Collective Bargainer Needed

The California State Student Association (CSSA), representing over 300,000 students in the California State University system, this week launched a drive to recruit individual students who will represent their university system's entire student population at upcoming contract negotiations between CSU management and labor organizations of academic and student service personnel.

The Higher Education Employer-Employee Relations Act (HEERA), which covers public higher education employees in the United States, in order to cover up the additional third-party role at the bargaining table. "This will be the first round of negotiations for 3 of the bargaining units--students are currently allowed to participate," stated CSSA's Collective Bargaining Director, Shari Mills, who is also a CSCEG alumnus. "Students have already participated in one set of negotiations between CSU and the Physicians, and were well received. The CSSA hopes for similar success in future negotiations."

Student representatives will be the right to comment upon contract proposals submitted by labor and management during negotiations, and express concern and represent students interests in jeopardy.

The CSSA is seeking students who are interested in collective bargaining and knowledgeable of student issues. Direction on policy will be given by the Association's collective bargaining committee, which will help representatives analyze contract proposals. Although HEERA has been in effect since 1979, voting for exclusive representation did not occur until early 1982," Paul Knepprath, the CSSA collective bargaining chair said. "The CSSA lobbied to ensure that HEERA included student representatives on the bargaining table."

This fall, for the first time in 26 years, the California Student Aid Commission will be unable to pay full fees for student grant recipients at either the University of California or the California State University systems, according to Arthur S. Marmaduke, Commission Director.

Student Aid Down

Costs at both independent and public California colleges and universities have climbed beyond the reach of State student aid programs. This fall, for the first time in 26 years, the California Student Aid Commission will be unable to pay full fees for student grant recipients at either the University of California or the California State University systems, according to Arthur S. Marmaduke, Commission Director.

California State University students may receive $247 in Cal Grant aid towards fees averaging $430 this year. One year ago, fees and aid averaged $290.

University of California fees this year average $1230; the maximum Cal Grant is $844. One year ago, both fees and aid averaged $800.

In order to meet its five percent State general fund budget cut, required of all State agencies, the Commission reduced grant aid to students proportionally, from $25 to $75 per student. However, because of the substantial increase in UC and CSU fees, the State Legislature gave the Student Aid Commission an additional $1.4 million to assist students at these two institutions.

The Student Aid Commission's budget for Cal Grants, with the $1.4 million added for UC and CSU students, is $84,536,000 for 1982-83 as opposed to $85,157,000 for 1981-82. With federal funding of State student grants holding steady this year at $11 million, the overall budget reduction for the agency is four percent.

The Student Aid Commission annually awards $62,462 Cal Grants (new and renewal) for student financial assistance programs for college and postsecondary vocational school students. Students must attend a college or university within the state. Last year 105,337 students applied for these grants.

The Commission directs the State's financial assistance programs for college and postsecondary vocational school students. These programs include Cal Grants, State Graduate Fellowships, Bilingual Teacher Grants, and the California Guaranteed Student Loan Program.
Does the Draft Waste Money?

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors (CCCO), the nation's largest draft counseling agency, charged Selective Service with wasting taxpayer's money by planning to mail a quarter of a million letters to suspected non-registrants in an effort to enforce a non-enforceable registration.

"The federal courts handle about 30,000 cases a year at this time," stated Jim Feldman, attorney at CCCO. "So far, only eight of these cases have involved non-registrants. There is no way the courts can handle hundreds of thousands of new cases."

The names of these suspected draft resisters are obtained by matching Selective Service registration lists with Social Security Administration files. IRS then mails the letters. The first mailing has been sent to 33,000 men. Roscoe L. Egger, Jr., Commissioner of IRS, has said IRS only plans to turn over 200 addresses to Selective Service out of those who don't respond to the warning letter because it seems unlikely the Justice Department would prosecute more than that number.

"People who receive these letters, or have questions concerning non-registration clearly need more information which CCCO can give them," attorney Feldman said. CCCO has started a list of people interested in non-registration issues, to which the organization sends out regular bulletins on developments in the area of non-registration. According to the General Accounting Office, over 700,000 men haven’t registered.

At this time the federal government has only indicted eight people for refusal to register. The government is currently only charging non-registrants who have turned themselves in, as the eight above. Warning letters from the Justice Department have been sent to some non-registrants turned in to the government by private individuals.

In addition to sending out periodic information on non-registrants, CCCO counsels individuals concerning their specific problems, and helps non-registrants find lawyers. CCCO also helps people in the military who are looking for discharges and does enlistment counseling, telling people considering the military the other side of the story from that which is given in the recruitment ads.

For further information, please write to Carol McNeill, c/o CCCO, 2208 South St., Philadelphia, PA., 19146, or call her at (215)645-4626.

The Facts on Proposition 15

Proposition 15 campaign leaders charged that out-of-state munitions makers are trying to protect their profits with massive contributions to support the California handgun initiative on November’s ballot.

According to the opposition campaign's own figures, a total of $565,500 had been pumped into the effort to defeat Proposition 15 by a dozen gun and ammunition manufacturers. All but one are located outside California.

A recent letter to the Register's editor accused the gun makers of cynically trying to buy the November election. "The people who profit from an unrestricted trade in handguns have an obvious economic interest in the election’s outcome," said State Chairman Victor H. Palmieri.

"They have little concern for the safety and well-being of Californians. What matters to them is profit." Palmieri called attention to a recent statement by James L. Ober, president of Smith & Wesson, which makes one out of every five handguns sold. "I sell the handguns the market is demanding...I would like to see a one-time registration fee of under $10 will cover all administrative expenses."

"This is a clear indication of how the opponents intend to finance their campaign blitz—not with small donations from individuals but with huge infusions of money from out-of-state gun merchants," Phillips said.

"The voters of California should be on notice. They can expect one of the biggest campaigns of distortion and deception on record.

THE FACTS on Proposition 15

It will:
- Strengthen existing laws regarding the registration of handguns.
- Require registration of all handguns with the Attorney General by November 2, 1983.
- Make registration information confidential.
- Enable law enforcement officers to track down the owner of a handgun used in a crime.
- Provide that after April 30, 1983, only registered handgun will be eligible for resale, and thereby limits the number to those in circulation on that date.
- Prohibit importation of handguns, except by law enforcement personnel and other exempted categories, after November 2, 1982.
- Impose a mandatory prison sentence of one year for engaging in the sale of blackmarket handguns.
- Establish civil liability for anyone who knowingly violates the registration requirement in transferring a handgun that is then used for wrongfully or negligently kill or injure someone else.
- Prohibit the Legislature from placing additional restrictions on the ownership of rifles and shotguns.
- Prohibit the Legislature from banning ownership of handguns without a prior vote of the people.

It won't:
- Take handguns away from law-abiding citizens.
- Prohibit a person who does not own a handgun from buying one at any time.
- Require registration of rifles and shotguns or affect the possession of them in any way.
- Prevent an organization with a legitimate need for handguns from acquiring all the new ones they need (law enforcement personnel, security guards, target ranges, and so forth).
- Require the registration of antique pistols, curios, or relics.
- Cost the taxpayers anything, since a one-time registration fee of under $10 will cover all administrative expenses.

College students young and men and women embarking on a new beginning: learning, meeting new people and experiencing those things that prepare them for life. This is their story...

Anne Wheeler arrived on the campus of Fibber University young, independent and very ambitious. All her life she had dreamed of becoming a writer. This was where she intended to fulfill that dream.

Her first stop was at the school newspaper "The Fibber Weekly", where she applied for a job as a reporter. There, Anne met Nick Rossi, the head of the English department and advisor to the newspaper. Nick was a handsome, outspoken man with a very low opinion of women. When Anne walked into his office with a kind of cocky confidence, he was instantly turned off. Despite reservations, he hired her to do small errands. Anne was glad to get the job and planned to move up soon.

California State College, San Bernardino graduates Ann Russo and Ruth Bavetta will present a show entitled "Anonymous Autobiography" at the Gallery of the Villasenor Branch Library in San Bernardino. An exhibition of paintings and drawings in a variety of media, it is an extremely personal statement by two artists who are also close friends. Visitors to the show will see two similar, but individual views of life. Russo's paintings and multimedia drawings are a "diary" of her need to arrive at a visual manifestation of the most important aspects of her emotional existence. She uses a strong personal visual vocabulary to achieve expression and continuity. Bavetta shows large drawings of human figures isolated against dark backgrounds. She is chiefly concerned with the commonly accepted rituals and ceremonies of modern life and her reactions to them.

In addition to degrees from Cal State, both artists studied at San Bernardino Valley College and Bavetta holds a Master of Fine Arts from Claremont Graduate School. Both have exhibited in numerous solo and group shows. The show will be open Monday, through Saturday, October 23 to November 19 at 525 N. Mt. Vernon, San Bernardino, during regular library hours.

Foreign Study Costs Down

Because the US Dollar has strengthened in recent months vis-a-vis the French Franc and the Spanish Pata, an academic year abroad, an educational service organization which arranges individualized study in the Universite de Paris and the Universidad de Madrid, announces that costs will be greatly lower beginning with the spring semester of 1983. In France, for example, where the rate of exchange is the most favorable for Americans that it has ever been, the reduction is more than $800.00 per year, $400.00 per semester. Thus, the costs are often much less than those of a semester in an American university.

Applications for spring and fall 1983 are now being received by Academic Year Abroad, 17 Jansen Road, New Paltz, NY 12561. Students wishing a brochure and application should send two 20¢ stamps to the above address.

Legislative Internship Program

Interested in spending the Spring Semester Working for the Legislature in Sacramento?

Professor Jean Torcom, CSU, Sacramento, announced today that the Sacramento Semester Internship Program is now accepting applications for Spring 1983 from students enrolled at all 19 state university campuses. Torcom, the program coordinator, explained that the state-wide program is a combined package of an internship within the state government and an intensive seminar in California government and politics. He noted that the goal of this total immersion into the political scene is to give the students a learning experience in public policy and social policy that would otherwise not be available to them. Since the program began seven years ago, interns have been placed in offices representing nearly every aspect of state government. Many program alumni, who now number over 300, are now working in Sacramento as lobbyists, consultants, or legislative staffers.

Interested students should contact the home campus Political Science Department. Each campus has a member of the Political Science faculty serving as the local representative to the program. Information can also be obtained directly from Professor Torcom through the CSU, Sacramento Department of Government, 600 Jay Street, Sacramento, California 95819. The application deadline is Monday, November 29, 1982.

For more information contact Jean Torcom: (916) 454-6387 or 454-6202.

5. Someday you wish you were in college.
