Apple challenges bid

Computer order delayed

by Steven Jennings
Chronicle photography director

The Apple Computer Corp. of Cupertino is challenging the bid for thousands of dollars in computer equipment ordered for the newly-opened University Hall.

According to state law, equipment orders the size of CSUSB's which exceed $100,000 must undergo a strict bidding process. The school's order underwent the first stage of the process, but it has now entered the second stage where it may be challenged by suppliers who were not awarded the bid.

Apple objected to the winner of CSUSB's contract, saying the supplier is not authorized to handle such a large and complex order.

One of CSUSB's responses to the hold on delivery of the equipment has been to separate the computer order for the education lab from the remaining bulk of the order. This has resulted in bringing the education hardware in under the $100,000 bidding ceiling, taking advantage of a legal loophole. Now the state supervised bidding process does not apply and the emergency request will provide equipment needed to bring the education labs on-line in time for next quarter's scheduled courses.

This means that the computer order underwent the first stage of the process, but it has now entered the second stage where it may be challenged by suppliers who were not awarded the bid.

Apple objected to the winner of CSUSB's contract, saying the supplier is not authorized to handle such a large and complex order.

"Apple has other dealers who are authorized to do these labs," he said. "They feel these dealers are more qualified by virtue of their experience in dealing with the installation of labs having this level of sophistication."

Slaton emphasized that these problems have not resulted in a cancellation of the order.

"We will still be getting all of the computers," he said. "There will be a delay of less than thirty days."

According to Slaton, the delay in the order may prove to save the university a substantial sum of money.

"The setback is beneficial because of Apple's cutting of their prices on the Macintosh product line," said Slaton. "Their prices are down from nine to 37 percent and that translates into a savings to the university of $47,000."

Touch tone registration delayed

by Renee Groese
Chronicle editor in chief

Cal State, San Bernardino students may have to wait awhile before touch tone registration will be ready for use.

Touch tone registration was slated to be ready in May, but technical problems will delay the program until at least August, said Director of Admissions and Records, Lydia Ortega.

The software program CSUSB received was not compatible with the system that they are used to operating. Administration will have to work out the technical difficulties before the system can be implemented.

"We don't want a system that will make us go backwards, or one that we don't understand," Ortega said.

With touch tone registration, students have access to phoning in the classes that they want to take. The computer will tell the students whether or not they received the classes they selected.

Cal State, L.A. and Cal State, Long Beach are two campuses that currently use touch tone. Those schools have a different software system than CSUSB does, and in order for touch tone to be used at CSUSB, they will need more implementation time.

CSUSB will be hiring a programming staff in the Computer Science department, and a consultant to run touch tone.

"The advantages of using touch tone will be hopefully the elimination of walk-thru registration, which will benefit the campus greatly," Ortega said.

Another advantage will be knowing your schedule up front.

There will be approximately 32 telephone lines for students to call. A card will come in the mail indicating when students can begin phoning in their registration.

Students must meet with their advisor before using touch tone.

They mail in their money, or can pay at school.

A worksheet will be provided with the class schedules that will tell students how to use touch tone.

"Touch tone will have the ability to tell students if classes are filled, or if they are closed or open.

Future lawyers: Pre-Law Association formed

by Deborah Medina
Chronicle staff writer

The Pre-Law Association is the first organization on CSUSB campus concerning topics of those students who want to pursue their career in law.

"There is not a particular major a student has to be studying for. In fact, the students that attended the first meeting varied in their majors from English, Political Science, Sociology, to German," Coles said.

The organization is opened to any student who wants to attend," said faculty advisor, Dr. Frances S. Coles, who is a professor in Criminal Justice and coordinator in Paralegal Studies.

"The first meeting was held on February 3, 1992. Some of the events discussed were for guest speakers to come on campus, such as: attorneys, judges and professors from different law schools. Also, visits to law schools, law libraries, and attending social events, will be part of the Pre-Law Association agenda.

"Members of the organization will also have the opportunity to take practice tests, to prepare themselves for the LSAT," said President Joe Naus, a Criminal Justice major.

"Being in the Pre-Law Association will also benefit students who are applying for law school," Naus said.

"One of the main things law schools look at besides G.P.A.'s and LSAT scores, is involvement with clubs of different interest," Coles said.

Meetings are held every other Wednesday at 3p.m. The next meeting is on March 4, in the Senate Chambers. If the room is not available, the meeting will be held in the nearest location in the Student Union. There is a $5 dollar membership fee and those that are available, the meeting will be held in the nearest location for all students.

"I feel very honored by this award. After being a professor for almost twenty-two years, it feels very gratifying," Cowan said.

Cowan directs CSUSB's masters program in psychology and chairs the Faculty Retention, Promotion, and Tenure Committee for the Psychology Department.

Cowan joined CSUSB in 1973 and served as chair of the Psychology Department from 1977 to 1983.

Cowan is active as both a researcher and an educator. She has expertise in both social psychology and women's studies.

"Although my training is in the field of social psychology, much of my work falls into the discipline of women's studies," Cowan said.

Gloria Cowan

Cowan has had articles published in journals including "Psychology of Women Quarterly," "Sex Roles," and "Journal of Personality and Social Psychology."

Cowan maintains professor affiliations with the Western Psychological Association, a Society for the Psychology Study of Social Issues, the Association for Women Psychology and the Psychology of Women Division of the American Psychological Association.

Cowan serves on the Board of Directors for the Riverside Crisis Center. "I've worked hard to serve as a mentor to my students and strive to teach classes that I believe help women find a voice about their own experience," Cowan said.

Cowan said she finds an aspect of her work rewarding, in the view of the fact that as a gradus student, she did not have a female role model acting as a mentor.

"In my teaching career, I've worked with individual students and helped them excited about research and involved in research," Cowan said.

Cowan says she has developed her own theory of education during her many years of education.

"I believe that psychology knowledge is socially connected, constantly changing, I emphasize a critical, thoughtful approach to knowledge as opposed to memorization of information that may be outdated within years."

As a researcher Cowan specializes in exploring pornography issues.

"I'm interested in a category of pornography known as dehumanizing/ degrading, as opposed to violent pornography," she said.

Cowan's most recent research explores the types of issues and media themes in pornography that people find degrading to women.

She said her research examines the overall media images of women and the social messages they contain.

Cowan is also involved in research that explores dependency from a scientific point of view and on gender and social influence.

Chisholm speaks on racism, unity

Shirley Chisholm spoke to the students, faculty and guests at Cal State, San Bernardino about her thoughts on unity through diversity, on Feb. 6, 1992.

Chisholm was the first black woman to be elected to the United States Congress for seven terms, and is also the first woman to run for president of the United States.

A graduate from Brooklyn College and Columbia University, she has an M.A. and a Ph.D. In her speech she expressed her views on unity through diversity. She began her speech with the notion that racism is still alive in America and it has been the major constraint of this country. She warned her audience that, "if we don't learn to live together we will drown together."

Chisholm addressed the audience about the background history of America. She informed some, and reminded others that in the basic doctrine of this country, black people were not considered a whole person. For representation purposes only, these people were regarded as three fifths of a person. For representation purposes only, these people were regarded as three fifths of a person. A video tape of Chisholm's speech is available in the library.

Black History Month

February features awareness events

February has been set aside to remember the history made by African-Americans. Black History Month is a time to educate those who contributed to the development of the United States of America.

Black History Month also provides a forum for discussion of social issues such as racial tension, and economic issues. Black History Month is not just for African-Americans. It is a time to educate Blacks, Whites, Hispanics and Asians about the history of African-Americans.

Recently, there has been discussion about the necessity of a Black History Month.

On the spot

Arthur Jones: "Black History Month is a time for all people to reflect on a people that have struggled and are still struggling to be accepted as equals. All of us can gain some insight by studying Black History on treating your fellow man. Treatment of people of color is improving but we still have a ways to go."

Arlene Reed: "We know the history, now we need the knowledge."

Paul Stumpf: "I think that Black History Month is great for celebrating the achievements of Black people. It is displays some of the changes that we have made in just a short period of time. We still have a ways to go but this is an excellent start."

Paula Monma: "A time of reflections and awareness of the Black American culture."

Robin Diamond: "Black History month, to me, is a celebration of equality and unity, whether you are black or white, male or female, young or old. But most important, it should not only be celebrated for a month but for life."
Courses are insufficient

Anyone who has seen this spring's course schedule can see the dramatic effects of the state's shrinking budget on education. As the funds have dried up, so have the number of course offerings.

One has to look at the courses offered within certain majors to see that some students have extreme difficulty in fulfilling their graduation requirements. There is a great deal of frustration among communication and political science majors, to name just a couple.

The Communication Department is offering only nineteen courses towards the major that are not either GE's or 600 series courses; two of them are off-campus. Another four pairs of classes are offered at the same time (meaning that only four of the eight are available for you to take). One-third of all these communication courses are offered on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The Political Science Department has problems of another nature. Three of the 11 upper division courses offered are electives, not required for any programs. One cannot help but ask the question "Why are these courses being offered when budget cuts have so severely limited the number of courses available that students need to graduate?"

It appears that professors have favorite courses and sometimes act upon their own interests, unable to see the plight of the students who cannot get those few courses needed for their degree.

We understand that professors feel these courses are important. However, they are not required for graduation and that is more important. These courses should be put on hold until the budget crisis subsides.

Another factor in political science is that three of the eight upper division courses offered that are required for graduation requirements. One cannot help but ask the question "Who couldn't graduate?" because of budgetary restraints. This worsens the situation with these extra courses because, without all of the positions filled, the department is not operating at full capacity, causing a fundamental reduction in the amount of courses that can be offered by virtue of the department's lack of sufficient human resources.

The numerous conflicts created by both of these situations do not give either group of students much of a selection.

Let's also keep in mind that most students are juggling a necessary part-time job, important extra-curricular activities and, in some cases, the demands of a family.

In preparation for this fall's course offerings, the administration and each of the university's departments need to keep these concerns in mind. Otherwise, more students will become needlessly frustrated, unable to get the courses they need to graduate.

Dear Editor,

The last issue of the Chronicle reported a story of what was believed to be a Christian evangelist who preached in the free speech quadrangle and managed to offend many students passing by. What was not reported (through no fault of the Chronicle) was the fact that the "Christian Evangelist" was no Christian at all.

I know this because I was one of the bypassers who was offended. What actually offended me the most was not that he was trying to convert me, but that he was trying by telling me things that contradict the message of the Holy Scriptures.

Perhaps the most ignorant and blatantly false claim he made was that the Holy Scriptures instructs us to repent of all our sins and live right from that time on (a truly impossible task for any mortal) and only then will we be given the gift of eternal life and be saved. In other words he said that we earn our way to heaven and if we don't make the grade then we don't make it. This is not the message of Christianity although it is a common misconception and probably why so many people are jaded and non-responsive to the true Christian message found in the scripture.

The Christian message found in scripture tells us that there is nothing we can do on our own power separate from God to earn our passage into heaven, but that salvation is the unmerited free grace of God if we only believe in Christ.

It is interesting to note that in a random sample study of over 100 University of California college students, all of whom were asked the question, "What is the main theme of the Bible?", less than 5% were able to answer. Most have never read it, passing it off as "just another book."

The important thing for us to understand is how easy it is for intelligent people to arrive at a false conclusion on the basis of an uninformed or pre-judged assumption.

As a Christian who has read the Bible many times and continue to do so finding much depth and life-giving wisdom in it, I despise the legalistic burden which that evangelist attempted to put upon us. But almost as sad is that trendiness in many of us to pre-judge and dismiss the true Christian message. Thomas Aquinas, George Washington, Stieve Wonder, Bertrand Russell and C.S. Lewis (to name a few) came to a point where they stopped pre-judging the Christian message and so should we.

Dear Editor,

On December 6, 1991, the Chronicle began to report on the controversy between People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) and CSUSB regarding the coyotes kept on campus. PETA has accused Dr. Ellis of cruel and callous treatment of these animals both during and after his research.

I would like to address the author of the Opinion column, specifically and the Chronicle, in general.

The writer was sensationalistic, inflammatory, and ignorant of the facts. I would have only been mildly disturbed if I were not acquainted with the parties involved, but since I am I am incensed at such irresponsible commentary.

The "No Trespassing" sign is there to protect the animals and provide control during research. It is not there to secretly sequester the animals in order to diabolically torture and maim them. In actuality, for the resident coyotes, the compound is a refuge.
Racism cured by education, not censorship

'Political Correctness' focuses on symptoms; real solution must go to the root of the problem

by Steven Jennings
Chronicle photography director

After hearing President George Bush's State of the Union address, I thought about his charge to the American people. He said that we must work toward ending racism.

If our society is to totally integrate, our energies must be focused on expanding knowledge of races other than our own. We must foster an understanding of other peoples and cultures as we develop tolerance for differences. Individual members of society need to learn how to deal with people who have differing opinions from their own.

Bush is dead right when he says we must put an end to racism. There are some who propose to accomplish this goal by enacting policies and laws that work to punish the mere manifestations of racism.

This is wrong. We must come up with solutions that drive to the root of the problem.

And yet there is a disease spreading throughout our nation. It seems to be festering on college campuses across the country. It is known as 'political correctness'.

Recently, the disease moved to Southern California where it has infected Cal State, Fullerton. The school's Faculty Senate is besieged by advocates of this senseless policy. They espouse the belief, among others, that rigid restrictions should be placed on the use of derogatory stereotypical, ethnically based racist labels.

The "politically correct" argue that those who verbally attack someone with racial slurs should be severely punished. This punishment can range from a warning to the ultimate penalty of expulsion. (For example, like Columbia University in New York, where the mere utterance of a slur will get you thrown out.)

It is incomprehensible that we could allow the removal of one of our peers for conveying a thought to someone else, no matter how base or misinformed it may be. It is a thought that must be dealt with and cannot be censored.

"We must come up with solutions that drive to the root of the problem."

We should treat this utterance as a sign that this person needs help dealing with those who are different from them. We shouldn't use this transfer of idea and opinion as a weapon to persecute this person and remove them from our community of ideas just because some of us think their thoughts are bad.

It doesn't help to punish people who use these slurs. These groups are engaging in an act of folly as they attempt to end racism by threatening people with punishment for allowing their hate to escape from their lips by saying words like "wop" or "wetback". This line of thinking tries to cure a disease by treating the symptom. It ignores the core of the affliction, allowing it to surface in other ways like hate crimes, prejudicial employment and bigotry in the home.

Consider an example of a student who was raised in an extremely racist home. Their parents constantly barrage them with racist jokes, slurs and stereotypes. When this person reaches college, they may never have had their beliefs seriously challenged. But now they are here at college, a sanctuary for unbridled learning amidst the free market of ideas.

The person who is of the race being defamed will be hurt. There is pain when something bad is said about one's ethnic background. But that is one of the many prices we must pay to live in a free democratic society, where the unfettered free market of ideas is fundamental and all important.

We need both good and bad ideas. We need the good to achieve goals, one of them to understand each other. We have a need for the "bad" ideas as well. We must be able to critically examine what we think is right by comparing it to other ideas that differ—each different idea is a

The transmission of this thought not only gives us the opportunity to explore the reasons why this person feels this way, it helps us examine our own beliefs. We get to see if we, deep down, feel that other races are inferior and if so, why?

These challenges to our own beliefs will serve to strengthen our convictions (unless we are persuaded to discard them totally).

But ultimately it is up to the individual to make his or her own choices. If we can never come to a consensus on the problems of racism, we must recognize and protect the first amendment rights of every individual. We may not be able to convince everyone that racism is bad; there are some who just will not agree and they are entitled to their own opinion. That is the Constitutional guarantee of every American.

'Morality and Law' theme for annual essay competition

by Stacy McClendon
Chronicle managing editor

"Morality and Law" is the topic for the Campbell Writing Competition for 1992. It is intended to promote writing through a contest in which students prepare essays regarding the relationship of law and morality. There is a $300 cash prize awarded to the winner.

The essays will be judged on the basis of originality, comprehensiveness and clarity of reasoning and writing. Essays should be written from an interdisciplinary perspective.

The competition is open to both graduate and undergraduate students currently attending Cal State, San Bernardino on a full- or part-time basis.

For more information, contact Professor Edward J. Erler in the Political Science Department, 880-5555.

The essays must be submitted to the Political Science department in the Faculty Office Building room 146. The winner will be announced on June 1.

Papers should be around 15 pages; there is a 20 page maximum length. Students should submit an original copy and two photocopies. The essays must be typed, double spaced and adhere to formal Chicago Manual of Style guidelines.

shade of grey. One of those shades is the extreme opposite of our selection. If I'm trying to affirmatively prove that something is white, does it not also strengthen my argument to also show why it isn't black, or any other shade for that matter?

We are adults. We are at college to learn from our instructors and, perhaps more importantly, to learn from each other. One way to learn from each other is to interact and sometimes this interaction is negative, rather than positive. But we have still learned a lesson. And being students seeking truth, we will pursue our encounter and discover what caused the exchange that took place within the interaction and why? We will then assimilate our findings into our own experience and move on, sometimes licking our wounds.

Let's concentrate on educating the young and break the stereotypical barriers they face. We must portray all races together as they really are, equal. Each will have its own physical characteristics. They each have their own rich history and we should learn them all, not just that of the one dominant group.

Only then will we be responding to the charge of ending racism. We will diagnose a sickness by recognizing a symptom. Then we will treat what is causing the sickness. We will try to cure the patient by attacking the disease while allowing the symptoms to run their course.

Tattoos
A fashion statement that lasts forever

by Michelle Huereque and Jennifer Studley
Chronicle staff writers

Have you ever thought about what Julia Roberts, Roseanne Barr, Johnny Depp, and Cher have in common besides being famous? Well if you guessed having a tattoo, you were right!

Tattoos have become the latest fashion statement. The only thing is, this statement will last forever. Some may think tattoos are ugly and degrading, while others see them as a symbol of their youth. "Tattoos are not just for college students. Bill Stewart, a tattoo artist at Ink Fever Tattoo Studio in Riverside, has been doing tattoos for two and a half years. "There is no typical customer. They range from college students- mostly fraternity and sorority members to old men and women," said Stewart.

The average tattoo can range from $55 and up, depending on the size, color, and location on the body. The time it takes to actually get a tattoo can be anywhere from 45 minutes to years. "Some people come in and get a quick job while others get tattoos that require additions that can take years to finally complete," Stewart explained. Stewart said most college students want greek letters if they belong to a fraternity or sorority or something small and inconspicuous. He says these small tattoos do not really show the artists expression and he enjoys creating the bigger more extravagant ones. "You can always add on to a tattoo, but you can never really take one off," he said.

Mark Sanden, a Cal State, San Bernardino student has a tattoo of a lion with green eyes and a peace sign on it. All three of these symbols have a special meaning to him. Sanden's astrological sign is a Leo, his eyes are green, and world peace is an ideal he is proud to stand up for. Sanden had another motive for getting the tattoo. "I want to be able to look at my tattoo 30 years from now and remember what was really important to me."

Chad Davidson, a junior at CSUSB got his tattoo just after high school. He says he had a panther put on his right shoulder to be rebellious. Davidson said, "Everyone told me no, so I did it anyway."

He went thru a period of time when he wished he had thought about it a little more. But when asked about it now, Davidson responds by saying, "I dig it."

Memo Castillo, a member of Sigma Nu fraternity, recently had his fraternity letters tattooed in a rather private place. The tattoo is on his right hip just below his belt line. When asked if it hurt, Castillo said, "Yeah, it hurt at the time, but it was worth it." Castillo and one of his closest brothers each got matching tattoos in the same place. "Getting matching tattoos has only strengthened our brotherly bond and they symbolize our friendship that will last forever," said Castillo.

Erika Rapport, a sister of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority, had a Tasmanian devil tattooed on her shoulder about two years ago. She then regretted it one month later. Rapport plans to get hers removed this summer through laser surgery. The cost is around $600 and she has been told it is a painless procedure. To anyone thinking about getting a tattoo she says, "Think about it a long time before you actually go through with it. It is a life long decision."

When asked what their parents thought, the most common response was, "They hate it."

Judy Hiser, a mother of a Cal State student, came home from a business trip to find that her daughter had gotten a tattoo. "I couldn't believe she did it," Hiser said. "It's a parent's nightmare to see your child do something like that to their body. I'm still very upset about it and I probably always will be."

Even though tattoos have been around for centuries, it has not been until recently that they have been used as a form of fashion. The Fads of the 90s may soon fade away, but this form of expression will stay with you forever if your are brave enough to withstand the pain.
Keith sweats it out, sweet and funky

by Natalie White
Chronicle staff writer

Keith Sweat has done it again! Along with Hiram Hicks and a little help from L.L. Cool J, they have managed to put together a slamming album entitled "Keep it Coming." Sweat first gained recognition from rhythm and blues fans in 1987 with his debut album "Make it Last Forever.

If you like Keith Sweat, "Keep it Coming," is a great buy for you and a great buy for that someone special.

The dance songs have hard core hitting beats that makes you want to pump up the volume so that bass can pound through. The first single, "Keep it Coming," is a funky dance tune that has a taste of rap, new jack swing, and funk.

Don't panic, Keith Sweat does have the sweet slow songs that made him popular, especially with the females. The second single, "Love You Down," is a very sensuous slow jam that makes you long for being with that someone special. Also featured on the compact disc is "There You Go Telling Me No Again" which was first debuted in the movie "New Jack City."

Theatre Arts department receives awards at ACTF

by Amy Heritage
Chronicle staff writer

Recognition was given to Cal State San Bernardino's Theatre Arts Department at last week's American College Theater Festival.

"For a school that has a small theater department we are definitely making a name for ourselves," commented Page Salter, CSUSB Theatre Arts Department Public Relations agent.

Janet Nickell made the finalists in the Make Up Design competition for her work in "The Importance of Being Earnest." CSUSB received a donation for producing an original play, "A Waring Absence," written by CSUSB student Jody Duncan was performed.

Duncan and Doug Buckhout, the leads in "A Waring Absence," won best actors awards.

"A Waring Absence" also won the Crew award. "The award distinguishes us as the most efficient, productive and professional crew at the competition," explains Satter.

"A Waring Absence," may go to the national competition in April at the Kennedy Center. CSUSB was one of four production crews at the festival told to "save the set."

"When you go to different schools the students don't know what CSUSB is, they think the 'S' B' stands for Santa Barbara. They don't know where San Bernardino is. This year they're going to have to take us seriously and know that our quality is strong and original," comments Jennifer Tafoola, assistant agent for CSUSB Theatre Arts Department public relations.

In addition to "A Waring Absence," CSUSB sent five nominees for the Irene Ryan acting scholarship competition. Actors each had five minutes to do a monologue and a scene with a partner.

The nominees were Weddi Hastings, Peri Hosteler, Stacey Radford, Glen Swistil and Tafoola. Their partners were Mike Lake, Patrick Weeks, Jennie Butler, Greg Renne and Debbie Gre, respectively.

These students also make up the crew of "A Waring Absence" along with the play's cast, CSUSB staff members, and additional crew members including Benete Anorbe, Gina Brittain, Natalie Jeglen and Satter, acting as company manager.

The cast of "A Waring Absence" includes Duncan Buckhout, Keith Hearon, Mike Lake, Glen Swistil and Jesse Vizziano.

Staff includes Professor Lee Lyons, Harlan Jeglin and Trudy Storm.

Satter described ACTF as a week of intense theater. "She said, "Everyone's there just for the love of the art."

ACTF is an annual conference that offers competitions and workshops for theater students across the country.

Satter comments, "It's a good feeling to know that we did a good job and got this far.

The Hand That Rocks the Cradle is an action-thriller movie which takes place in Washington. A wealthy gynecologist's wife seeks revenge after one of her husband's patients files a sexual harassment suit which leads to more women filing the same suit against him. Instantly, her life is changed due to the harassment accusation. The de­ ranged woman takes on a new identity as a nanny played by Rebecca DeMornay (Risky Business) and seeks revenge.

As the plot thickens so does DeMornay's character, she does believe that she is now the mother of her employers children. Nothing stops DeMornay from achieving her goal, whether it is murder, lies, deception or scandal, nothing is too trivial for this psycho-nanny from obtaining her goal.

This must see is on the same chiller-thriller level as Fatal Attraction or Silence of the Lambs. If you enjoyed those flicks you will love this one.

Also, Ernie Hudson (Ghost Busters) and Annabella Scorsia (Jungle Fever) give moving performances that contribute to the drama.
Country Music:

Taking America by storm

by Toni Figueira
Chronicle staff writer

In the past year country music has taken America by storm, both on television and radio. Country music has been around for ages: So what is the big deal now?

Country music has been re-designed and given a facelift. With the old stereotypes like Willie Nelson and Patsy Cline, there was no appeal to the younger generation. Fresh faces such as Garth Brooks, Clint Black and The Judds have given country music a new and improved look.

Today's country music has a new sound also. There seems to have been a cross-over to rock-and-roll and pop music. No more twangy country sounds of the past. This was proven last year with the release of Garth Brooks' third album "Ropin' the Wind". Brooks' record debuted at number one on both country and pop charts, bumping back big names like Metallica, Hammer and U2.

The "new" country music, along came the culture. Television specials like "Hot Country Nights" and "This is Garth Brooks" (a concert special) have been very successful. So successful that "Hot Country Nights" has been picked up as a weekly program.

Western wear stores have also noticed a new crowd. Stores like Boot Barn and Today's West are catering to different people and expanding there range of customers.

Country music now has a home in the Inland Empire at the "Riverside Cowboy". Here one can enjoy concerts, free dance lessons and good, clean fun. "Country music has changed considerably," said Todd Kunesh, General Manager/Publicist at the Riverside Cowboy. "Anyone who watched Garth Brooks' concert special can see that country music has energy now. There is a lot more stage presence now."

"Country music isn't about someone's dog dying anymore. It's about real things like 'Friends in Low Places','" said Kunesh. "We (Riverside Cowboy) want people to leave wanting to come back again and again," he said, "that's our goal."

Country music gives a feeling of patriotism and fun. Although it has a stigma of being depressing, as Kunesh stated, it is about real life.

In a recent interview with People magazine Garth Brooks stated, "All I'm doing is just reporting real life, and real life is sad and tense... and sometimes funnier than hell."

Even the campus radio station, KSSB, is taking part in the country music trend with the addition of Lee Romano's country music show on Thursdays from 2-4 p.m.

So is country to the 90's like disco was to the late 70's and early 80's? Maybe. It can be compared to disco in that dancing and dress are part of the culture. But country has been around too long to die hard like disco did.

Country music will always have faithful followers. Perhaps because people can relate to the "everyday guy/girl" that country singer's portray. So don't hide the fact that you like country music.

Sexual techniques - A part of literacy

Seeking Sexual Literacy

TIFFANY WRIGHT

For some, the questions asked in this article may be offensive, or may not be viewed as issues appropriate for a college newspaper. However, there is evidence that for many young women the issues addressed are valid ones and the column on Sexual Literacy is obligated to answer them.

In previous issues I asked that questions be submitted, and the following are two that were.

"I know most people probably naturally know how to masturbate but I don't. How do women masturbate?"

It is not uncommon for women not to know how to masturbate. Men's genitalia is external and techniques of masturbation are less diverse. Women masturbate in many different ways. Often women stroke, rub or apply pressure to the genital area. Most women do not apply direct pressure to the clitoris. Some women use their hands while others rub against a pillow or rub their thighs together. While there are books devoted entirely to how to achieve orgasm through masturbation, one of the most successful and popular techniques advocated by these books, is to have the water from the bathtub flow onto the genital area. Most women do not apply household machines in order to approach the genital area. Remember, masturbation is a healthy, normal and pleasurable activity.

Women are bombarded with images of the perfect body and how they do not measure up. Women's self-esteem is often wrapped up in how their bodies look and compare. Your girlfriend might at some level feel that if you think her stomach is ugly, you will think she is ugly. The answer to your question involves many issues that are related to your girlfriend's personal psychological situation, however, you might try loving her stomach. Touch and kiss each part of her body while telling her how much you love her and the part of her body you are paying attention to. Hopefully, by the time you get to her stomach, she will be comfortable with what you are doing and relax and accept your affections. Continue, during other lovemaking sessions, to pay subtle but special attention (kisses work especially well) to her tummy and tell her you love her stretch marks, her baby marks. Good luck, and don't give up, helping your girlfriend be sexually comfortable with her body could be one of the best presents she will ever get.

Recycling a priority for new ASI committee

by Nick Nazarlan
Chronicle staff writer

Associated Students Incorporated is sponsoring an environmentally-oriented recycling program at CSUSB. The program is headed by a group called The Environmental Committee.

The Environmental Committee plans to set up approximately 32 recycling bins around campus, most of which will be located next to vending machines so that students can properly dispose of their recyclable products. All proceeds will go to ASI, who will then fund selected environmental projects.

The next meeting is Monday, Feb. 24, at 5 p.m. in the Student Union, rooms A & B, or get information by calling Larisa Tompkins at 880-3931.

Prizes include:

- Hot air balloon ride for 2
- $350 scholarship for CSUSB
- Two $50 gift certificates for Bookstore
- Two $50 gift certificates for Stater Bros. market
- A $50 gift certificate for Bobby McGees
- A $50 gift certificate for T.G.I. Fridays
- A $50 gift certificate for the Inland Center Mall
- One man's CSUSB wrist watch
- One woman's CSUSB wrist watch
- Five A.S.I. T-shirts

THE CHRONICLE, CSUSB, FEBRUARY 21, 1992
SIFE promotes free enterprise

by Natalie Romano
Chronicle staff writer

Walking around campus one might have observed a flyer bearing the letters SIFE. SIFE like LIFE? SIFE like LEAF? There's nothing else on the piece of paper to supply any answers. And that's exactly the idea.

SIFE, which stands for Students In Free Enterprise wants to get your attention. Those enrolled in Marketing 590M work outside of class as a team to spread the word on free-enterprise.

SIFE members try to answer the question, “What is free enterprise?” every time they get together.

Their conclusion is “simply, it is anything that does not involve government to a great extent, anything from a lemonade stand to Disneyland,” according to President Minka Francis.

On a national level, SIFE is both the college chapters and the foundations and corporations that support them. These organizations design competition and financially reward the student teams which have the best free-enterprise campaign.

Armed with the theme “Renewing America Begins With Free Enterprise,” The CSUSB Chapter of SIFE, plans to launch a series of programs based on that principle.

“We want to reach as many people possible for competition. We’ll be targeting junior high-schools, high-schools, CSUSB and maybe elementary schools,” Thomas Kesig, SIFE’s Promotion Director said.

To reach others in the local San Bernardino community, SIFE will be setting up a booth in the Carousel Mall. Information pertaining to the United States current economic state and SIFE’s ideas on what individuals can do to change it will be available.

As for the future of SIFE, Francis would like to see membership expand and that those involved come from diverse majors, each adding something unique to the team. Furthermore, she hopes that SIFE develops an on campus business run by students.

Foundation food services offers variety for the CSUSB campus

By Mitchell Halbreich
Chronicle staff writer

The school year of 1991-92 has seen many changes in the food service here at California State University, San Bernardino. The changes aren’t just limited to The Pub and Commons.

At the Commons people can order breakfast, lunch, and dinner, various types of foods are offered. Separate featuring salads, sandwiches, grill items, waffles and more are featured. Prices vary, the best way to go is to take advantage of the buffet price. These prices are: for breakfast - $3.85, lunch - $5.35, and dinner - $7.35.

New this quarter in the Commons is the Snack Stop. Snack Stop, open from 1:30 pm-5:00 pm, has coffee, canned soft drinks, chips, fruit and pre-wrapped sandwiches available for students wanting to take advantage of the quiet times in the Commons.

The Alder Room, open Monday-Friday, 11:30 am-1:00 pm, is open to members of the campus community. Operating similar to a full service restaurant, the Alder Room is a big switch from the other food services available on campus. Prices range from $3 to $5.

The Pub, which seems to be the most popular place on campus, offers a wide variety of foods. Outside The Pub is a grill featuring hamburgers, hot dogs, chicken, hot links, and steak sandwiches. Inside The Pub, a buffet is featured offering items such as baked potato bar, pasta bar, international food, Asian food, and a taco bar. These different buffets rotate so that people here on certain days won’t always get stuck with the same thing.

Other features in The Pub include happy hour on Fridays from 2:00 pm-5:00 pm, offering free appetizers. Sandwiches including the Hot Sandwich of the Day, and the new Veggie wiggie are also offered at the counter in The Pub. Doughnuts, bagels, nachos, and other snack items are also available to the customer.

A unique feature offered by the Foundation Food Services is On-Campus Lunch Delivery on Monday-Friday, 11:00 am-1:30 pm. Lunch can be delivered on campus and orders must be called in by 10:30 am, just call extension 5916. Salads, sandwiches, and subs are offered for under $5. Beverages are also available.

For those members of the campus community who eat a lot here at Cal State, the Coyote Card is also an option. For $50, $75, and $100, the Coyote card can be purchased. Each time it is used at the various food services the balance is reduced similar to a credit card. The incentive for buying the Coyote Card is extra credit given when the card is purchased. For $50-$55, extra credit is given, for $75-$10 dollars is given, and for $100-$15 is given.

The Foundation Food Services is constantly striving to meet the expectations of its consumers. Anybody with comments or questions can reach Keith R. Ernst at extension 5916.

I was taken out to the compound just a week before the Chronicle broke the story. A friend and I asked Dr. Ellins if we could see the coyotes. Without hesitation he took us out to the compound. It was clean, roomy, and quite humane. Dr. Ellins was kind and gentle with the animals. He expressed a compassionate desire to protect them. I left the compound with a pride in my school and gratitude and admiration for my professor who is such an intricate part of it.

I only wish the reporters from The Chronicle had approached Dr. Ellins in the same way before they ever put their fingers to a keyboard to cast the first word. It is interesting that those who have accused Dr. Ellins of avoidance and secrecy are themselves the ones who have behaved, at the very least, in a clandestine manner. I would encourage you as individual journalists and the newspaper as a whole to raise your ethical standards and precision in reporting, to strive for excellence and integrity as Dr. Ellins requires of himself and his students.

Tread carefully where innocuous people might be hurt, dependent animals might be harmed, write the name of our university might be besmirched. It is your duty.

Sincerely,

Sandra L. Tarr

Baseball not intimidated by division change

by John Andrews
Chronicle sports editor

The 1992 Cal State San Bernardino baseball team has joined the seven other athletic programs on campus facing its first year in the highly touted CCAA (California Collegiate Athletic Association).

First year coach Don Parnell says despite being "rookies" in the CCAA, the Coyotes will be competitive.

"We expect to compete in this conference," says Parnell. "We're not intimidated by anyone."

Parnell comes to CSUSB after three years as an assistant at UC Riverside, a team that advanced to the NCAA Division II semifinals last year and is currently ranked third in the nation. Joining the Highlanders as nationally ranked CCAA this season are Cal Poly San Luis Obispo (6th), Cal State Dominguez Hills (13th), and Cal Poly Pomona (24th).

The CSUSB Baseball program has been no stranger to success itself having made two straight trips to the NCAA Division III World Series and compiling a record of 132-57-2 in its five-year history.

Surprisingly, the team is returning only six players from last year or so." As far as the style of baseball you play goes," he says, "you pretty much have to adapt it to the players you have.

The team will play all of its home games at Fiscallini Field in San Bernardino, a place Parnell says is ideal for power-hitting.

"It doesn't take a whole lot of power to hit it out there," says Parnell, "we certainly have a few guys who can do it."

One such player is utility man Ruben Monrozo who has three home runs already including a game-winner against Southern California College on Saturday Feb. 8. Cal State does indeed have a tough road to hoe playing 30 of its 34 games this season against nationally ranked teams.

Still Parnell says his team could very well be a CCAA "dark horse," particularly in the latter part of the season.

"Look for us to really come on in the second half," he says.

Lady Coyotes sweep out of playoff picture

The 1991-1992 Coyote men's basketball team may have watched its slim playoff hopes slip away with two home losses last weekend.

Friday against Cal State Bakersfield, the Coyotes waged a see-saw battle with the Roadrunners through most of the first half only to watch the bottom fall out in the second half, shooting only 39% from the field and losing 84-76. Senior forward Steve Hickley and Develle Walker led the Coyotes again with 20 points.

Saturday night the Coyotes faced Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, a team they had upset earlier this season for perhaps their biggest win of the year. On that night, CSUSB had executed a nearly flawless defensive performance, stifling the Mustangs potent three-point shooters and their giant (by Division II standards) center Shawn Kirkby.

On Saturday, however, the Mustangs who executed flawlessly striking a perfect balance between the perimeter sharp-shooting from reserve guard Matt Gawson, who led all scorers with 30 points, and inside muscle from Kirkby who matched his season average of 18 points, giving CPSLO a 105-95 victory.

The Coyote front court turned in a more inspired performance than the previous night as senior forward Steve Hickley poured in a career-high 23 points and gave the Coyotes their only lead of the game midway through the first half. Senior center DeShang Weaver knocked in 22 points including two monstrous dunks giving the crowd its biggest thrill of the second half. The Coyotes were led, as usual, by Develle Walker who had 28 points and strengthened his grip on the CCAA scoring title.

The Coyotes, now 4-7 in conference, travel to Cal State Dominguez Hills Friday, Feb. 21, and on to Chapman College Saturday, Feb. 22.

Lady Coyotes clip CSLA

The Cal State San Bernardino Women's basketball team edged past the Cal State Los Angeles Golden Eagles Friday, Feb. 14 at CSLA 68-65.

Kim Hansen lead the Lady Coyotes with 14 points and 11 rebounds. Steady scorer Cheryl Few added 13 points and 10 rebounds and guard Christa Ramirez doted out six assists.

The CSLA women had an excellent first half against the Cal Poly Pomona Broncos before faltering in the second half, losing 69-55. Both teams shot well from the field at 50 percent.

Cheryl Few continued to be an offensive force with 17 points including five three-pointers. Kelly O'Brien chipped in 14 points and eight rebounds. The Lady Coyotes return home to take on Cal Poly San Luis Obispo Friday, Feb. 21 and then Chapman College on Saturday, Feb. 22.

Walker leads league in scoring

by Silvia Salcido
Chronicle staff writer

Junior guard Develle Walker is leading the Cal State, San Bernardino Men's Basketball team as well as setting the pace for the entire CCAA conference with an average of 23.7 points per game and coming off a career high of 33 points against Cal Poly Pomona Friday, Feb. 7.

Prior to coming to Cal State,

Walker played two years at L.A. City College under current Coyote coach Reggie Morris.

When Morris was offered the position as head coach for CSUSB, he asked Walker along with guards Aaron Courtauld and Michael Foster to join his Coyote pack. Walker admits that he had "no real direction" as to what he wanted to do after he finished his studies at L.A.C.C. but with the guidance of his long-time coach and mentor, he took the opportunity that was offered to him.

Walker has not only had to adjust to a new school but also to a different lifestyle. Academically, he feels the quarter system is much faster and more challenging than the slower-paced semester system he was accustomed to at L.A.C.C. His lifestyle has taken-off in the opposite direction. He finds life in San Bernardino slow yet a nice change from the upbeat tempo of South Central L.A. which is considered a "rough neighborhood" in Los Angeles. Although Walker grew up in an area with a bad reputation, when asked how he avoided trouble he stated "by minding my own business and playing basketball."

The pressure that sometimes comes from being in the spotlight has not hit Walker yet. "I try to come and play hard every game, I do whatever it takes to win, concentrate on the game, and block the crowd out of my mind," Walker said. Being the leading scorer in an aggressive conference such as the CCAA is not an easy accomplishment, however, Walker doesn’t seem to be having any problems. He realizes that it takes discipline and hard work to be competitive in basketball. "If you don’t come to play every night, you can lose," Walker said.

Walker’s basketball skills and talent have enabled him to attend school on a basketball scholarship. Like many athletes he would like to one day turn professional, but he is well aware of the odds of this happening. That is why he is keeping his options open by pursuing a degree in Criminal Justice in hopes of someday becoming a probation officer, to give back to the community.
