On opening day of the 2002 Olympic Games, Derek Parra became the first Mexican American to win a Winter Olympics medal. Parra, 31, took the silver in the 5,000-meter speed skate, and then he claimed the gold medal, setting a world record in the 1,500-meter race.

Parra’s mother, Maria McCracken, said the medals would always be a source of enrichment for her son and inspiration for other Hispanics.

“He’ll always be reliving it. It will keep on giving,” she said. “Some kid will read about him in a library when more Latino people are in the sport and it’ll say the first one was Derek Parra.”

Parra was surprised to hear that a parade would be held in his honor in San Bernardino, where his father and brother still live. “I can’t believe that. That’s something they should have for single moms with kids, war heroes, firefighters, policemen. Not athletes,” he said.

Mayor Valles compared the successes of Medalist Derek Parra to the identical successes of the city. American Cancer Society in Need of Volunteer Drivers

Drivers Needed to Deliver Flowers

The American Cancer Society desperately needs volunteer drivers during the week of March 18 to help deliver daffodils for its Annual Daffodil Days campaign. Drivers will either deliver flowers to businesses, schools and homes, or deliver Gift of Hope bouquets to cancer patients.

Like regular flower purchasers, made through the Daffodil Days campaign, the Gift of Hope program funds cancer research, educational programs, services for cancer patients and their families, and furthers the mission of the American Cancer Society. However, it also enables your local American Cancer Society to deliver bouquets of daffodils anonymously to cancer patients at local medical centers and facilities in the Riverside community.

"One of the most joyous ways to volunteer short-term with the American Cancer Society is to help deliver these flowers of hope to cancer patients and to those who purchased them," added Mary Hunt, Chair for Daffodil Days in the San Bernardino Community. To volunteer as a driver for Daffodil Days 2002, or to join the fight against cancer by purchasing these beautiful flowers, call the American Cancer society at 1-800-ACS-2345, or visit our website at www.cancer.org.

Your American Cancer Society is a nationwide voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives from cancer and diminishing suffering from cancer through research, education, advocacy and service.

Keith Johnson is the "accessible" Democratic Candidate for the 41st Congressional District of California whose incumbent, Congressman Jerry Lewis, has served for 24 years. With admittedly no professional political experience Johnson’s stint in the United States Marine Corps helped him to form the basis of his campaign, “We can’t leave anyone behind.”

Johnson worked for a time in the Redlands, San Bernardino and Yucaipa Unified School Districts as a substitute teacher, and worked on changing students minds that considered dropping out. His ideology was, “When you climb a mountain...you must reach back!”

Johnson also served the Inland Empire high and low deserts as a marketing representative for The Southern California Gas Company. From this experience he picked-up an understanding of deregulation, the South Coast Air Quality Management District’s regulations, and learned how to think "outside the box" to keep businesses from leaving California due to increasing energy costs and environmental issues.

For the past 18 years Johnson has worked with at-risk youth in the streets, juvenile hall, youth authority and in the prisons. His work with children and families has endeared him to the community, a community which he feels will support him during election time.

Donating his time to these causes, along with assisting his wife with mentally and physically disabled children in Coachella Valley, has opened his eyes to the neglect that exists within our communities. Johnson’s platform includes restored Medicare benefits for seniors and a tax relief for seniors and veterans. Johnson also wants to provide current military personnel with a pay increase to raise many of the lower ranked officers above poverty level.

“If you really want to thank a veteran, thank them financially,” said Johnson. “As a veteran, I am sensitive to the needs of the military.”

Johnson is also picking up the fight for labor, the environment, and the physically and mentally challenged. He also believes in protecting the Bill of Rights, pro-choice, and against capital punishment. Johnson also supports substance free programs and a marketing representative for Kaiser Steel, and an accounting office manager for Kaiser Hospital.

His political background, aside from his 16 years as Assessor, includes serving on the Fontana City Council from 1968-1976, and the Fontana Board of Education from 1965-1968.

Young has served as a member of the Inland Valley Development Agency, a past director of the California Assessor’s Association, a past trustee of the Fontana Elks Lodge, and a director of the Inland Valley Federal Credit Union.

Young seeks to take the following actions once elected Assessor: Increase homeowner’s exemptions; increase benefits for all veterans and military personnel; increase exemptions for those over the age of 65; allow exemptions for non-profit organizations currently excluded; streamline the appraisal system; obtain additional funds to automate the mapping system; and eliminate the $2,100,000 state loan that current Assessor obtains every year.

“The Assessor’s Office deserves someone who is dedicated to the job, enjoys working with a pleasant staff and treats the personnel in a dignified professional manner,” says Young. “I did this for 16 years and will continue to do so when elected again.”

Michael Libutti is running for the position of Assessor for the San Bernardino County and is seeking to oust the controversy and lawsuit plaguing Assessor Donald Williamson. Libutti is promoting “Results, not excuses.”

Libutti is a tough crime fighter that seeks to keep San Bernardino County safe.
Brian McCormick is a candidate for the Public Administrator/Coroner position and is hoping to gain re-election with the endorsement of law enforcement and other elected officials in San Bernardino County. McCormick seeks re-election and full-time deputy coroner positions will help him provide the department to ensure your protection.

Michael Crichton is the only candidate who has served as both Public Administrator/Coroner and Public Guardian-Conservator, and has provided a balanced budget every year since his election in 1982. He also formed a department Affirmative Action Committee to provide equal opportunity for everyone seeking employment with the department.

Other involvement includes being an alternate member of the Inland Valley Developmental Agency, and is past chairman of the San Bernardino County Law Enforcement Administrators Association. McCormick has been continually involved with juvenile justice educational programs, speakers’ bureaus, and working with families who are survivors of suicide and Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. McCormick looks forward to the challenges of the next four years with enthusiasm and expects to continue to be a leader in San Bernardino County government. He credits his staff for their outstanding dedications and is, "...pledged to continue to work hard for the taxpayers of San Bernardino County and provide services with dignity and respect."

Michael Crichton is a 28-year peace officer and a candidate for the Riverside County Sheriff. Crichton seeks to oust the current Sheriff and revamp the departments archaic management practices. "Since 1963, the department has had only three sheriffs," said Crichton. "This is due directly to the incumbent sheriff passing the mantle of command to his chosen successor. The operative word is his; not your chosen successor."

Some of the issues Crichton believes need addressing are adequate response times, safety during high speed pursuits, jail overcrowding, fatal shootings of the mentally ill or homeless, and racial profiling. Crichton feels that his vast experience in patrol, jail, detectives, administration, contract city, dispatch, fleet, and specialized assignments will help him provide the department with the leadership that is currently lacking. One of Crichton’s key campaign promises is to bring diversity to the Riverside Sheriff’s Department. "The Sheriff’s Department policy makers are 12 white males and one white female," says Crichton. "I propose more diversified recruitment and the development of an employee mentoring program to better address the needs of employees and department, rather than the current ‘good old boy’ network in place for promotions."

Crichton also seeks to end the department’s routine practice of detaining and turning non-English speaking persons over to the Border Patrol during DUI and seat belt checkpoints, and parolee-at-large sweeps based on citizenship status. "I ask for your vote for me as Riverside Sheriff on March 5. I am actively seeking your support in this critical race," said Crichton. "I will bring leadership to your sheriff’s department to ensure your protection. Please join with me in making a change for our betterment."
DEREK PARRA DAY

Parra arrived in San Bernardino Monday night, in time for a Tuesday full of activities in his honor. San Bernardino Mayor Judith Valles was there for the homecoming and joined thousands in Tuesday's events. City officials presented Parra with a key to the city and he was the guest of honor at the Mayor's State of the City address.

"I grew up here," Parra told the crowd. "All the values I have in my life have come from here. Family's big to me. My wife sacrificed more than me. When I knew that I had the record, the first person I looked for was her."

The parade began Tuesday morning at 10 at the National Orange Show Events Center and traveled one-half mile north on E Street to Arrowhead Credit Union Park. In a black convertible, Parra and his wife, Tiffany, led young San Bernardino athletes in a parade, followed by marching bands, floats, fire engines, police motorcycles and more than 1,400 people. It culminated with a two-hour rally in the stadium with bands, refreshments, white doves, fireworks and thousands of well-wishers.

"I can't believe it," Derek told the crowd. "But I'm glad that what I did was able to touch you guys in some way. I'll remember this day for the rest of my life."

A sold-out dinner was held to honor Parra Tuesday night — originally 600 seats were planned, but due to demand the number was bumped to 1,000. A Mariachi band performed and Mayor Valles, the guest singer, serenaded Parra.

Parra is an example for all of us, said Valles who encouraged the crowd to "get out of your little comfort zones and go for the gold."

Parra left Tuesday night for Burbank, where he was interviewed for NBC's "Today," "Dateline" and "Tonight Show."

HOW HE GOT THIS FAR

Parra's Olympic dreams were nourished on roller skates in San Bernardino's Westside. At 17, Parra graduated from Eisenhower High School in Rialto. He sold everything he owned and left home with a resume that included just one line: local skating legend.

He bought a plane ticket to Tampa, Fla. in 1987 with $200 from his parents. Tiffany, led young San Bernardino athletes in a parade, followed by marching bands, floats, fire engines, police motorcycles and more than 1,400 people. It culminated with a two-hour rally in the stadium with bands, refreshments, white doves, fireworks and thousands of well-wishers.

"I can't believe it," Derek told the crowd. "But I'm glad that what I did was able to touch you guys in some way. I'll remember this day for the rest of my life."

A sold-out dinner was held to honor Parra Tuesday night — originally 600 seats were planned, but due to demand the number was bumped to 1,000. A Mariachi band performed and Mayor Valles, the guest singer, serenaded Parra.

Parra finally made the World Roller-skating Speed Team. He moved on to inline skating in the early '90s and became a three-time national champion, holding records in short- and long-distance events.

Parra was the most decorated man in the 1995 Pan Am Games, taking home five gold medals, two silver and a bronze.

"I've been skating 45 years and I've never seen anyone as motivated," said Dooley. It was Dooley who suggested the idea of skating on ice to Parra.

While skating at a rink in Orlando, Parra met Tiffany Schwier, the woman who is now his wife and the mother of his daughter, Mia.

Parra tried ice-skating for the first time in Milwaukee, home of the Winter Olympic training facility. It was a lot harder than Parra expected.

"Roller-skating and ice skating may look the same, but they are completely different," said Parra. "I had a good feel for the ice, but I definitely had to forget everything I learned roller-skating."

Parra did master ice skating and made the national team. Derek and Tiffany moved to Milwaukee where Derek trained and Tiffany attended Carroll College. She worked three jobs: at a makeup counter, in radiology at a hospital and at a bakery.

Derek secured sponsorship and a job with Home Depot, which developed a job program for potential Olympians. Their work and sacrifices paid off when Parra made it to the 1998 Games in Nagano, Japan. Due to an unfortunate filing error, Parra was not able to skate.

Parra won the 2000 U.S. all-around title, the 2001 North American Championship and the 2001 U.S. National Championship. He then won the first World Cup medal in the 1,500-meter race last November. Finally Parra won two medals in Salt Lake this month.

When the Telecommunications Act of 1996 was created, there was a driving belief that through the increased level of competition throughout the telecommunications industry such world-shaping products as the Internet would soon be made available to everyone. Yet here we are a little more than five years after the Act and the reality is a growing racial divide for high-speed Internet access.

All I can say is thank goodness we have representatives like Joe Baca looking out for us in Congress. He clearly understands the importance of delivering broadband to all communities, current regulations continue to foster a "Digital Divide" by needlessly delaying the delivery of the most recent technological advances.

For a community to succeed in today's world it must have the most current and advanced resources available. Currently, and certainly in the near future, that resource is high-speed Internet access, and what drives that high-speed train is something called bandwidth. Unfortunately many companies that can provide this increased bandwidth and bring our communities into the technological age, the local telephone companies, are being shackled from doing so through regulatory roadblocks. This must stop.

So why is this happening? Currently, most local telephone companies, such as SBC Pacific Bell, are regulated on a different level than long-distance carriers, like AT&T. Unless we see a conscious effort to deregulate the data market, I fear that this divide will not only sustain itself, but more than likely it will continue to widen. In other words the "haves" will continue to thrive and the "have nots" will continue to be left behind. And guess which communities can be found in the "have nots" category? That's right, the rural and ethnic communities continue to find themselves on the outside looking in.

So what can we do? We can help by putting pressure on the FCC to speed up the deregulation of the data market and allow local telephone companies like SBC Pacific Bell to invest in the future of our communities. Opening the data market will accelerate deployment of advanced technology and services to all segments of the consumer market, including the rural and ethnic communities of our nation. By eliminating the arbitrary geographic regulatory boundaries, and by eliminating anti-competitive regulations that are applied to some, but not all, service providers, that existing gap between information "haves" and "have nots" will begin to close.

Never in the history of the world has there been a greater and potentially more prosperous time for our children to live. Imagine your son or daughter tapping into the wealth of the high-speed Internet to learn about their ancestors, or to study for their next school exam? However, this will simply remain in your imagination unless we stand up and demand that these regulatory roadblocks be pushed aside and allow all companies an even playing field. Then, perhaps we will see the 21st century bring our entire nation the rewards and possibilities of the information superhighway.

LIFESTYLE CHANGES AND EDUCATION SAVE LIVES

The American Heart Association (AHA) estimates that heart disease annually costs society $300 billion, but fortunately, studies show that it can be prevented with lifestyle changes. In fact, the AHA predicts that life expectancy in the United States would rise by nearly seven years if all forms of heart disease were eliminated. "The first thing that people can do is educate themselves about heart disease," said Wendy Kuran, vice president of PacifiCare's Women's Health Initiative. "At PacifiCare, we have a program, Take Charge of Your Heart Health, that teaches people about the signs and risk factors. One important step for prevention is to work with their physician in tracking family health history for heart attacks or stroke." The program also includes information on:
• How to prepare "heart healthy" meals, avoiding food high in fat and salt, which can lead to high blood pressure
• Ways to fit an appropriate exercise regimen into a busy lifestyle to avoid obesity
• A wallet card to help track important screening tests and results
• Actions to decrease risks for heart disease, such as smoking cessation, lowering high blood cholesterol levels, controlling diabetes and seeing a healthcare provider regularly.

During a debate on the Floor of the Republican-sponsored amendment, Arizona Republican J.D. Hayworth likened Hispanic legal permanent residents to "Enemies of the State." Rep. Hayworth's vitriolic remark was made during debate over a Republican-sponsored amendment that would have disproportionately impacted Hispanic voters by preventing legal permanent residents from participating in the political process.

Interestingly, by Rep. Hayworth's standard, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao and HUD Secretary Mel Martinez would have been considered "Enemies of the State" since they were, at one time, legal permanent residents. Legal Permanent residents pay taxes and play by the rules. Therefore, their participation in the political process is well documented. For example, one third of all Presidential Medals of Honor have been awarded to Hispanics. Today there are 20,000 legal permanent residents enlisted in our nation's armed forces. They are protecting our airports, seaports, and borders. They risk their lives daily in Afghanistan and other places around the world to protect us here at home.

Unfortunately, Republicans choose to ignore the accomplishments made by Hispanics in this country and continue to target the Latino Community. "Rep Hayworth's comment is the latest attack on the Hispanic community by the Republican leadership in Congress, who speak out of both sides of their mouth when it comes to increasing Hispanic participation in politics," said Congressman Bob Menendez. "What happened to a kinder and gentler Republican Party? Fortunately, Republicans failed in their attempt to silence voices and exclude ethnic groups. The Democratic Party will continue to work hard to register and educate all voters - both current and future. And we are fighting to ensure that all voices, not just those with the biggest checkbooks, are heard," said Congressman Bob Menendez.

The amendment, offered by Republican Congressman Dick Armey from Texas, failed by a vote of 160 voting yes to 268 voting no. The Republican amendment to the Shays-Meehan Campaign Reform Act would have prohibited donations from legal permanent residents to political parties. This would have disproportionately impacted the Hispanic community, since Latinos make up the largest number of legal permanent residents in the United States. "The Republican message to Hispanics is loud and clear: Stay out of politics," said Congressman Bob Menendez. "By labeling Hispanics as enemies, it clearly shows that they are not welcome in the Republican Party. This is surprising considering the growing political clout of Hispanics around the country. It's even more surprising that these remarks were made by a representative from Arizona, which has one of the fastest growing Hispanic populations in the nation. The Democratic Party believes that all Americans should have the right to show their support for a political cause. Participation in politics and government is crucial to our strength as a nation."
TAKING A LOOK AT YOUR CAREER STRATEGY

In an economy that forces companies to scrutinize every investment and expenditure, employees are looking for ways to increase or maintain their value to their employer. Career experts agree that the value of an employee to a company increases as the employee's knowledge and skills increase. This is the case whether looking to advance within your current company or competing in the job market.

Faced with the increased challenges to stay current, knowledgeable and marketable, self-improvement becomes more than an option, but an essential element of your career strategy.

The first place to look when evaluating your career strategy is to determine if additional education is a way to increase your professional value.

An interesting statistic, according to the U.S.-Dept. of Labor, is that adults with at least a bachelor's degree, on average, earn 75 percent more than workers with no education beyond a high school diploma.

Once you have decided that a degree or an advanced degree would be beneficial, you must decide how best to achieve your education goal.

This is no-easy matter. Most employees are time constrained with business, family and personal obligations.

For busy working adults, a traditional university or college experience is simply unrealistic. A good alternative for working adults is an online learning environment. But once again, employees should closely look at the quality of that online experience.

One of the largest and most well known online learning institutions is the University of Phoenix Online. Fully accredited, and with more than 34,000 students currently enrolled, University of Phoenix Online developed a course calendar that coincides with an adult pace and lifestyle. The online course calendar allows them to complete an undergraduate degree in three to four years, and a graduate degree in about two years, while they continue to hold down jobs and raise families.

Provided with this flexible and convenient access to educational advancement, many individuals are recognizing a window of opportunity to improve their lives and careers.
