CSUSB Faces Estimated $3.25 Million Deficit, Campus Concerned

• Standing Room Only to Hear FY '97-'98 Budget.

By Kristen DeCicco
Chronicle Staff Writer

About 200 faculty, staff and students gathered in the Sycamore room Friday, February 7, for the presentation of the estimated $3.25 million deficit for fiscal year 97-98. Out of concern for the current enrollment, people questioned the assumptions leading to the deficit.

The Strategic Planning Council budget meeting consisted of two main parts: the review of the FY '96-97 budget results and the presentation of the planning assumptions for the FY '97-'98 General Fund Budget.

Two main areas of concern resulted from the 96-97 report. One was the negative savings amount of $5,000 in utility costs. Vice President, Administration & Finance, David De Mauro, expressed the council's surprise at this figure, arguing that, overall, regional utility costs are decreasing.

The tension in the room was evident. Audience members shifted in their seats and muttered under their breaths as Vice President Lou Fernandez reviewed each assumption that contributed to the enormously large deficit.

Applause followed when a faculty member commented on the dangerously low faculty morale.

Before the final estimated budget deficit was announced, Teresa Morris, Faculty Senate Chair and social work professor, asked President Evans directly what the impact of the cutbacks would be on personnel. The president replied that there would have to be "changes" made involving personnel.

Questions and comments about the cutbacks were addressed to the council. One faculty member expressed her concern for the elimination of part time teachers and classes. She said, "Where will we put all the students?"

Philosophy Professor Tom Moody suggested that cutbacks be taken where they most likely can be absorbed, where they are least essential to the mission of teaching.

The three main assumptions that ignited the audience were the CSEA (Retroactive Pay Adjustment) amount of $975,000, $1 million technology expense, and a $1 million contingency fund.

While the chancellor's office remains responsible for the decisions that result in a settlement of approximately $975,000 with a continuing annual cost of $140,000, CSUSB prepares for possession of the liability.

The government will give CSUSB $36 per headcount (estimation of a $420,000 income) in return for the creation of a technology plan, directed by Bill Aguilar, Vice President, Information Resources and Technology. The assumption behind budgeting $1 million expense adjustment seemed unclear when the budget draft noted that the estimated budget did not include this extra government per-head funding. It would seem the technology budget item is actually $580,000. Please see Deficit—pg. 2

Faculty Member Speaks Out

By Michael Newvine
Chronicle Staff Writer

"Priority is teaching students, not bouncing leather balls around," said philosophy professor Tom Moody at the budget meeting held Friday, February 7. Moody stood up and expressed his personal thoughts and opinions concerning the estimated $3.25 million budget deficit.

In response to the issue of department cutbacks, Moody commented, "As faculty members, our business is teaching students. We must have spent several thousand dollars last year upgrading to a Division II intercollegiate athletic school. I suggest we look there for cuts, considering the sports program is not a necessary part of the university, and you're going to tell me that we should cut faculty members so we can teach students to play basketball?"

Moody's comment was greeted with applause by members of the audience. His response represents a growing frustration among faculty members over the recent allocation of large sums of money for the purpose of building the CSUSB sports program.

The decision to allocate the money was defended by a faculty member who said that CSUSB is not in the position to tell its donors where to donate their money.
CSUSB to Deal with Parking Dilemma

By LaVondra Harris
Chronicle Staff Writer

The Transportation Committee held a meeting on Wednesday, February 3, to discuss solutions to the myriad of parking problem issues on this campus. The meeting dealt mainly with the issue of designated parking for faculty and staff. The committee voted to create designated faculty and staff parking spaces.

Students aren’t the only one’s with parking problems. These problems led Parking Services to hire consultants, CUB Management Group. The group examined the parking situation to determine whether or not to recommend designated parking for faculty and staff. They determined that there was a need for 380 designated spaces.

The reason for this designated parking is so that faculty and staff can find parking during peak parking hours. These spaces will be monitored for use. If they aren’t being used then they will revert back to regular parking. Currently, 80 percent of CSUSB have designated parking for faculty and staff.

ASI and the school architect oppose the parking change; the former because they see it will take parking away from students and the latter because he felt that a more thorough study should have been conducted. The improvements being made by Parking Services were also discussed at the meeting. All the improvements were originally due to begin in the summer, but there were problems with contract bidding.

Currently, Parking Services is working on creating 1,200 more parking spaces near Jack Brown Hall. This new lot should be completed on or near April 24.

There are also plans to extend the parking lot next to the Coyote Den so that it can serve as overflow parking for Jack Brown Hall and Coussoulis Arena. They will also complete the intersection leading to Jack Brown Hall by adding more lanes and getting rid of the small curve that slows down traffic.

Parking Services plans also to pave lot F and create parking by the Visual Arts Building. In the future look for more parking dispensers, an information booth by Jack Brown Hall and parking meters.

The parking improvements are funded by Parking Services. “Students should not expect an increase in parking fees,” said Quentin Moses, parking manager. For questions or comments about parking contact Parking Services at 880-5912.

Staff to Receive Back Pay for Merit Increases in 1992-93

The California State University Chancellor’s Office has decided not to appeal the Second Appellate Court’s ruling that the CSU improperly withheld five percent merit salary increases during the 12-month period from June 1992 to June 1993, when the California State Employees Association (CSEA) was negotiating a new union contract.

The news about the CSU’s decision not to fight repaying staff members throughout the system figure out that balancing a $3.25 million budget requires campus cutbacks that could possibly result with a slash of three or more percent to the budgets of every department in the Academic Affairs Division.

Jim Eller, who teaches part time in Communication/National Security Studies, asked, “For campus planning purposes, could there be a communication to the chancellor’s office, for example, at this time, actually putting this on the line and saying, ‘what are you planning?’ “

Fernandez replied, “The chancellor’s office meets every other month, and we are constantly asking that. We try to get that information the best that we can.” Fernandez stressed that administration makes continuous efforts to seek answers to those questions. Surprisingly, the meeting’s conclusion left the crowd cautiously optimistic about the challenges ahead of reviewing and revising the estimated deficit, and of negotiating changes with the administration.

“People need to have a general awareness of the budget process and to continually monitor it and stay involved,” stated Self-Instructional Lab Manager Chani Beeman.

Moreover, President Evans repeatedly reminded the council and audience that these items are just assumptions and the next step is to “package items into balancing acts,” and review the calculations that incorporate this $3.25 million deficit.
"Unity Day:" Black History Month Celebration

By Jason Armstrong and Christina Olney
Chronicle Staff

The Black History Month Celebration, held on Wednesday, February 5, featured numerous performances by African-American student groups on and off campus, who captivated and energized approximately 350 spectators.

Entertainment at the event included the Black National Anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing," sung by Eboni Anderson; poetry readings by an individual student and The Collective Eye Posse; scenes of Richard III, performed by The African Company; a scene from Ladies of the Camellia, performed by theatre arts students; step routines by Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc., Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., and Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Inc.; and a performance by R & B singer, Drey Loren.

"I loved the Collective Eye Posse," said one student at the event. "I feel they had a good selection of poems, and the performances were very creative."

In addition to the performances, the event also included refreshments, sold by the Panhellenic Council, Alpha Kappa Alpha, the Women's Resource and Adult ReEntry Center, and the Afrikan Student Alliance. Phi Beta Sigma, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Air Force ROTC and various other student organizations set up recruitment booths. The theater arts department sold tickets to upcoming plays.

Students remained at the scene long after the performances concluded, mingling and simply having a good time. "This was great," said another onlooker. "I hope our campus will have other events like this one."
CSUSB: In Need of Repairs

Leaky roofs, broken ceiling panels, wet mildewed carpeting, and poor ventilation are just a few things Professor Elizabeth Klono's abnormal psychology class has to deal with. Unsafe conditions such as flooded hallways, exposed overhead pipes, and smelly carpeting continuously plague the students.

The class finds they spend more time complaining about the condition of their temporary classroom than learning. According to student Teena Backus, "This class is horrible. The room was accidentally locked by the previous class. It took the campus police 15 minutes to respond."

The condition of TC-16 has gotten progressively worse due to recent wind and rain storms. The state of the room was so bad the entire class signed a petition to have the room changed. Complaints were made to the Psychology Department Chair, who forwarded them to the Dean of the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. "About a week after we signed the petition, they replaced the ceiling panels and patched the hole in the wall," said student Amanda Whitson.

"The phone doesn’t work. If there was an emergency, we couldn’t call for help," said Backus. Apparently only one phone in the entire building works. According to Klono, "...someone should make it a practice of regularly checking to ensure that phones on campus work."

A room change was approved for the rain-drenched class, but the only room available is located in the Physical Science Building. "I was told that the only other available classroom for a class that size was PS10...having a class of 60 or so in a room that holds 200 is ridiculous, so I did not accept the change," said Klono.

According to the petition, "the students...are entitled to adequate and healthy conditions in return for the payment of tuition and fees to the University." Professor Klono encourages students to call and complain in an effort to improve existing conditions.

Campus Groups Present Diverse Film Series

By Mary Ellen Abilez

Movies about Latin America and women’s issues are being sponsored this quarter by the Spanish Club, Communications Department, and the Women’s Resource Center.

Marta Neely, Communications, has already presented two movies, "The Burning Season," and "Romero." "I wanted to raise a cultural and historical awareness of social issues in Latin America in an interesting and fun way," Neely said. "These movies aren’t just for entertainment, they’re based on a true story. We [in the U.S.] are building bridges to Latin America and are very involved."

So far, Neely’s films have been well-attended, helped in part by extra-credit given by professors to students for attending, and a generous offering of sodas, cookies, chips and salsa. Juan Parra, a student, said he came "just to watch the movie," which pleased Neely. "The great thing about Cal State is the diversity on campus, but we’re also a commuter campus," said Neely. "Later we say, gee, I wish I could have gotten to know you..."

Be Persistent, Take a Risk

By Cheri Dixon
Chronicle Staff Writer

If you want to get around "the discrimination and garbage that goes along with business," Ann Bacon, president of Redlands Federal Savings Bank, told aspiring businesswomen at the Women's Resource Center last week, you need to be prepared to: never, ever say, "that's not my job," find a small, growing company; be willing to take a risk; have a sense of humor—take your job seriously, but not yourself and treat your coworkers and customers the way you would like to be treated, with respect and dignity.

Bacon emigrated from England to southern California at the age of 17 armed only with a vocational diploma. She ascended to branch manager at Downey Savings by the age of 32 and bailed out five destitute savings and loan operations during the late 1980s before becoming CEO at Redlands Federal.

Although Bacon's area of expertise was financial, she shared many general strategies to help women succeed no matter what their chosen career path.

Bacon, who was born and educated in England, was directed by the country's school system to pursue certain courses in order to obtain her vocational diploma. She employed the age of 17, but found very restricted opportunities in England for promotion or advancement.

Bacon observed, "You've got to do the things that you want to do. You can't expect people to do anything for you. They have to feel right for you." She advised, "Take the opportunity to step into a new role as a career woman," and not wait to be asked for it.

At one point, she was offered a position of CEO at Downey, but after much agonizing, declined. "You've got to do the things that you want to do," she said.

Bacon shared with the small, intimate group of women how supportive her second husband has been, even willing to move to allow her to follow new career opportunities.

"I could not have done what I have done without his help," she confirmed.

Bacon's achievement and evident satisfaction in her current position as president of Redlands Federal Savings Bank, was an inspiration for female students, whether dealing with the discouragement of invisible glass ceilings or taking control of their careers in order to fulfill their dreams.

At 7 a.m. on Saturday, February 1, school buses lined up and unloaded hundreds of children at CSUSB for the Family Reading Rally. It was unusual to see so many youngsters at college. The event was successful; the entire Events Center was filled to capacity with children and the Reading Rally staff.

Dozens of round tables were set up for the children to listen and learn from the story book reading, and from folk tales and children's stories accompanied by guitar playing. Among these performances was "Gigantic Tales from Great Britain," funny children's stories presented by Harlynne Geisler.

Free souvenirs were given to children in order to encourage and motivate them to read. Outside, hundreds of balloons were given to the children by rally members and some costumed characters including Ronald McDonald.

A book sale was held nearby the events center where kids could purchase their favorite story books and novels. In the fire place lounge, Daniel Forcru presented "The Crazy Music Machine Puppet Show." These hand puppets were very funny, and it was evident that the children really enjoyed the show.

In the Recital Hall at the Creative Arts Building, yet another activity was in effect by a Dance Troupe displaying what "Dance Is." This was presented by Joanne Dieteroff and Rita Chenoweth.

The Family Reading Rally was a festival filled activity that was fun and at the same time encouraged kids to read and learn. It was plain to see the children enjoyed the event.

I suggest that we hold a college level Reading Rally; it would be fun and educational for students. Education should be fun because it is easier to learn things when something is fun to learn about.

How Would CSUSB Students Spend an Ideal Valentine’s Day?

By LaKelsha Gilford
Chronicle Staff Writer

Roses, chocolates, candlelight dinners, moonlight, romance, and a heart that cares are just the right ingredients for a wonderful Valentine’s Day. Cupid’s arrow is ready to aim and fire in a matter of days. In honor of this holiday that promotes love, the Roving Reporter asked students, “What is your Ideal Valentine’s Day?”

Armando Duenas
Junior, Liberal Studies

“An ideal Valentine’s Day would be getting dressed up, going to a play or musical. Afterward having a candlelight dinner at a nice restaurant, chatting while dazing into each others eyes, breathing only the aroma of love.”

Denise Bishop
Senior, Comm Studies

“My ideal Valentine’s Day is spent with someone special, someone really care about, but February 14 shouldn’t be the only day you show people that are special to you that you care.”

Sean Davis, Jr.
Junior, Comm Studies

“Valentine’s Day to me is a day to spend with all the women in your life that you love. They would include my grandmother, mother, sisters, and girlfriend.”

Shayla Griffin
Freshman, Psychology

“The morning of Valentine’s Day, I open my door and to my surprise, I find a dozen white roses with no card or note attached.”

Gender Roles: Are They Really Defined?

By Stephanie Bernal
Special to the Chronicle

What does modern American society have in common with 18th century France? Think of Calvin Klein’s “CK One” ads. Or Robin Williams’ character in “Mrs. Doubtfire.” Or Dennis Rodman. “When women take an active role in society, gender roles become less defined,” says Aurora Wolfgang, an assistant professor of French at CSUSB. Wolfgang spent four years researching women’s roles in communications in 18th century France for her doctoral in French literature.

“During the monarchy, the old regime, women had a place at court as patrons of the art, as producers of culture...Women had a prominent place in the old regime,” she said.

Wolfgang noticed androgyny in the clothing styles of that period. “I try to look more at the clothing men wore—-a lot of lace, a lot of embroidery. There isn’t this strict division between gender roles. In this period they were not sure how to define what’s male.” said Wolfgang.

According to Wolfgang our own culture is suffering a gender identity crisis. “In many different ways this country is trying to come to terms with its differences,” she said.

“It is in our consciousness today with the feminism of the last 30 to 40 years. Women are doing jobs that 30 or 40 years ago would be taboo. In society in general there’s a kind of anxiety. What does it mean to be male? This thinking is reflected in movies like ‘Tootsie.’ Dress and attitude, does it make the woman? Where is the division between men and women?” she asked.

So what can 18th century France teach us about ourselves? It can tell us about how we create identity. We must keep in mind the historical nature of these definitions. Today’s ideas about gender and sex are not eternal. We continue to question and test them. Even in the 18th century French women lost their independence as gender ideas became more concrete.

“The French Revolution was not a good revolution for women. The bourgeoisie overthrew the monarchy and wealthy business people. The Revolutionary idea was that there were different social spheres for men and women, and women belonged to the domestic sphere,” said Wolfgang.

Consequently, women received the blame for the monarchy’s problems. Marie Antoinette, queen of France and wife of Louis XVI, was the most prominent victim of this period. She was demonized and portrayed as castrating and feminizing her husband.

Certain segments of society today also blame problems on the women who supposedly take jobs away from men. Accordingly, Hillary Clinton is often a target for criticism and anger. “She’s not a traditional first lady. She’s a smart lawyer, definitely an equal to her husband,” said Wolfgang.

Wolfgang explained that in hard economic times there’s a backlash against women and minorities. She said that this backlash reflects the voter support of Prop 209, a law that abolishes affirmative action programs in schools and workplaces.

“History is cyclical; there will be periods in which women make advances and periods where the advances are taken back. There will be opposing forces who continually vie for power,” she said.

Gender Roles: Are They Really Defined?

Are African-American men satisfied with law enforcement in the Inland Empire? Contrary to what researchers hypothesized, results of an on-campus survey revealed that most men were satisfied with police in the Inland Empire.

On Wednesday, January 29, Dr. Ira Neighbors, an assistant professor at CSUSB addressed a group of students primarily focusing on the role of social work in the treatment of prison inmates. Some of the functions of social work include enhancing society through the promotion of an effective, humane system; the linking of people and resources, and the improvement and development of social policies.

Embracing these ideals, Dr. Neighbors then presented an Afrocentric perspective toward the application of social work to the African-American community. Neighbors explained that this perspective seeks to dispel distortions of African-American people while “socially transporting us toward a humanistic moral end.” While he indicated that some people may be uncomfortable with this perspective because it is not yet understood well, Neighbors stressed that a true goal is ultimately “social unity without cultural uniformity.”

Valentine's Day Contest

A Valentine's Day contest is being hosted by the Coyote Bookstore. In order to participate in the contest, one must guess the number of hearts in a jar in the bookstore. Prizes include a large stuffed teddy bear for first, a disk camera for second, and a CSUSB sweatshirt for third.

The drawing will be held on Valentine's Day at 12:00 p.m. If you still haven't gotten that something special for someone, the bookstore has a wide array of gifts to choose from. They offer free gift wrapping as well.

The contest is open to students, faculty, and staff only, and winners need not be present to win.

File 1040 EZ Forms Online

By Jennifer McLeod

On January 17, Parsons Technology, makers of award-winning Personal Tax Edge and State Tax Edge software, launched its online application for completing and filing a 1040 EZ form on the company's Internet web site: http://1040online.parsonstech.com/qualifier/1040EZ.html. The data entry portion of 1040 EZ Online takes users step-by-step through the document and automatically transfers answers to the 1040 EZ form. The form is then audited for missing or inconsistent information. And, at any time, users can access IRS and program help for fast answers to their questions.

All proceeds will be donated to the Alpha Phi Foundation, which contributes its efforts to cardiovascular care and women's health research.

Phenix Information Center

By LaKeisha Gilford

Judging from the plain store front, one would never know how quaint and welcoming San Bernardino's Phenix Information Center is. This bookstore specializes in literature about African American people's struggles, history, and triumphs. Only open since 1992, the bookstore has already made quite a name for itself in the community. It has been host to several prominent African American authors and political figures, including Walter Mosley, Bebe Moore-Campbell and Colin Powell. Last fall Kareem Abdul-Jabbar visited the bookstore and signed copies of his new book, "Black Profiles in Courage," and spoke to fans.

The Phenix Information Center is owned by Faron and Jo Ann Roberts, and not only has a large selection of literature, but also provides services to the community.

The next guest featured at the bookstore will be Karen Bates and Karen Hudson, who will be signing their latest book, Basic Black: Home Training for Modern Times.

The Phenix Information Center is located at 381 N. "E" Street. For more information, call (909) 383-2329.

Physical Education Chair Named Outstanding Professor

Terry Rizzo, professor and chair of the Kinesiology and Physical Education Department at CSUSB, is the university’s Outstanding Professor for 1997.

Selected by a committee of faculty based upon his teaching, research and service, Rizzo, a resident of Redlands, has been on the CSUSB faculty since 1988. Most of his tenure has been spent with the physical education department, except one year’s service in 1994-95 as acting director of the Services to Students with Disabilities program, which helps meet the learning needs of physically disadvantaged students. During that time he helped CSUSB get a $335,000 grant from the California Department of Rehabilitation to address the employment needs of students with disabilities.

As a professor and researcher, Rizzo also has focused on the adaptive needs of students. In 1995 he was recognized with two national awards for his exemplary research involving individuals with disabilities, and for inspiring students with physical education.

His professional activities include serving as digest editor for Adapted Physical Education Quarterly and as international editor of the Brazilian International Journal of Adapted Physical Activity. He also is a reviewer of research abstracts for the Research Consortium of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. He has published and presented dozens of articles and scholarly works in his field.

Rizzo holds a Ph.D. in adapted physical education from the University of Illinois.

'Paradise Lost:' Arkansas Murder Mystery

On May 6, 1993, the mutilated bodies of three eight-year-old West Memphis, Arkansas boys were discovered in a shallow creek along Interstate 40.

The small town demanded justice and the police delivered: three local teenagers who were accused of belonging to a Devil worshiping cult and of killing the little boys in a Satanic ritual.

Although the trial produced very little hard evidence, the town, the jury and the police felt they had their killers. But many unanswered questions still linger.

After the verdicts came in, the town was able to sleep again. After seeing this film, you may not be able to.

'Da Brat Throws Anutha Tantrum'

By Joseph Hardman

Will the So So Def camp, led by Jermaine Dupri, ever stop pumping out platinum hits? Da Brat's sophomore album, Anutha Tantrum, is definitely worth taking time out to listen to.

If you missed her debut album Funkdafied, then you definitely missed out on what Da Brat is all about. Anutha Tantrum has definitely solidified her spot on the Hip-Hop scene. Da Brat goes all out on this album, holding nothing back.

The track that undeniably stands out the most is "Ghetto Love." This track features T-Boz. The beat and hook are sampled from El Debarge's all time hit "All My Love." This track is a ghetto tale of a woman who's staying true to her man, who has been sent to jail. The only drawback to the album is that she uses a lot of profanity throughout her lyrics. Overall this is a great album, the production is good, the lyrics are above average and the beat contains funk that all us Hip-Hop fans like to hear.

So indulge in some babysitting, and go give a listen to Da Brat's "Anutha Tantrum." And for all you true Da Brat fans, yes she still echo's her favorite word's "It's The B-R-A-T."
The Violet Burning: A Melodramatic Melody

By Abe Sanchez
Chronicle Staff Writer

Talk about mood swings in an album. A toxic drama for the moody, drinking their lives away. A tough album from a lyrical take, yet the music makes up for any lows in the lyrics. Somehow I picture myself in a dark room lit with only candles and red drapes wondering about...nothing.

A real feel of Gothic encompasses the album; I guess Gothic is not dead. The Violet Burning takes the authority to produce what they want and what they feel. Michael Pritzl, leader of the band (although he claims there is no true leader), recalls influences from Echo and the Bunnymen and The Cure.

"The goal is not really to rock. The goal is more for what we call 'vibe' for feeling," Pritzl elaborated. Listening to the song "Fever," you can tell that the song has mood and feeling backed by hard power chords.

The song "Sun and the sky" sounds like the Beatles in the latter half of the sixties. The Violet Burning will never be the Beatles; no band should strive to be them. A band should strive to be themselves and no one else. This band may have taken a risk by producing a Gothic sound, but on the other hand we should applaud their effort for producing what they feel inside and turning it into powerful music.

Pritzl seems to walk between the darkness and the light with his vocal range. Strong aggressive vocals, yet allows the listener to glide through the song. Pritzl lets the emotional villains spread hell over the entire 12 extreme songs. The usual guitar arsenal is not present in this album, yet it holds the fundamental elements of each song. What you can’t feel in the lyrics you will feel in the music. The guitar work grabs you and glides you through each song, but more importantly doesn’t let you catch a breath on this emotional roller coaster. The bass lines on "Fever" have the funk feel and seem to take control of the song. This could be the best song on the album.

Another song to listen to is "Crush," a song with a strong drum arrangement. Pritzl felt the song would not show up on the album. It feels good, it sounds good, bell, why not, I’m glad they left it on the album.

On the Animal scale of one to five, the album gets a solid three. The songs are too long, averaging over six minutes each. Although the drum work on "Crush" is strong, it seems to become subdued for the remainder of the album. Now you know how I feel about drum work. What impressed me was the guitar work and the vocals.

The best part of the album is Pritzl’s vocal style; he has a range that becomes the emotional leader of each song. This arrangement assists the listener throughout the progression of the song; not very many bands do this—it’s nice to know that The Violet Burning does.
Have you marked your calendar? Get ready--here come those amazing Peking Acrobats! They have mystified and astonished audiences the world over since 1952 with their gravity defying acrobatic antics.

"How do they do that?", is what you'll ask yourself over and over as this delightful group of elite gymnasts juggle, balance, and tumble their way through San Bernardino and right into your hearts. They'll be appearing at CSUSB's Coussoulis Arena for one night only on Monday, February 24, at 7:30 p.m.

The Peking acrobats hail from the People's Republic of China, and are directed by Hai Ken Tsai, whose family has led the troupe for three generations of training and performing. Each acrobat is hand selected after undergoing rigorous training in ancient Chinese disciplines from as young as five years of age. These ancient Chinese disciplines date back to the Ch'in Dynasty (225-207 B.C.), a time when acrobatic antics were developed as an art form to reflect the joys and hardships of daily living.

Today this wonderful troupe wows audience after audience with unbelievable but graceful feats of balance, movement, contortion, and juggling, interspersed with Chinese music. You won't find a finer evening of cultural family entertainment anywhere.

Ticket prices are $12.50 for students and children 12 and under, and $25.00 for adults. Tickets are available at the CSUSB A.S.I. box office and through all ticket master locations. Group rates and student or CSUSB Alumni Discounts are available at the A.S.I. box office only.

There will be a wonderful welcoming dinner for the Peking Acrobats prior to their performance. For those who purchase a limited time offer ticket, you'll enjoy dining with your sponsored acrobat at a private Chinese buffet which includes the world's most spectacular acrobatic antics.

For more information, call the Coussoulis Arena at 880-7360.
The Ladies of the Camellias

By Camille Cervantes-Garcia

"We aren't people, we are the­ atre folk!" So goes the defense claimed by Andrew Felt's charac­ ter, Gustave Hippolyte Worms, (yes, Worms) in one of this season's theatre presentation, The Ladies of the Camellias.

If you've never had the oppor­ tunity to enjoy the many talents presented by the Theatre Arts De­ partment, take advantage of this wonderful production. Lending their veteran acting skills to this production are Kristi Ackley, Andrew Felt, Heather Grace Hoglund, Anne Johnston-Brown, Jamie McBriety, Alva Moring, Robert Louis Oakes, Steve Robles, Mark Rogers, Eric G. Rodriguez and TJ Wood.

This play, directed by Professor Amanda Sue Rudisill, is, as the playwright has indicated, "not an attempt at history or biography but...a light hearted, late-at-night chat about 'what if', about something that might have happened..."

Though the story is fictional, the main characters, Sara Bernhardt and Eleonora Duse, were very much real individuals of enormous popularity, achievement and im­ por tance during the late 19th cen­ tury and early part of this century.

To that end, tales of their profes­ sional and personal rivalry abound and certainly fueled pub­ lic interest in these figures. It is also interesting to note that in 1897 these two theater greats played The Lady of the Camellias in the same theater! Here then is where we, the audience find ourselves witness­ ing the union of these two women and the subsequent behind-the­ scenes trials and tribulations.

The Ladies of the Camellias, a combination of truth, fiction and comedy, is sure to be an enjoyable time spent for all. It opens Febru­ ary 28.

Presale tickets are available through the Theater Arts depart­ ment located in the Creative Arts building at a student rate of only $4.

Peer Health Education: A Smart Move

By Kori Carter
Special to the Chronicle

No, Peer Health Educators (PHE) aren't teaching abstinence and abstaining students. There is a vital need for health education on every college campus. Fortunately, here at CSUSB, enthusiastic students from all majors are choosing to get the facts so they too can become advocates for healthier living among college students.

The PHE training program teaches students valuable information that in turn promotes self-esteem and added confidence. Once the students have completed the initial training phase they will facilitate the workshops on campus. This is a great opportunity for the educator and the audience. The workshops are fun and informative. They incorporate a 1990's zest covering topics such as sex and alcohol, eating disorders, stress, dating violence, substance abuse and, of course Sexual Pictionary to challenge the groups' sexual vocabulary.

Peer Health Education is a proven way to enhance any academic program and to become familiar with the importance of health education. You'd be surprised at how much of what you think you know is just a myth.

Valentine's Day is National Condom Day

The American Social Health Association will sponsor National Condom Day on Valentine's Day, February 14, to remind couples to "love responsibly" by protecting themselves.

"Condom Day on Valentine's Day, "love responsibly" by protecting yourselves and to use condoms to protect one another from sexually transmitted diseases."

According to the institute of medicine, five of the top 10 most frequently reported infectious diseases in the U.S. are sexually transmitted. One fourth of new STD cases each year occur in teenagers. In many cases STDs including HIV/AIDS, herpes, human papillomavirus, chlamydia and gonorrhea have no symptoms. By using a condom you may avoid transmitting a disease you don't even know you have," Clark emphasized.

In 1994 the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported the results of two studies that monitored couples in which one partner was infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, and the other partner was HIV-negative. By using latex condoms consistently and correctly, 98 to 100 percent of the couples in the two studies avoided transmitting HIV to the uninfected partner.

Among types of condoms, the male latex condom is considered most effective in preventing STDs. The female condom, which is made of polyurethane, is also considered very effective for disease prevention. A male polyurethane condom is now available, although its effectiveness against STDs is still being tested. Natural membrane condoms are not recommended for disease prevention.

A nonprofit organization, ASHA offers two free brochures on condom use that you can order by calling the toll-free number 1-800-972-8500.

"Condoms, Contraceptives and STDs" discusses the relative benefits of various birth control methods in preventing pregnancy and STD infection. "Better Sex, Healthy Sex" encourages couples to use condoms to make sex healthier and more enjoyable.

Free, confidential information regarding STDs is available through the National STD Hotline, operated by ASHA at 1-800-227-8922.

A rape occurs every 12 seconds and affects one out of three women in America.

In an effort to combat this alarming trend, the Women's Resource & Adult Re-entry Center hosted a two-night training session with a team from the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department. The instructor J.J. Saathoff held two hands-on training sessions in Event Center A on Monday, February 3 and Wednesday, February 5, 1997 from 6:00-9:30 p.m.

Before you say "This won't happen to me," be aware that over 50 percent of males on college campuses confessed that they would engage in non-consensual sex with a women if given the chance. The survey also indicated that 25 percent of college females admitted to being assaulted by their dates.

Saathoff shared several other startling statistics as well. Rape is the second fastest growing crime in America, up 42% from 1977 to 1986. It is difficult to identify a likely rapist because there is no typical profile. In 60 to 80 percent of the cases the victim knows the assailant. One third of the assaults take place in or near the victim's home during the day. Due to their mobility, 16-24 year old women tend to be the largest group affected. Reported rape in the state of California is 40 percent higher than any other state.

With today's busy schedules, many women don't spend enough time taking care of themselves. Each woman needs to spend a few minutes each month examining her breasts. If you discover a lump, discharge from the nipple or pain an evaluation and exam should be performed by a physician. It is important for a woman to know what is normal for her and to pay attention to any changes.

While there is some controversy about the optimal age to have a screening mammogram performed, each woman should discuss her history and clinical symptoms with her personal physician. A special program in California called Breast Cancer Early Detection Program (BCEDP) has been established to make sure that every woman who needs a mammogram can receive one.

You may qualify if you're over 40 and have no insurance or health plan, have no Medi-Cal coverage, are unable to meet Medi-Cal share of cost obligations or if you're unable to meet the co-payment or deductible of your insurance plan and you meet the financial criteria. The financial guideline is a maximum gross monthly income of $1,245 for one person or $1,672 for two people. No income documentation is needed to qualify.

If you think you may qualify or if you know a woman who needs a mammogram call the BCEDP at 1-800-227-2345. The services offered by the BCEDP includes a clinical breast exam by a nurse or physician, a mammogram and additional diagnostic services, such as a biopsy, as needed.

Designated Faculty Parking: Big Bucks for Students

By John Futch
Special to the Chronicle

At the transportation committee meeting February 5, the important agenda concerned faculty and staff parking. This is something that has been a focal point for the past few years, but was now being put before the committee for a vote.

The designated parking for faculty and staff passed. Along with the designated parking faculty and staff can also park in any other available spaces if their designated parking isn't convenient enough.

Associated Students, Incorporated is signing a petition before the committee for a vote. There are 11,000 students going to this school and there are several student leaders on this campus who would have gladly given their opinions on faculty and staff designated parking.

I laughed when I read in the survey that "the establishing of resident spaces has set the precedent for adding employee designated parking spaces." I thought to myself that when I go home I can get a parking space— even at my apartment—which I call my own. The resident students' homes are the dorms. They deserve the parking space and this should not set up the precedent presented in the survey.

If faculty and staff want designated parking they should be willing to pay for it. Not the same fees as students, but an additional fee. If they are going to be able to park and park in any available space, then, as a last resort go to the designated parking then it will be possible for them to take two spaces (the one they actually park in and the designated space). I would like a deal like that myself.

Jury Duty: It's Our Civic Duty

By Patricia L. Mason
Special to the Chronicle

With the recent coverage of high profile trials, I cannot help but think that our distaste for the judicial system and its flaws is only to the fault of the media who portray these dramas but is a result of our resistance to perform our civic duty in jury service.

I cannot recall the number of times when I have failed to persuade friends or acquaintances of their civic responsibility to serve in the judicial system. These individuals have a multitude of excuses by which they attempt, and many times succeed, at being released from a jury summons. Many times they are excused with the caveat that they must serve at a later date. When the next summons appears, they again attempt to get out of service and are successful more often than not. However, recent systems implemented by the judicial system insured that service is eventually rendered.

Excuses to avoid service are as varied as the individuals trying to avoid same. Individuals who attempt to relieve themselves of this duty range from the ranks of the educated, employed, professional to those who are uneducated blue-collar workers or the unemployed. Many times the only citizens willing and able to serve are those who look forward to the $3 per day stipend. These are indigent or poverty-level individuals who have little or no income. These uneducated jurors face the dual challenge of comprehending complex legal issues while grappling with accountability of defendants who may be their peers, or even worse, their intellectual superiors.

As an assistant administrator for a large medical corporation, I found that physicians and nursing staff were the most common offenders searching for a written jury excuse. They were always "on-call" or covering for another practitioner in addition to their own practices. These and other educated professionals are precisely the type of jurors needed if we are to make changes in the system. These are the people who would have the mental and economic capacity to make the changes necessary to improve our current system. If I am ever in a position to need a jury, I fear that people who will be able to understand the complex issues raised in a trial would weasel out of service, leaving me with a jury of "not my peers."

If citizens are unwilling to make the effort and sacrifices necessary to understand and improve our judicial system, we can only expect that the current inequalities and injustices will continue.

Peer Pressure?

Dear Editor,

I am writing to inform you about a few inaccuracies that were printed in the January 15 issue of the Coyote Chronicle. In that issue, on page 11, there was an article entitled "Cosmic Bowling is Out of This World." The article mentions that Pi Kappa Alpha, the fraternity in which I belong, and Alpha Delta Sorority were enjoying themselves under the black lights. This is true, we enjoyed ourselves thoroughly, however, I am sad to say that was not my story. The article reads, "Shad Stilkey, PKA President, wanted to be sure students rushed "the best fraternity on campus." "We believe in peer pressure," he stated emphatically. Actually, I could have sworn he BEER pressure, but he denied it with a glow-in-the-dark smile." First of all, our letters may have simply been printed incorrectly. The symbols for Pi Kappa Alpha aren't PKA, P equals Rho in the Greek alphabet. Secondly, I never said that our fraternity believed in peer pressure. It is the exact opposite of what we believe. Since we are the newest fraternity on campus, it would be detrimental for us pressure men in to joining. Pressuring men to join would simply infringe upon what we stand for. We are the process of establishing our colony on campus, therefore we look for gentlemen who have strong leadership skills.

Men join Pi Kappa Alpha because they want to be part of an established fraternity, there is no pressure involved.

Lastly, I thought that the BEER pressure comment was funny, but was not stated by myself or any other member of Pi Kappa Alpha. I believe that it was put there to make a smooth and catchy transition to the next paragraph. It works, but incorrectly at our expense. Please disregard statement and apply appropriate charges to the article.

Thank You,

Shad Stilkey
President, Pi Kappa Alpha

Coyote Softball Strong With Returning Players

By Maria Angelo
Chronicle Staff Writer

It's softball season once again, and it's a brand new year! The majority of this year's team consists of college freshman. Head Coach Roxanne Berch is quite happy with the returning players: Wendy Heliod, Kristin Magness, Shana Britt, Carly Norris, and Maria Angelo.

On Saturday, February 1 there was an alumni scrimmage game held at CSUSB's home field. Alumnae Mirabelle Cortez, Kelli Murioz and Shelly Rice came to show support. "It's was fun," said Holly Bradford, freshman pitcher. "Everyone was having a great time. It was obvious by watching the team that their fielding and hitting seemed to go hand in hand. They act and play together as if they're one big family."

The highlight of the game was when freshman Liz Hernandez hit a home run over the outfield fence. "For not having played together before, we are doing a great job. After playing a couple of games with each other, we will be more comfortable in what we do," said Allison Lowe, freshman infielder. On February 4 there was a scrimmage against Chaffey College. Holly Bradford was the starting pitcher. Chaffey scored the first run in the bottom of the second inning due to errors. CSUSB came back in the top of the third with a solo homerun by Shana Britt, right fielder. This is when the Coyotes stepped up and took control of the game. The team wasn't as nervous anymore. They were more calm and comfortable. They just needed to get rid of their nerves.

Throughout the game our defense was rocking and the bats were alive. Now you've heard about our little pre-season fun. If you want to get involved in the action, then come on down to watch the girls softball team. You can get a schedule in the office or look in the Chronicle for more updates. Next home game is March 8. It's the beginning of our actual league competition.
