Agent Orange Effects

by Billy McCluskey

There is hope for Agent Orange victims, despite the absence of accumulating scientific data, according to Attorney Robert H. Sulnick, professor of law and Loyola Law School in Los Angeles, who spoke here last Friday during a seminar on the effects of the deadly chemical.

As an introduction, Dr. Albert Dronscomb, who is involved in the field of Environmental Genetic Toxicology at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Livermore, California, tried to illustrate to the audience of about 30 interested veterans, students, and counselors that while inroads have been made in linking certain side effects experienced by a number of Vietnam Vets, to a possible exposure to Agent Orange, at present there apparently is no solid evidence that will hold up in court.

Mr. Sulnick is quick to point out that this no reason for the veteran to give up if he feels that he may have been exposed to or contaminated by the chemical. Legal proof is not the same as scientific proof," he stated. If a contaminant is known to man, its primary concern with the liver, weight loss or damage to Agent Orange or any other chemical component called dioxin, include chloracne, skin sores or rash, excessive tiredness, birth defects, cancer, problems with the liver, weight loss, and lack of sex drive.

Agent Orange is the general name given to the chemicals used in defoliation missions in Vietnam. Airplanes and helicopters would spray the chemicals on dense foliage to uncover enemy trails, as well as on agricultural crops of the enemy. Those veterans most likely to be contaminated are the ones who worked and flew on the Agent Orange aircraft and the ground troops who entered areas after they were sprayed. The symptoms on individuals may experience when exposed to Agent Orange or any other substance that contains the chemical component called dioxin, include chloracne, skin sores or rash, excessive tiredness, birth defects, cancer, problems with the liver, weight loss, and lack of sex drive.

Sulnick and Dronscomb both agreed that the second film did a good job showing, on one hand, what appeared to be a flagrant example of people who experienced similar problems, but on the other hand, lack of scientific proof (cause & effect). Sulnick continued to emphasize the need for veterans who feel they are suffering from any of these symptoms to contact their local VVA office. "The mood of the country is toward economic paralysis," he said.

"This is the moment in history, if we decide that we are going to take care of Agent Orange, the court will look at it and determine it. This particular group will be apart of this moment in history. If you people don't cooperate, you will not be possible," Sulnick said.

If there are any questions concerning this issue contact Ray Savre, veterans' officer on campus at CSCS, extension 7098, who about a year ago formed a non-profit organization called "Veterans Working For Veterans," specifically designed for the specifically designed to help the Agent Orange problem.

There have been some cases in which veterans did not experience symptoms until 10-12 years later. If you are a Vietnam Veteran and wish to find out if you have been contaminated, you can set up a free physical at the Jerry Potts Memorial Hospital in Loma Linda, Cal. 92570-786 Extension 2288, or make an appointment at the reception desk. The hospital is located at 1201 Benton Street in Loma Linda.

Draws Protest

by Jasmin Taenai

Coors beer, or specifically Joseph Coors, was the target of a demonstration by about a dozen men and women Wednesday, April 29, on the Student Union lawn. The purpose of the demonstration was to enlighten the campus population on various policies held by Coors, specifically anti-ERA movement, his support of the so-called "Pro-Life" amendment, and racially discriminating actions among other things.

The demonstration was directed basically against a Coors "Campusfest," which was to promote Coors products by way of buttons, balloons, and free frisbees. The "Campusfest" was held not only as an advertisement, but also as part of a stipulation for $750 worth of athletic equipment which Coors claims to have donated to Cal State.

The vice-president of Coors San Bernardino appeared to present evidence of alleged donations to women's groups. In recent months, Coors has begun donating to various groups, including selected women's organizations, to create confusion over company practices and to offset massive losses from national boycotts dating as far back as 1977, according to the Equal Rights Handbook.

However, Joseph Coors' main monetary threat is still funneled into the Heritage Foundation, an institution set up to launder contributions and channel them into the John Birch Society, Phyllis Schlafly's anti-ERA movement, and various extreme right-wing organizations, whose purposes are well known as being anti-ERA, anti-union, etc. (See February '81 issue of Mother Jones).

This demonstration was an "attempt to raise the consciousness of CSUB students on issues of which they may be unaware and which could have major impact on their lives, according to one of the participants.
Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

While mindlessly wandering to class last week I chanced by the library and discovered that our campus now offers the military in its curriculum under the pretext. ROTC, This college, within a college offers to teach America's future graduates the art of war. (surely the art department has something to say about this) the psychology of mass-murder, and the mechanics of killing. The psychology behind the phrase, "the ends justifies the means." They must also be giving instruction about the economics of war and all duly assigned utilities.

Supposedly, rather than taking the four years normally required to finish a degree, participants in ROTC are entitled to an additional four more years of service with the U.S. Army or reserve components. Mendy, I am not only offended by the presence of military concepts being taught in an institute of "Higher Education." (Was I wrong. I thought that we were here to learn something...over mankind?) but I am appalled by having paid Army Recruiters permanently stationed here at Cal State San Bernardino. Of course, what is done is done, and I am told since the ROTC was approved by the Faculty Senate, which acted to fulfill some student requests regardless of how unconcerned and unprepared the majority of them are. I am writing to you because I am scared! This college has never before had any tangible direction or goal serve for so many individual callings. With the introduction of military training on Campus, the focus upon collegiate pursuits might be lost, the ideologies of war will not.

Sincerely, C.O.

Crime Control

A special editorial by State Senator Robert Presley

Fear of crime has become epidemic in California— in fact, all across the nation. Poll after poll tells us that our citizens do not feel safe even in their own neighborhoods. Senior citizens are sometimes afraid to go out even in the daytime.

The California Legislature has heard this call loud and clear. This year, crime legislation is the top priority among legislators.

The state Senate recently approved six major bills which, when they become law, strengthen our ability to prosecute and sentence criminals who have been apprehended— criminals who have too long had their way.

In one report, the California Supreme Court has gone for beyond federal standards. As a result, criminals, even when obviously guilty, have been allowed to go free on "technicalities."

SCA 7 (Introduced by Presley) would prevent the California courts from placing stricter limits on the gathering of evidence than are required by the U.S. Constitution. If SCA 7 is approved by the Legislature, it will go before the people for a vote. If approved by you, the changes should result in a greater rate of convictions than we are now able to obtain.

SCA 7 and SCA 10, another of the measures which I am the author, are considered perhaps the two most far-reaching proposals on crime which the legislature is considering. SCA 10 would require a judge to consider safety of the public in setting bail for persons accused of serious crimes. Another critical bill, SB 54, would place strong restrictions on the use of the "diminished capacity" defense. This legal maneuver permits a defendant to plead that he or she was incapable of appreciating the wrongfulness of the act or the time of the crime.

Defenders have often used this technicality when they have been intoxicated or on dangerous drugs when committing a crime. Lawyers, using the defense, have obtained acquittals for the plea "diminished capacity" on behalf of their clients so that they can escape the full penalty for the crimes. SB 54 would close this loophole.

Other legislation which just passed the Senate include Senate Bills 383, 200, 231 and 538. SB 383 would make it more difficult for a defendant to appeal his case after pleading guilty. Sometimes, criminals plead guilty to get a lighter sentence, and later want to go back on that deal. This practice has led to an increase of court cases in California.

Current law encourages people to rob houses during the day, so that if they are caught, their punishment will not be as severe. SB 200 would eliminate the possibility of housebreakers to have "half-daytime" and night-time home burglaries. This bill also requires at least a 90-day jail term for all first degree burglars.

We are also increasing penalties for armed robberies committed in a person's home through SB 251. The new term would be a mandatory 4, or 6 years in prison, depending on the circumstances. I introduced this bill also.

Finally the Senate approved SB 358, which changes the rules under which a person can plead insanity. Many of us believe that "insanity" defense should be limited to instances where the defendant did not know his criminal action was wrong. The definition that is presently approved in such cases is much broader.

The recent Senate passage of these bills does not end our work. Other bills dealing with plea bargaining reforms, child molesting, handling of mentally disordered sex offenders, bail setting, burglary, rape, and other violent crimes are currently under consideration. The Senate passage of these bills are ready to be heard on the Senate floor, and will be acted upon by us in the near future.

All too often nowadays, voters tell me that they feel their representatives have stopped listening, have lost touch. I assure you that when it comes to crime, we have heard you.

Draft News

by Brent Wyatt

Early this month the Selective Service started to route applications for Draft Board selection officers in the state of Kentucky. The job of these officers is to screen and accept applicants for Draft Board service. This is a part of an experimental program that is already being conducted in Maryland and will soon be nationwide.

For those readers with brothers or sons in high school, the Selective Service has been notifying high school principals to inform Selective Service of the names of graduating seniors who are eligible for the draft.

So far there have been no reported prosecutions of persons who have failed to register it is believed that these prosecutions will not begin until the case of U.S. vs Wolman is decided.

A bill has recently been introduced to the California State Legislature making available to the armed forces all public documents from college through the state. If you feel as many others do, that such acts is an infringement of your right to privacy, contact your local representative and let them know.

ONLY THE ARMY GIVES YOU TWO WAYS TO LOWER THE COST OF EDUCATION IN JUST TWO YEARS.

LOAN FORGIVENESS

If you have a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan (made after October 1, 1975) hanging over your head, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment would eliminate 100% of your indebtedness. But you may prefer to take a shorter route and sign up under the Army's two-year enlistment option (and put 2/3 of your debt behind you).

Or you might want to join the Army Reserve. If you qualify, as a Reservist you can stay home, get paid for your active duty, and receive 15% loan forgiveness (or $500, whichever is greater) for each year you serve.

But we're not just offering you loan forgiveness. With your education, you can probably qualify for a higher rank and pay grade. You'll have your choice of many sophisticated Army skills.

And you may be eligible for generous monetary educational incentives.

TWO-FOR-ONE SAVINGS PLAN

If your dream is to continue your education some day, joining the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program can bring that day closer.

In fact, in just two years you can accumulate up to $9,200 for grad school. (Only the Army can offer you a two-year enlistment.)

It's not a loan, so you'll never have to worry about making payments. It's simply a savings program between you and the government.

If you save between $25 and $100 of your monthly Army pay, the government will match that amount two-for-one. On top of that, you might qualify for an exclusive Army educational incentive of $2,000. (Longer enlistments can result in higher incentives.)

And you can participate in VEAP at the same time you're receiving loan forgiveness.

So, in just two years, you can go back to school with 2/3 of your debt behind you and up to $9,200 for your education ahead of you. (Of course, a longer enlistment could result in more educational benefits and 100% loan forgiveness.)
