CSUSB
CSCSB Offers Services To Disabled Students
by Carol Leish

In the middle of Tumble Weed Tech., somewhere in the vast expanse of the library, exists an office that offers services to special people. This office is the Services to Students with Disabilities. It serves students with diseases and disabilities which leave them disabled.

Some services that are provided are readers, notetakers, test writers, typists, and tutors when the student requires or requests them. These services are paid for by federal and state funds.

Dr. Theron Pace is in charge of the office. Other personnel are Jan Gregory, secretary; Barbara Soverign, counselor; Joanne Hartzog, educational programs director; Rebecca Warren, tutor; and the special people who need their services.

Some people who use the services provided participate in many activities. One such person is Anita Hallberg, who has Cerebral Palsy and is in a wheelchair. Most people have probably seen her and her large entourage of friends around campus. She said, "I am very happy here. I enjoy reading spiritual and nonfiction books."

Barbara Soverign thinks it's a challenge working with and solving problems for students with disabilities. She believes that people do realize the needs of disabled students more than before, since last year was the International Year of the Disabled person. Joanne Hartzog loves her work and would not like to be anywhere else. She thinks people do realize and have an awareness of what students' disabilities and capabilities are.

NEW THEATER ARTS PRODUCTION

The final preparations for "The Hostage", directed by Dr. Amanda Sue Ruissil, are underway as the production is scheduled to open this Thursday. To give a brief rundown on the plot: The story takes place in the early 1960's, in an Irish brockel. That's English for whorehouse. Generally, the conflict involves the 800 years of war between the Irish Republican Army and the Royal British Army. However, more deeply, the author, Branden Behan, highlights the way in which the common people, who are supposedly being protected by all of this fighting, become directly involved and eventually wind up the true victims of war.

Despite the tragic base of the story, the author entails it with a comedic front. These are several musical and dance numbers throughout the entire show which could actually qualify it as a musical. However, it is not advertised as such.

Rio Rita, played by Jim Seilisopour, is the irresistible homosexual who can never seem to pay his rent. Originally, Mark Peters was casted for the role of Rio Rita but since his involvement in an auto accident he was replaced by Seilisopour. King Kong, Rio Rita's handsome friend, is Rio Rita's, and potential source of rent money for the weekend. Another noteworthy character is Mrs. Gilchrist. Jody Julian will be the actress behind the self-righteous, missionary, who is also surprisingly enough one of the happiest whores in the house.

Although the actors are expected to do a fine job with the show there are also many others who have played a great part in making the show a success. Mante Slouti is the choreographer for the show's dance numbers. She has spent a great deal of time with the students teaching and rehearsing each routine. The show also employed a

BOD TABLES IRP SPORTS ENDORSEMENT

by Steven Race

After two hours of discussion last Thursday, the Associated Students Board of Directors were still split on whether or not they should endorse intercollegiate sports. The endorsement motion was tabled pending on further information forums on November 8 (12:00 SUMP: 5:45, Commons; 8:00 S.U. Lounge) and November 9 (12:00 SUMP: 6:30, Mojave; 8:00 S.U. Lounge).

President Evans attended the meeting and informed the B.O.D. that "The chancellor's office has worked out over the year's how intercollegiate sports would be funded, they feel that it's important to the total development of schools."

One of the people against an intercollegiate sports program here is Robert Cassinelli, the chair of the publications board. "If sports are part of the total budget they must have an impact. When cuts are made, they're gone across the board. People go to Cal State because of the cost and convenience. The argument that sports are going to bring in more people is weak. People don't go to UCR because of their championship baseball team" said Cassinelli.

Professor Reggie Price, the chair of the physical education department, and a member of the Task Force of intercollegiate sports said, "I think that athletics are one more thing students can get involved in to balance out academics. It's giving someone who has the ability a way to use it."

Voting on the referendum issue will be made Tuesday and Wednesday (Nov. 15 & 16) from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Student who live in the dorms should vote in the quad area. The remaining students will vote in front of the library. A master checklist will be at both places to make sure that students vote only once. In order to vote, students must bring their Cal State I.D. card.

The results of the referendum are forwarded to President Evans and he then will make a recommendation to Chancellor Reynolds. The President's recommendation is not bound by the referendum results, but the results of the referendum are forwarded to the chancellor.

Students now pay $10 per year to the Instructionally Related Activities Fund (IRA) which if referred to as the Instructionally Related Programs (IRP) on this campus. These funds are used to purchase props, uniforms, transportation, and other instructionally related needs. The additional $10 a year would be used for practice uniforms, transportation, and insurance for intercollegiate sports.

Speechcraft

Have you ever had a class you dreaded because you had to give an oral presentation, or have you gone so far as to avoid classes that required speeches? The popular "Book of Lists" tells us that our greatest fear is getting up on our feet and delivering a speech, even if it's only to a small group of your peers. Some of the common symptoms are dryness of the mouth, shaky hands, and fear that those beautifully formed words you've rehearsed will never make it from your mind to your mouth.

Well, there is an answer to this age-old problem. It's called Speechcraft, sponprated by Toastmasters, is an eight session workshop that will teach you the fundamentals of effective verbal communication. You're in luck, because a new session has just started this month. It is held at the community room of Full Service Insurance Company at 3486 Del Rosa Avenue in San Bernardino each Tuesday at 7 p.m.

When you begin Speech-crafters, you will discover a congenial group of people who will welcome you and who will do all they can to help you. The cost of the program is only $10.

For more information, please call Dorinda Thurman at the Health Center on campus (887-7641), Ed Dickey at 886-0634, or Ted Kagan at 883-7732. We look forward to meeting you, and providing assistance to you.

CSMA Attends Trade Show Workshop

Last Tuesday, November 1, thirteen members of the Cal State Marketing Association, and advisor Dr. Nabil Razzouk, attended a Trade Show Workshop at the Los Angeles Convention Center. Several speakers gave presentations at the workshop, and CSMA members learned a great deal about trade shows from behind the scenes.

For future reference, a meeting will be held on November 10th from 5:15 to 5:50 p.m. in Student Union Room A. Lance Masters will speak on a marketing-related topic.

Attention Photographers

NOVEMBERFEST BMC STYLE
by Joe Celentrano V.P. BMC

Novemberfest 1983-Pun, camaraderie, and involvement. Those were the three goals set by the Business Management Club (BMC) for the day's festivities, and by all indications of what transpired, it was a resounding success.

Of course there were other things we wanted to accomplish, for example, exposure to let the student body know we are an active club here on campus; fund raising-the sale of hot dogs was a complete sell-out, and the "pop" kept flowing right up until the booth closed; recruiting was equally successful. A good number of people asked about the club and its purpose, and we even gained a few members. All in all, the Novemberfest was a success, and we all enjoyed the activities.

We, the BMC, also appreciate the college for allowing us the opportunity to participate in the Novemberfest: the Student Union and its staff, especially Sherri Deutchman, the Administrator, for her help and understanding our problem to get the necessities for the booth: the Associated Students for coordinating the Novemberfest and the entertainment that was provided; and I'm especially appreciative to all the student-members of the BMC who planned, worked and supported our activities for the day. To Al Krecht, Tony Lacey, "Big Al" Larson, Dave Tromillo, Lorri Lankford, Shelley Cervantes, Caitlleen Bright, Janet Tyrrel, Deanne Hendricks and Jim Martin, thanks!

Feeling Lonely Can Be Very Contagious

by Jodi Feldbush

Have you ever considered the definition of the word lonely? The American Heritage Dictionary defines lonely as: "without companions or companionship; solitary; unfrequented; desolate; deserted; deserted even among people. For example, at school, which is noted in a book I read entitled, Loneliness in the Schools, by Marc Robert, Ed.D., he stated, "In our preoccupation with club programs and systems, we have ignored the need for human interaction within the schools and the personal needs of the students, teachers, and staff members who live there from four to ten hours a day, five days a week, during the school year." Can this be true on campus at Cal State? What about you students, teachers and staff members, do you ever feel uninvolved and lonely? Roberts also stated, "Any teacher can from his or her own experience, add their own feelings of frustration and 'gut' reaction to the list of attitudes that cause discomfort and desperation. Although staff members in many school systems are exerting efforts to overcome the dehumanizing forces at work in the schools, the factors which contribute to separation and loneliness seem to be growing ever stronger."

Does this statement relate to you Cal State teachers and staff? Nobody wants to be lonely, but under certain conditions school can be a very lonely place. Not only

This is a weekly column. If you have any health-related questions that you would like answered, drop your questions in the box in the Health Center lobby.

I need to have all four impacted wisdom teeth removed. The dentist suggested that I have them out all at once. Is that the best way?

Your dentist knows best. If he suggests you have all four wisdom teeth removed at one time, you should follow his advice. Having all done at once requires only one anesthetic.

If both of us have herpes, do we need to use preventive measure?

Yes. You should not make love while either of you has an active infection.

What are the types of contraception that can be used by the female? How effective are the various types?

For starters, don't believe anyone that tells you to use orange juice for contraception. That is, unless you use it instead of...

I will list the contraceptives in order of effectiveness:

1. The Pill, known as O.C.'s, are cervical caps, IUD's, and diaphragms. These are effective, 80% effective again, if used as directed.

2. The third group consists of the jellies, creams, foams and suppositories. These can be used over the counter, and can be used in your purse or glove compartment.

The most recent contraceptive is the re-introduction of the sponge. The true effectiveness is yet to be determined. The sponge sells for a dollar and one can be used for 24 hours.

At a later date, the above will be discussed in detail along with contraception for the male as well as surgical procedures.

I have allergies. Can I have allergy testing or antigen injections at the Health Center? How do I make arrangements for this?

We do not do allergy testing in the Health Center. However, after you have been tested by your private physician, you can bring your antigens in and we will give you your injections. Call the Health Center for further information.

by Dennis Hatch

Due to the fact that column space is, at times, something of a premium in a newspaper, some things that were intended for the final installment in my "Affairs of the Heart" series were deleted from the original manuscript, but now can be presented.

The last time's last week's article finished with a quote from E. a teacher here at CSCSB, stating that if a female professor wants to keep her job, she had better keep an affair secret. Here is what followed:

I spoke with another female teacher who does just that. She talked with me at length about her on-going relationship with one of her former students, but she asked that I not write about it. I respect this teacher and her request will be respected. Her attitude is not one of bilgenerance, but of fear that to make anything known about her relationship would expose herself to exactly the kind of criticism and censure that the E. spoke of. One aspect of criticism is one that seems to shock a good many people on campus: age difference. While it is acceptable for a middle-aged man to have a relationship with a woman who is 20 or 30 years younger than he is, it is still frowned upon for an older woman to enjoy the company of a younger man.

It is indeed, a strange and mixed set of mores that still govern our attitudes in 1983. We have come a long way in changing some of society's inequalities between men and women, but there is still a long road ahead to be travelled. There are, on this campus, several prominent male professors who have married their students and enjoy a certain respect from their colleagues as well as the student body. In fact, their stature has seemed to increase rather than diminish. But despite how liberal the 1970's supposedly made us, most of us are not ready to convey the same respect upon a woman who, for whatever reason or circumstance, falls in love, or tries to find some sort of happiness with a student.

In concluding this series, it is hoped that you, the students and faculty at CSCSB have discovered something about what seems to be a vast gray area which many seem to have strong opinions about, but really have so little knowledge.

This report, admittedly, did not cover all the bases on this controversial subject, but tried, instead, to touch upon some of the more sensitive aspects, the truly human side, free of criticism or judgement. Rather, any criticism that is made comes directly from those involved, for they see their own relationships far better than anyone else can.

My sincere gratitude to all of the students who helped in the survey, which continues to trickle in and will be the subject of a follow up report. This writer is especially grateful to all students and faculty who were brave enough to talk me about their personal lives and permitted me to ask some very intimate questions. To them, I hope I have not betrayed their trust and I sincerely hope I have presented their facts accurately. My thanks also to those whose interviews did not appear in this series; this story could not have been possible without them.

This writer has certainly learned something about this campus and about people. I hope that you have also.

by Steven Race

Featuring a solo rock-n-roll performance of songs from the 70's and free refreshments, the student union kicked off its first "coffee house" night last Wednesday.

ARMY OF SMALL GOULS HAUNT CSCSB
by Dennis Hatcher and Carol Leish

Have you ever thought that the director of CSCSB's Child Care Center was a witch, and the people who work there were a bunch of clowns? You should have been there last Monday for the Halloween party-no one would have argued the point.

In fact, Pam Dortch is probably the fiercest witch anybody has ever seen. But on Halloween morning, she led a small army of ghosts and goblins on a haunting of CSCSB.

Pam wasn't riding a broom this time. Instead, she and her tiny gang, which consisted of cowboys, Indians, Spiderman, Pac-Man, Robin Hood and others, swooped around campus in a Halloween Special tram. Her terrifying troupe first ran through the Student Services office, the smiling coven assembled and sang Halloween songs and showed off before a group of foreign students enrolled in the American Culture and Language Program. Students from Taiwan, Japan, Korea, Indonesia, and the Arab Emirates experienced the American custom of Halloween and trick-or-treating.

"But the death blows came from a little girl dressed as a skeleton, named Susan."

From the looks of pleasure and surprise on their faces, the students must have enjoyed the scene as much as the children. When it was time to leave, the foreign students helped in passing out candy to the eager kids. Then, loaded back into the tram and under the expert driving ability of Miss Vicky, the children paraded into the Commons, Student Union, and finally, to Tokay and Arrowhead dorms. At each stop, the kids added to their booties so that by 11:30, many of the bags were bursting. Then it was back to the Center for lunch and naps.

You might think that for 6-year old kids, the morning's events would be plenty to wear them out. But that was just the beginning. At 3 p.m., the kids assembled in the play-yard for the breaking of the bright orange pumpkin pinata.

Wearing a blindfold and wielding a plastic baseball bat, the action began. The first two kids managed to make contact with the smiling jack-o-lantern, but did not inflict any serious damage. The climax came when a sturdy young boy named Benjamin managed to get in 3 or 4 real good whacks that severely wrinkled and cracked the pumpkin. But the death blows came from a little girl dressed as a skeleton, named Susan. The pumpkin was set in motion, and as it swung back and forth like a pendulum, it narrowly missed grazing her head as she swung frantically at the elusive orb. Finally, she made a solid blow which finished off what Benjamin had started. The pumpkin burst and out spilled taffy, bubble gum, and rubber spiders onto the ground. In a mad scramble amid squeals of delight and laughter, the kids pounced on the goodies and snatched them up.

There's a lot of love and fun at CSCSB's Children's Center. Halloween day was just one of many such examples of the dedication and love for little people to be found there. You can be a part of it, even if you don't have children of your own. If you like kids, or you just want to be active in something worthwhile, visit the Children's Center behind the Student Services building, and see Pam Dortch.

Math Major Issues Challenge

Turkey Trot Fun Run

"Win The Upcoming Turkey Trot and I'll Spring For Two Large Pizzas and Drinks." Mathematics senior David Parke issued the above challenge to any team, comprised of students of any one major, of at least three members, male or female.

"Most of us will be really surprised if any three non-math students from any one major can get out of their own way in a 5k. I am prepared, however, to use a two-for-one coupon."

The Turkey Trot is a traditional Thanksgiving season intramural fun run at Cal State, San Bernardino. The race will be run at 4 p.m. on Nov. 16 and again at 4 p.m. on Nov. 17. You can run either day. Not technically a team event, this year's informal major team competition promises added interest.

Parke predicts the math department will win, based on their ability to solve long equations. "The computer science department might win if they could find their way out of the Pfla Library basements. Business majors will be hampered by their three piece suits. The P.E. department suffers from inadequate preparation. too much therapy."

Nursing Program Only Open to Registered Nurses

Several issues back, the PawPrint criticized an article reassuring readers that nurses working at the Health Center were not "would-be nurses." The article asked who would "be nurses." The article indirectly implied that nurses enrolled in Cal State's Nursing Program might be "would be nurses." The article indirectly implied that nurses enrolled in Cal State's Nursing Program might be "would be nurses.

I wish to stress to all interested persons that individuals enrolled in the Nursing Program are also highly qualified "Professional Registered Nurses." They are the nurses who provide you with health care in your community through hospitals, clinics, home care, education/prevention on campus. emergencies, intensive care. The majority have enrolled at this campus to advance themselves personally as well as professionally. That they have returned to college demonstrates their ongoing commitment to provide society with the most knowledgeable health care professionals possible. I have the highest regard for these dedicated individuals and feel it is important to recognize them in this manner.

I would also like to inform those currently enrolled in the Nursing Program, or preparing to do so, that the R.N. Association will have representatives in the Student Union Chambers, Thursday, Nov. 10 from noon until 2 p.m. I encourage nurses on campus during that period to stop by and learn what the association can offer you personally and professionally. A brief business meeting will be held around 1 p.m. Stop by, if even for a moment. I guarantee you will be pleasantly surprised.

Along with these are stage manager Mary Manthis, and behind the scenes Jacqui Jones. They have spent as much time as the cast themselves learning lines, blocking, and tech cues. Their difficult job requires attentive quick thinking.

They are often referred to as "stage slant back blankets because they "confort everyone and hide everything." According to the members of the cast and crew it has been a great six and-a-half weeks. As with any show there have been ups and downs. As mentioned earlier, one of the cast members, Mark Peters, was seriously injured in a accident while driving home from a rehearsal late one evening. He reportedly fell asleep at the wheel of his car and crashed into a tree. Recently Mark was released from St. Anthony's hospital where he was recovering satisfactorily.

However, as is expected, the show must go on so to speak. When asked about the personal sacrifices each has had to make in behalf of the show, time for study was at the top of the list. Many of the cast members admitted that grades do suffer during productions. Usually this is because, as Mary Manthis stated, "The last thing you want to do after a day of class and an evening of rehearsal is study!" You have a drink, relax and try to recollect your brain so that you can do it again tomorrow. Social life was a close second with all of the cast and crew.

Do you support the $10.00 FEE INCREASE for Intercollegiate Sports?

Brad Johnson
English Composition

I'm opposed to fee increases in general, and concerned that a sports program may not have either the support or participation foreseen by some people.

Julie Sparrook
Undecided

Yes, I support the proposed fee increase for Intercollegiate Sports. I think it is a reasonable investment for future team members and the rest of the student body as well. These sports will enhance the college atmosphere, increase student's spirit in school, and bring more students to CSCSB instead of turning them away to schools who do offer Intercollegiate Sports. Let's help put CSCSB on the map with the other state colleges and universities.

Trish Grimes
Business Administration

Yes, we are the only school in the CSU system that does not have intercollegiate sports. I seriously doubt that $10 per year will financially hurt any individual. The main concern voiced by students appears to be fear that other departments will be cut in order to fund sports. Examination on this issue holds promise that this will not be the case at CSCSB. I feel that a sports program will enhance our school and draw attention to the much neglected Cal State San Bernardino. And last but certainly not least, I would love to see all those cute little jocks!

Yes, I feel that this $10 fee will be returned 10 fold in the long run. The benefits that sports would bring to this campus are many. Enrollment increases, monetary reimbursement as well as the improvement of the general attitude of the student body. It's about time that Cal State rose from the desolate borohdon of an apathetic college and joined the ranks of an enthusiastic university.

Todd Turcik
Economics

Yes, I believe that Intercollegiate Sports are a vital part of the "University Experience." However, they could detract from the Intramural Sports Program and cause neglect of academics. Actually, I'm not sure!

Anonymous

I do not feel that the addition of intercollegiate sports would benefit the school very much. Judging from the camaraderie and good fun that the participants in intramurals seem to share, our present situation does not make out as poorly as intercollegiates try to make it. In fact, many schools who are well known for their intercollegiate sports have sacrificed the spirit of fun for athletic prestige. In addition, the present proposal of a $10.00 increase will do nothing to improve the athletic program.
