Escape!

by Helen Jones

Students at Cal State, San Bernardino don't have to be handcuffed to their books. They can Escape! Five or six trips are scheduled each quarter, according to Colleen Robinson, student coordinator of the campus Escape '82 program.

Escape '82 provides students, their families, and guests, along with faculty and staff, an opportunity to learn about and discover California's outdoors while participating in leisure-time activities.

One activity held in October was the Third Annual Budweiser Canoe Races at Glen Helen Regional Park. There was one male and one female per team and prizes were awarded for the fastest time. Students also Escaped recently to the San Gorgonio National Forest for an overnight backpacking adventure and have been to Santa Anita for the horse races.

An informal atmosphere enables students to make new acquaintances, exchange ideas, and develop personal awareness, according to the current faculty and staff, an opportunity to learn about and discover California's outdoors while participating in leisure-time activities.

In asking what she thinks of the Escape '82 program, student assistant Claudia Dyer says, "I've gone on several of these trips, including a day on Catalina Island, and it was lots of fun. I'm especially looking forward to seeing the taping of a popular television show on November 19 when a trip will be made to Burbank." Possible shows to see will include That's Incredible, One Day at a Time, Different Strokes, and Suzanne Sommers' new show.

Escape '82 is sponsored by the Associated Students, the Activities office, and the Department of Physical Education and Recreation. However, funding comes solely from the Associated Students.

Mary Kehew, Executive Secretary for the AS said, "the 1982-83 budget allocated for the Escape program was $945 plus $155 for student assistant and staff benefits. Colleen Robinson added, "Most of the trips are self-supporting. The budget money received from the AS is used primarily for printed supplies, advance deposits on trips, transportation, purchase and repair of camping equipment, prizes for (con't. on p. 3)"

Research Papers

by Mary Sheehan

Small yellow business cards with the words "Research Papers" printed in large black letters can be spotted around the Cal State, San Bernardino campus:

The company listed on the cards, Research Assistance of West Los Angeles, offers research papers for sale at $4.50 per page.

"Research Assistance has been in business for 12 years," said a spokesman for the firm, who requested anonymity. "We have over 11,000 different research papers on file, ranging from five to fifteen pages in length."

The spokesman, interviewed by telephone, added, "You are welcome to come into our office and look through our catalog. If you find anything that you like, you just pay for it and take the copy home with you."

"Even though our cards say that we do not accept personal checks, we do so as long as you have a check guarantee card. We also accept Visa and MasterCard. If you don't find anything that you like, you can buy one of our catalogs to take with you. Then later if you find something you are interested in, just call us and we can send it to you and charge it to your Visa or MasterCard account."

Isn't this the same thing as plagiarism? "No, it is not plagiarism," answered the spokesman. "We sell reference material to be used as information only in assisting you in writing your own research paper. Using our information is the same as using library-type reference material. If you are planning to turn the paper in as your own work, then we will not sell it to you. That is not the purpose of this business. We sell reference material for information purposes only."

"This is a legitimate business. Teachers at various colleges and (con't. on p. 3)"

Support for Classes Sought

by Bill Batine

In support of faculty here at Cal State, I am writing this article about Tony Gneck, the Martial Arts instructor, who incidentally does not have any prior knowledge of my writing this.

I have known Tony Gneck for a little more than a year. Tony has been a source of inspiration to me since I took his class for self-defense. Situations have arisen where I had to use martial arts to protect myself and from friends on danger, and I want to take this opportunity to thank Cal State for offering a program like this to protect its students and faculty members.

Tony Gneck is an 8th degree black belt instructor. He teaches different forms of martial arts such as judo, jujitsu, and Thai kick boxing. He also taught hand-to-hand combat in the Marines. He has been teaching Martial Arts for 26 years, 14 of which have been devoted to Cal State, San Bernardino.

My main reason for writing this is my concern for a judo and jujitsu quarter. I have noticed that every time Tony Gneck has told the Continuing Education Department and the Administration that the judo and jujitsu class will be offered, they never add these two classes to the course catalog. If these two classes don’t receive the amount of students necessary to hold these classes, it will be discontinued and will not be offered again.

I ask the Cal State Police Department to help get the required number of students for next quarter to keep it open. I have noticed that Cal State Police Investigator Quentin Moses has stressed the need to protect against rape and assaults on people and what they should do after an attack.

This is where Tony Gneck’s classes fit in, especially for women. These classes should be a follow-up to lectures such as “Lady Beware,” and promotion of them would help the problem of enrollment.

Let’s not allow our negligence or lack of knowledge about classes such as these to discontinue a very beneficial and urgently needed program.

Greek Club Dance

by David Greene

For the first time in its 17-year history, Cal State College, San Bernardino is offering a Bachelor of Science degree in Physical Education.

According to Dr. Reginald Price, P.E. Department chairman and chief architect of the new major, the program will be designed to prepare students for jobs not only in the public school system, but also for the growing field of physical fitness awareness in the private business sector.

“P.E. program will officially begin direct course work in the Winter Quarter of 1983 and will provide students here with a diverse program of teacher education along with techniques for working in public and private recreational facilities,” Price said.

After a student has received a degree in P.E., it will be required that he or she come back for a fifth year in order to receive a teaching credential or to begin work on a graduate program.

“The emphasis here is geared toward the marketability of the student after he or she receives a degree,” Price continued. “The major itself involves multiple spokes that within this major a student may branch off into other areas that may be interspersed to sports or other forms of physical activity.

“If a student chooses P.E. as a major, there will still be enough open elective units so that he or she can work on a minor related to physical education. Areas such as sports business or sports psychology are opening up right now in the job market, and many corporations are aware of the value of physical activity as an effective and healthy way of reducing stress, especially among executives,” Price added. “They are looking for people with college backgrounds in psychology or kinesiology to set up workout programs for their employees.”

“I’m a firm believer in P.E. as part of an individual’s education, and came to this college five years ago with the specific intention of setting up a certified credential program. More jobs are open today at the junior college and college level than there were five years ago for P.E. majors, and hopefully we can now begin to attract those students in this area who have to commute to either Cal Poly Pomona or UCR.”

Brochures containing information on the new P.E. major will be distributed to public schools and the surrounding community in late December. Students wishing to obtain more information on the program for Winter registration should consult the 1982-83 college handbook or contact the P.E. Department (887-7561).

Museum Studies Course

Combine a smattering of art, a dash of computer science, one part of museum studies, exposure to anthropology, a liberal dose of anthropology and culture studies.

While that course description does not come from the college catalog, it does come some of the ingredients for the new Museum Studies track now available in the Anthropology major at Cal State, San Bernardino.

The program, launched this fall, is designed for people who wish to pursue a professional career in museums, for volunteers, and for people who want to learn more about the history, purposes, and organization of museums.

While emphasizing a general, anthropological approach to museum studies, the program is applicable to museum work related to historical archives, the arts, and the physical and biological sciences, according to Dr. Jonathan Kent, who joined the Cal State faculty this year to coordinate the new program. An internship, offered at several museums in Southern California, will provide practical training in the technical aspects of museum work.

The foundation course for the new program, Museum Studies, will be offered for the first time during the Winter Quarter. The course, which provides an overview of the museum studies field, will be taught from 6:00 to 7:30 p.m., Mondays and Wednesdays beginning Jan. 10.

Guest lecturers, field trips to museums and galleries and a practical experience are planned for the course, which carries five quarter units of upper-division credit in the humanities. There is no prerequisite.

In addition to work in museumship and anthropology, students in this program may take a variety of courses including exhibit design, management and administration.

tournaments such as golf and canoe racing, etc.

She commented that fees are charged to cover only costs of transportation, lodging, and special equipment.

Occasionally, Robinson noted, a trip is free of charge. "For example, the taping of the T.V. show is free since arrangements were made through a person who works at the television studio and they are providing the bus as long as we have a minimum of 35 students signed up to participate.

"Sometimes a trip is cancelled for lack of interest, such as the Universal Studios Tour," said Sherri Anderson, who works at the Student Union reception desk. "Perhaps the cost was too high. But a cancellation is rare.

"From 25 to 40 people attend each trip and we have had as many as 150 go to Disneyland at one time," noted Robinson.

All participants are required to complete a liability release form and after each trip they are asked to evaluate the trip and give suggestions for future outings. Volunteers to lead trips are welcome.

The best way to become familiar with the program is to participate. All reservations for the outings are taken at the Student Union reception desk.

A Mammoth Ski Trip is planned for the first trip of January to the Colgate Company. In addition speakers Joyce Folley and Miranda Trichel will be leading the trip to the Sierra Nevada. Another trip is planned for March 10 to the US Festival. The German Club will again sponsor a German Fasching Dance, a Mardi Gras-style costume and dance. A German band will be playing.

For the Spring Quarter, the German Club will again attend a Festival of German Arts and Life. This Festival will be held in the mountains. The objectives of this Festival are to develop student interest in the German language and culture. All festival participants will be required to speak only German. This will provide an opportunity for students to use German in meaningful communication situations and extend their period of time. The Festival is for students of German from all Southern California colleges and universities.

Dr. Kent meets twice a month. For information, please call Dianne Hamre, Public Relations Director for the club (883-1632) or Theresa Molitor, club advisor (887-7445).

Marketing News

On November 12, The Marketing Association, while visiting the Miller's Outpost advertising-marketing office had the opportunity to meet Homer Miller, the Bohemian from the Miller's Outpost commercials. Much to the surprise of the members, Homer, really Bob Thompson, is not an artist by trade, but is the Head of the creative ad department for Miller's Outpost.

Located in Rancho Cucamonga, the ad office is responsible for producing all of Miller's Outpost commercials and advertising campaigns. All phases of creating ad flyers, including all printing is done in-house. Miller's Outpost is one of the largest growing retail clothing chains in the west, rising from 12 stores in 1974 to almost 200 today. Part of this success can be attributed to the close family-oriented relationship of its employees with the customers.

The Marketing Association plans to be very active in the winter quarter. Another trip is planned to January to the Colgate Company. In addition speakers Joyce Folley and Toni Callicott will be visiting to talk about their respective jobs in promoting and marketing all the Southern California shopping malls and the "US" Festival. The Marketing Association is an organization developed to provide students with experience and knowledge in the current business world. Go and see what they're all about.

When Nick Rossi saw the bomb under Anne’s chair, he worked desperately to unlace her. He pulled and tugged but the knots were too tight. Nick glanced down at the bombs clock and gasp! Five, four, three, two, one...Nothing happened. The bomb was a dud!!

Dean John Colby was rushed to Fibber Memorial Hospital. He’d had a massive heart attack and Jennifer was terrified that he’d die. She was taken to intensive care. Jennifer, wearing only a revealing night gown paced back and forth in the waiting room. Suddenly, John’s wife, Julia, appeared. The two women stood facing each other in silence. Then when Julia saw Dr. Emile Rapshot, John’s physician, she stopped, ran her hand through her hair and said, “What happened to Millissa because of Matt? Matt and Millissa walked through the front door and announced that they had eloped!! Millissa was now Mrs. Matt Agretti and there was nothing Baxter could do.

Back at the hospital Julia turned on Jennifer and blamed the “sleazy little tramp” for John’s attack. Jennifer only laughed and said that if Julia had taken care of her job in the first place, John would never have looked for someone else to fill the position. She also told Julia that she was a disgusting drunk and a sorry excuse for a woman. Julia slapped Jennifer and ran out of the hospital. Hours later, a drunken Julia Colby danced along the freeway overpass.

What will become of Julia?
Will John survive?
What will Baxter do now that Matt and Millissa are married?

To this day I still believe it really happened even though my mom and big brother think I was just being wierd. It happened on the Christmas just before we left Ohio and moved to good ’ol sunny California, land of the fruits. It was late and so I was in bed, but hardly asleep. I never could sleep on Christmas Eve. I was too eager to get all the stuff “Santi” Claus had dropped off under the tree. Not my brother though. He was “cally hogs” as usual.

Now our room was pretty neat, except for one thing. Right at the foot of my bed was...the attic door! Gosh I hated that thing. When you’re a kid attics and closets are like chambers of horrors. Anyway, like I was sayin’, I was in bed when the attic door started to open, real slow. I nearly wet my pajamas. It was dark but I could still see pretty good. Out of the attic, standing right at the foot of my bed was this giant green man with a flat head and stitches all over his face. Now I’m not sure, but he looked a lot like Frankenstein...No Lie!

He had this big bag throw’d over his shoulder and a red and white scarf wrapped around his neck. He looked around carefully then tip-toed right into the middle of my room and down the stairs. I was scared but I had to get a better look at this guy, so I followed him. I sat on the stairs and watched him as he took all kinds of toys and things out of the bag and put them under our Christmas tree. It was like something out of Mad Magazine...No Lie!

Then all of a sudden he stopped what he was doin’ to turn and look up right at me! He was real ugly! His eyes were yellow with red cracks all around the pupil and his nose was runny from being out in the snow. Anyhow, he looked at me then he winked and went back to what he was doin’. When he was done, he ate a hand full of walnuts my mom set out on the coffee table and left, out the front door. The next morning no one would believe a word I said, but it’s all true...No Lie!

Merry, Merry Christmas.

Feast of Hanukkah

by Carol Leish

Hanukkah celebrates the victory of a battle for religious justice. The holiday symbolizes a rescue of the Jewish faith from destruction.

In 168 B.C., a group of Jews, the Maccabees, fought against the Syrians over a struggle of which way great pride over the (triumph of) the Maccabees.

Great emphasis is signified by the spiritual aspects of the war. The prophecy of Zechariah is read "For the miracles of liberation which Thou Last wrought...Thou didst deliver the strong into the hands of the devoted to Thy law.

Candles are lit for eight successive evenings in a menorah. One candle is lit the first night, two the next, etc. An additional candle, the Shamash, is lit to Kindle the others. The flame of the candles signifies that man gives his love to his fellow man without losing anything of himself, just as the flame continues to be bright. Hanukkah is a festive occasion with songs, hymns and an exchange of presents.

Men's and Co-Ed Football

The "Mojave Z Squad", having tasted victory earlier in the day (co-ed football) wasted no time in establishing an early lead over "For Heros Only". Following a Pete Badnarek Touchdown and 2-point conversion, they added a safety and appeared to be on their way to the Super Bowl. The real "Heros" suited up for the second half, and took the lead on a touchdown by Joe Peccoralo. Bob Kutch scored the clincher late in the game and the "Heros" held on to win 18-16.

"Jerry's Kids" held a narrow 14-7 lead over the "Hitmen" at the half and it appeared that this game was also going down to the wire. "Jerry's Kids" offense finally got untracked in the second half as they rolled up 21 more points to batter the hopeles "Hitmen", 35-13. Craig Smith (18 pts.) and Bill Pellow (10 pts.) did most of the scoring for "Jerry's Kids" while the "Hitmen" were led by John Saunders and Greg Kontra (13 pts.). "Jerry's Kids", the defending champions, are favored by five and one-half points over "For Heros Only" in the December 3 Super Bowl. The teams have identical records of 6-0.

by Sue Kretts

Just how important is the extra point in flag football? For "Replay", it means a trip to the Toilet Bowl game December 3, but for "Dali Lama and His People", it means the end. Trailing 13-6 with time running out, "Dali Lama" scored a touchdown and attempted a two-point conversion, which would have given them the lead and a possible upset victory. The attempt failed, and "Replay" on the strength of touchdowns by George Duncan and Russ Boykins, and John Bullington's extra point, advanced to the finals.

In the other semi-final game, the "Mojave Z Squad" edged the "Badger Renegades" in their third meeting of the year. The teams, who had split their two previous games during the regular season battled through a scoreless first half. The turning point came on a 68 yard touchdown by Marc Dietrich. The "Renegade" points were scored by Patti Ervin (6) and Vicky Perry (6). "Mojave Z Squad" will have their hands full in the Toilet Bowl, as the undefeated "Replay" team is favored by nine points.

Viva Olympia

Teatro de los Puppetos, a bilingual puppet company, will recreate the excitement of the Olympic Games in a program, "Viva Olympia!" Friday, Dec. 3, at Cal State, San Bernardino.

Part of the Family Performance Series for Children, the 45-minute program will begin at 7:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

During its shows, the company communicates to both Spanish- and English-speaking members of the audience. An interpreter for the deaf will translate its bilingual dialog in sign language, according to Jo Ann Hartzog, the series coordinator.

Teatro's multitude of puppets, ranging from 10 inches to 10 feet tall, reflect the color and charm of Mexican folk art. For the Cal State performance, the group will combine puppets, masks, ethnic music, mime and audience participation to recreate the history and ideals of the Olympic Games.

Over the past seven years, the group has become a leading puppet company in Southern California. The artists, Bob Schontzler and Bill and Marilyn Sousa, have performed at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, Hollywood Bowl, Olvera Street, Disneyland and in schools, parks, shopping malls and festivals. They also brought their puppets to the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

The MECHA Club of Cal State, San Bernardino will assist during the program by providing ushers and free refreshments. Tickets, available at the door, are $1.00 for children age 12 and under, $2.00 for adults.

The Family Performance Series was launched Oct. 29 with a sell-out performance by the Firebird Theatre program by providing ushers and free refreshments. Tickets, available at the door, are $1.00 for children age 12 and under, $2.00 for adults.

The Family Performance Series will continue, with performances scheduled every Friday at 7:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

Collectors Guild Meets Collectors in the community and faculty at Cal State, San Bernardino have formed a Cal State Collectors Guild, which will meet Tuesday, Nov. 23, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Coleman in San Bernardino.

Dr. Coleman will show items from the Coleman-Palmer American history, including George Washington's expense account, the 1824 Stone Imprint on the Declaration of Independence and some broadband paintings of the Declaration.

Collectors interested in joining the guild or attending the meeting should contact Dr. Irving Buchen, Dean of Humanities at CSCSB for more information at 887-7441.

Pacific Review Production

Production is scheduled to begin next spring on The Pacific Review, Cal State's new literary magazine.

The Review, which replaces The Pacific Flyer as Cal State's official literary magazine, will be a showcase for student and faculty writings, with the inclusion of up to 25% of the magazine being off-campus submissions. But the student and faculty are not competing with these nationally known writers. They will have a chance to place their writings in a larger and more important context than that which was formerly available," according to Sharod Santos, who along with Larry Kramer and Lynne McMahon make up the new Cal State Creative Writing Committee.

With $750 already approved by Cal State's Instructional Related Programs Board (IRP), the magazine is already starting production. Because it will be a student-run enterprise, positions will be open for student editors, managing editor, business manager and layout editor. Applications for these positions will be available in the English Department office until Dec. 3, when final staff selections will be made.

"We will be out of the spring," Kramer said, "because there are already enough good things out there to include in the publication."

"There are no restrictions on the format or type of writing," said Santos, "but the first edition will most likely contain poetry, fiction, and a few book reviews."

"This is a brand new enterprise," Santos said, "and right now Larry Kramer and myself are talking to some of the poets that we know. We are trying to get some poets with national recognition. The students would not be competing with these poets and writers. Seventy-five percent of the publication would still be for the CSCSB community. What we hope to do is place the student's work in a larger and more important context than was normally available. This way, the students will be more anxious to submit their work rather than have it appear in something that has only regional appeal," Santos added.

The Creative Writing Committee has already secured permission to publish a new translation of a poem by Nobel Laureate Pablo Neruda, whom both Santos and Kramer called "one of the great poets of the 20th Century."

Submission procedures for the new magazine will be announced at a later date.

Wind and Jazz

The Wind and Jazz ensembles at Cal State, San Bernando will present an energetic program beginning with Aaron Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man" and concluding with Stan Kenton's "I'm Glad There Is You" in a concert tonight, Wednesday, Dec. 1.

The program, the final Fall Quarter performance for the groups, begins at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

Tickets, available at the door, are $3.00 general, $1.50 students.

The 47-member Wind Ensemble and smaller groups drawn from it will play Richard Strauss' "Serenade," Malcolm Arnold's "Four Scottish Dances," and the march from Paul Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis." Under the baton of Keating Johnson, director of bands at CSCSB, the groups will perform a contemporary work, "Epinicion" by John Paulson.

The Jazz Ensemble will present some of the most exciting big band repertoire in print, according to Johnson. Roger Rickson, director of bands at Riverside City College and a lecturer in music at Cal State, will direct this ensemble during its performances of "The Kid from Red Bank," "Who's Sorry Now," "T.S.T.S." and "Wild oats."

The Wind Ensemble appeared at the Los Angeles convention of the California Music Educators Association. It will be performing in Palm Springs in January, and at a major high school tournament in April. The Jazz Ensemble also has given many performances in Southern California and received a superior mark at the Pacific Coast Collegiate Jazz Festival at UC, Berkeley.
