and cake was prepared by Pauline Ramos and her volunteer group and every person in the hall was served. The food was donated!

"All the funds collected from the event will be turned over to the Mena family to cover the huge medical and funeral expenses," Marquez said. Interviewed at the fundraising event, Mrs. Virginia Mena, mother of Chuck Mena, said, "My son was a good solid person and he loved his music. I loved him so much because he was such a loving person who cared about people. He was always looking after me."

Mena was born in San Bernardino, graduated from Eisenhower High School in Rialto, attended San Bernardino Community College and devoted all his time to music and playing his bass with different musical groups in the Inland Empire.

"Our family is very grateful for the support that we have received from his friends and the community. We will never forget their generosity," Mrs. Mena said.
CREATING THE WILL TO SUCCEED

By the year 2025, Hispanic children will make up 25 percent of the school-age population in the U.S. As their numbers grow, Hispanics will continue to become a more significant presence in schools and college classrooms and in our workplaces.

Ensuring that Hispanics achieve educational excellence is in the interest of all Americans. For this reason, academic improvement efforts must not fail Hispanic students.

The President’s Advisory Commission on Educational Excellence has been working for more than a decade to ensure that Hispanic children receive a high-quality education. In 1996, the commission produced its first report, Our Nation on the Faultline: Hispanic American Education. The report documented the exponential demographic growth of Hispanics in America and described both the serious shortcomings of the education system serving Hispanic Americans and the resulting achievement gap. The commission issued a call to action urging local, state, and federal policy makers to take deliberate and immediate steps to improve the educational achievement of Hispanics and thereby pull this country back from a dangerous faultline.

It has been four years since the release of the commission’s initial report. And, although much has been accomplished, the concerted national action necessary to raise the level of educational achievement of Hispanic students has not materialized.

There must be a sense of urgency to close the educational achievement gap for Hispanics. Small incremental improvements will not be enough. Hispanics’ population growth and educational achievement gap require quantum leaps rather than small improvements. Local, state, and national leaders must fully commit themselves to the task.

With this in mind, the commission chose to go beyond the multifaceted recommendations presented in its first report and to lay out a more targeted plan of action. This targeted plan is basically a road map for every sector of society to follow in helping to close the achievement gap between Hispanic students and their classmates by 2010. The commission also challenges the nation to:

- Raise the educational performance of all Hispanic students to the same level of achievement as other students in America by the year 2010.

In order to meet this challenge, the commission determined that it will take unprecedented public will and:
- Recognition of the problem
- Proven action that will close the achievement gap
- Replication of successful practices and solutions on a larger scale
- High expectations
- Targeted technical assistance
- Determination that Hispanic children deserve the very best this country has to offer

For further information about this report contact the White House Initiative on Educational Excellence for Hispanic Americans by phone at (202) 401-1411 or by E-mail at white_house_init_hispanic.ed@ed.gov.

Hearing board announcements

The South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) Board of Directors is soliciting candidates for three (3) appointments and their alternates to the SCAQMD Hearing Board: one Medical Member and two public members. The terms of office for the incumbent members will terminate June 30, 2001.

The Hearing Board is chartered under Division 26 of the California Health and Safety Code and operates independently of the SCAQMD and its Board of Directors. The Hearing Board is a quasi-judicial entity vested with the authority to grant variances to companies and public agencies subject to SCAQMD rules, to revoke and suspend SCAQMD operating permits, and to issue Orders of Abatement. In addition, the Hearing Board has the authority to hear appeals regarding (1) the denial and issuance of SCAQMD Permits to Operate and Construct (including RECLAIM permits), (2) conditions imposed on Permits to Operate and Construct, (3) the denial and issuance of emission reduction credits, and (4) the approval and denial of air pollution control plans, including Rule 2502—On-Road Motor Vehicle Emission Controls submittals.

The Hearing Board meets three to four days per week (Tuesday-Thursday, occasionally on Friday), from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., at District Headquarters located in Diamond Bar. Occasionally, the Board may schedule an evening or weekend hearing at a location other than District Headquarters when a matter has generated significant community interest. Hearing Board members receive $5,000 annually and will be required to meet at least three days each week. The Chair of the Board, appointed by fellow Board members, will receive $8,000 annually and will be required to be available four days a week. Alternate members are compensated at the rate of $235 per day for days spent doing the work of a regular Member.

HEARING BOARD POSITIONS - Term of Appointment - Three Years

Medical Member Qualifications: Licensed physician with two or more years of practical experience, preferably in the fields of epidemiology, physiology, toxicology, or related fields. Public Member Qualifications: Ability to demonstrate evidence of active participation in matters relating to the environment, preferably with relatively recent involvement in activities and forums pertaining to the control of air pollution in the South Coast Basin.

Interested candidates should submit a resume and cover letter detailing the relevancy of their experience to the work of the SCAQMD Hearing Board to the Clerk of the Board, SCAQMD, 21865 East Copley Drive, Diamond Bar, CA 91765. The cover letter with resume must be time-stamped by the AQMD Clerk and submitted to the work of the SCAQMD Hearing Board to the Clerk of the Board, no later than 5:00 p.m., on Friday, March 9, 2001. Letters and resumes received in the Clerk’s office after the closing date will be returned to the applicant. The cover letter should also indicate if you would be willing to serve in the alternate position. Candidates invited for an interview may be required to submit the names of individuals who could provide professional references if contacted by the District. It is anticipated that these appointments will be acted upon by the District Board at its May 11, 2001 meeting. New appointees, unfamiliar with the variance process, will be expected to commence a paid orientation period prior to July 1, 2001 ($150/day, up to 15 days).
When La Raza Unida Party was organized, Muñoz and others wanted Corona to become one of its leaders. "But he was more focused on organizing the undocumented, whom he saw as the most oppressed."

When Lopez himself became the target of "B-I Bob" Doman and the Republican right, after Doman’s defeat the hands of Loretta Sanchez in Orange County, Bert told me: "Don’t leave. Stay and fight." Doman, one of the most conservative members of Congress, and a longtime legislative advocate for armaments manufacturers, alleged that Lopez and the Hermandad Mexicana had registered non-citizens to vote. The Los Angeles Times put the subsequent investigations on its front page day after day. In the end, Lopez was vindicated. But there was no doubt about the message of the Orange County election, and Doman did indeed have something to fear: Sanchez’s career in Congress is living proof of the growing power of the Latino vote.

"That was typical of Bert," says Eliseo Medina, a former UFW leader who today is vice-president of the Service Employees International Union. "He didn’t just put his finger up to see which way the wind was blowing. He took a principled stand and stuck to it."

Another veteran of the farm labor wars, Alfredo Figueroa, calls Corona "a father of the modern-day Chicano movement" Figueroa summed up Corona’s life in Mexican style, writing a corrido on hearing of his death. It ends with these verses:

Corona was an unrepentant radical "If by socialism," he wrote in his autobiography, Memories of Chicano History, "we mean someone who believes that the principal means of production should be regulated by government or by the people in the form of coops, then I would call myself a socialist." But his vision was a very indigenous one: "I believe in the American dream," he told Mario Garcia, who collaborated on the book, "or at least in my version of it. I interpret it as a hope and a wish, which has not been completely fulfilled for all Americans such as Latinos and other racial minorities. It’s similar to the dream of the Mexican Revolution, which also promised freedom, equality and democracy. Clearly, that hasn’t been fully achieved. In both cases, they’re unfulfilled dreams."

Corona was not an isolated voice on the margin. He helped found the Mexican American Political Association. He worked in the Democratic Party, trying to force it to deal with political aspirations of Mexicans and workers. He supported the early political careers of Mexican and African-American politicians, from former Congressman Edward Roybal to the late state Senator Byron Rumford, author of California’s Fair Housing Act.

Carlos Muñoz, professor of Chicano Studies at UC Berkeley, was a student leader in the Los Angeles school blowouts of the 1960s. He recalls that this new generation of activists "was very down on the old generation of political leaders, who we saw as accommodationists." But Corona was viewed differently, he remembers: "We saw him as an extraordinary guy. He was a good warrior."
STATE GRANT TO HELP UCR OUTREACH PROGRAMS CELEBRATE CESAR CHAVEZ

A state grant of more-than-$17,600 will fund a community outreach effort based at the University of California, Riverside, recognizing the life and work of the farm workers rights advocate, Cesar Chavez.

The effort is spearheaded by the University Eastside Community Collaborative (UECC) AmeriCorps project with the Office of Governmental and Community Relations at UCR. It will include a variety of short- and long-term activities that reinforce Chavez' philosophy of service to others.

Activities will include multicultural and fine arts programs for needy children and families, a celebration and concert series promoting nonviolence, and several children's programs that teach nonviolent expression through art. The activities will take place in the basement of the Cesar Chavez community center on the Bobby Bonds Sports Park on University Avenue in Riverside. The renovated space will be known as the "UECC Art Zone."

The effort is supported by a $17,652 grant from the California Commission on Improving Life Through Service, which awarded grants at Gov. Gray Davis' recommendation, for efforts that celebrate Chavez, the late advocate for farm worker rights. The state legislature recently declared Chavez' birthday, March 31, a state holiday.

Those who worked in partnership with the UECC AmeriCorps project proposal included the City of Riverside Department of Parks and Recreation Department, the Riverside Unified School District, and the UCR College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences.

Some of the activities the UECC AmeriCorps project will undertake include:

- Creating a mural honoring the basement of the Cesar Chavez Community Center in Riverside to house a Latin American Arts Center for children Families.
- Attracting a variety of artists specializing in Latin American art to teach free classes as artists-in-residence to children and families living near the community center.
- Funding a one day community concert and celebration in honor of Cesar Chavez with music, entertainment, and showcased artwork from the Latin American Art Center.
- Creating a mural honoring peace and non-violent expression, which children can paint as a way of expressing themselves through art.

She is a member of the International Reading Association and author of six-week English Language Development Lesson Plans for First Grade New Teachers. Her participation in off-school activities included a myriad of workshops, commission, leadership teams and as master teacher for college students.

Ted Alejandre, principal of Ramona-Alessandro School, stated that Hurtado is deserving of the award. "I am extremely pleased that CABE recognized Hurtado's efforts on behalf of the school's bilingual students. She is an excellent teacher that provides so much for our students and due to her efforts, our students have made extensive progress."

Hurtado received a BA in Liberal Studies, Reading Certificate and Clear Teaching Credentials from the University of California Riverside and a State Clear Bilingual Certificate of Competence.

Editor's note: Ramona-Alessandro School in the recent API, in a ranking of 1 to 10, received a base of 643 points and rank of 5. On the similar school ranking of 100 state schools, in a ranking of 1 to 10, the local school received the rank of 10. The school recently received $51,605 for the Governor's Performance Award meeting a state target in all areas and an additional $5,000 on the Governor's Reading Award.

A new national study released today by the Tomás Rivera Policy Institute (TRPI) reveals the facts of a burgeoning Latino middle-class, that Latinos are mostly poor, uneducated and foreign-born. The Latino middle-class grew at a rate three times higher than among non-Hispanic whites. The study was conducted by two nationally known scholars, Dr. Frank D. Bean, professor of Sociology at the University of California, Irvine and Dr. Stephen J. Trejo, Associate Professor of Economics University of Texas at Austin.

"Latinos economic progress has been significant," said TRPI President, Harry Pachon, Ph.D. "Too often, we overlook this ever increasing segment of the Hispanic community."

The study provides greater insight into this booming demographic. Growth in middle-class households was concentrated among U.S.-born Latinos. In comparison, the number of poor, foreign-born Latino households has increased almost threefold from 1979 to 1998. Measuring discretionary income among Latino households increases almost double, from $12,000 in 1976 to more than $16,000 in 1998, a gain of 43.9%. "Such increases are even more impressive given the relative financial cost of education to Latino households," Professor Bean stated.

Still, a substantial income gap remains between Latino households and all U.S. households. That gap widened from about $12,000 in 1976 to more than $16,000 in 1998. That same year 90% of Anglo households had achieved middle-class status, but only 35% of all Latino households had done the same. The TRPI study would argue that each of these points of views has its merits. "On the one hand, we recognize that a gap exists between Anglo and Anglo households. That gap has more to do with origin country levels of economic development than it does with discrimination," Professor Trejo observed.

The study is based on data from the 1980 and 1990 U.S. Census of Population and Housing, as well as several recent years of the U.S. Current Population Survey. The data have been statistically adjusted for inflation using the Consumer Price Index for urban areas.

Founded in 1985, the Tomás Rivera Policy Institute was established as a nonprofit organization to conduct and disseminate objective, policy-relevant research and its implications to decision makers on key issues affecting Latino communities. TRPI has evolved into the country's premiere research institution focusing on Latino issues and garnering national recognition for its work in the fields of education, immigration policy, information technology and civic and social research.

For more information or for copy of the study, please call the TRPI at (909) 621-8897 or visit its website at www.trpi.org.

Mary Lou Morales introduced Art Torres, chair of the California Democratic Party and state speaker. Torres spoke on the Democratic Party's progress in California and the need to continue registering voters and organizing local political groups in the state. He encouraged local people to get involved in the forthcoming re-districting of political districts, which he emphasized is the most important current issue that will impact future Democratic candidates for state, local and national elective offices.

A special recognition award was presented to Steve Ybarra, member of the Democratic National Committee and chair of the Chicano Democratic Caucus in California.

Ofelia Valdez Yeager presented an overview of the history of the WDC. The women's political group was founded in 1997 by Jane Block, Jane Carney, Mary Curtin, June Forman, Dr. Jacqueline Mimm's and Grace Stlocum. The main focus was to support women candidates and other candidates and strong support for issues important to women.

The founding members helped organize non-partisan groups, including the Riverside Community Relations Commission, the Volunteer Center, Commission on the Status of Women, among others. The emphasis was to attract women to become politically active.

Several founding members ran for offices; other members were part of the State Democratic Central Committee; and several were delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Basic tenets included women's rights, civil rights, workers rights, child care, education including political education and the environment.

The first November, 1997 meeting attracted 80 women, which approved the bylaws and elected the first slate of officers: President Jacqueline Mimm's, Vice President Mary Curtin, Recording Secretary Mary Lou Morales, Corresponding Secretary Jesse Myers and Financial Officer Grace Stlocum.

The WDC honored the founding members for their initiative in organizing the political group and were presented with a plaque and gifts.

Newly appointed Superior Court Judge Joe Hernandez installed the new officers for 2001-2002: Mary Lou Morales, President; Ana Monagas, Vice President; Leecah Bradley, Recording Secretary; Jean Raisstacher, Corresponding Secretary and Dr. Lulamae Clements, Financial Officer.

NBC4 NAMES REBECCA NIETO SENIOR PRODUCER FOR COMMUNITY COVERAGE

Rebecca Nieto has been named Senior Producer for Community Coverage, it was announced today by Nancy Bauer Gonzales, VP/News Director, to whom she will report. The newly created position is an important element of the station’s innovative approach to community-based news coverage, local programming and outreach to typically underrepresented communities.

In her new position, Nieto will be responsible for weaving the station into the fabric and the issues of our Southland communities. “We are moving in a whole new direction in our approach to community involvement,” said Bauer Gonzales. “Our focus now will emphasize how our news and local programming can establish a more meaningful agenda that can empower our views to make decisions about matters they care about. In January, we launched ‘NBC4 Listens,’ a series of meetings in our communities to help us ascertain what is important to the people who live here. Rebecca is the perfect choice for this position. Her extensive background in both news and local community outreach programs make her uniquely qualified for this new position,” added Bauer Gonzales.

In addition to “NBC4 Listens,” the station’s focus will include month-long cultural celebrations, local television specials inspired by community issues/events and stand-alone programs, dovetailing with news coverage.

Additional project plans include local town hall meetings and remote broadcasts centering on news stories that have significant impact on the community.

Nieto has been the producer of NBC4’s Emmy Award-winning “Channel 4 News” at 4PM since February, 1998. In addition, she was responsible for creating a partnership with local firefighters, bringing the “Operation Fire Safe” program to the station. She also spearheaded the station’s “Emergency Ready” outreach program. The project helped educate the community about the 911 system and celebrated the 30th Anniversary of Southland paramedics and the services provided by other emergency response teams.

Nieto is actively involved in the community and often serves as a speaker for community-based groups and non-profit organizations. She is an active member of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists.

THERE IS A SAYING IN SPANISH, “HABLANDO SE ENTIENDE LA GENTE.” LET’S TALK...

California’s electricity prices are higher now than they’ve ever been. That’s because supplies are tight and there are no price controls in the wholesale market. Unfortunately, Southern California Edison was forced to buy your electricity from this market - for far more than we’re allowed to charge.

To help cover some of these high costs, the California Public Utilities Commission has approved a temporary one-cent surcharge for every kilowatt-hour you use. It will be added to your bill through the 5th of April. This surcharge equals about $5 a month for average residential customers.

The good news is the surcharge does not apply to customers currently on the California Alternate Rate for Energy (CARE) program. CARE offers income-qualified residential customers a 15% discount on their electric service. If you think you may qualify, fill out the application included in this month’s bill and start saving money right away.

Everyone can enjoy the savings by saving energy. Adjust your thermostat to 68 degrees. Reduce the use of major appliances. In addition, unplug all electronic equipment that is not in use.

Meanwhile, Southern California Edison continues to work urgently with state and federal authorities to develop effective solutions that will allow us to continue serving our customers at affordable and reasonable rates.
