Boxer and Fong Both Want to Be Your Senator

By Chris Ellweil and Jennifer Thierry
Chronicle Staff Writers

In the upcoming election this November, voters will find themselves with two strong candidates who are vying to represent California’s interests in the US Senate. Running as a Democrat is Senator Barbara Boxer who has already served on the US Senate for a full term: running as a Republican is California State Treasurer, Matt Fong.

California State University students would find it interesting to know that a California State treasurer Matt Fong assisted 90,000 California

CSUSB Hosts International Volleyball Match

By Cheri Dixon
Design Editor

If you weren’t able to attend the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics to watch the USA and Brazil teams compete in the medal round of men’s volleyball, now you have a second chance to see some world class competition. CSUSB is hosting the prestigious match between the men’s national volleyball teams of Brazil and the United States on Tuesday, Nov. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the Coussouls Arena.

This match at CSUSB is the last one between the USA and Brazil national teams before they meet in Japan to compete for the gold medal at the World Championships Nov. 11-29. Only 24 of the 60 world teams who began the year have qualified and will now be able to compete in Japan. The national teams have been ranked by the FIVB (Federation Internationale de Volleyball) according to region. Brazil is currently ranked #4 in the world, with
ASI Officers Voice Their 98-99 Goals

By Jennifer Lynn Thierry
Managing Editor

ASI Officers, T.J. Wood, Associated Students Incorporated president, Mary-Ellen Abiez, vice-president and Grayson Hoffman, controller have big plans for the students of Cal State. Their Goals will help make this campus greater.

Communication to the students is a big goal for the ASI officers. The radio station being set up in Student Union is a key. "We are a commuter campus, what better way to reach students than through their car radio," Mary-Ellen said. A newsletter and the establishment of a web page for ASI will help to tell the students what events are coming up and any goals being handled in the future.

The Coachella Valley Satellite campus is a major priority for the ASI officers. They plan to do a student survey to assess the needs and priorities of CVC students and put necessary changes on the fast track.

The Club Allocation Fund (CAF) provides money to chartered clubs on campus. Money for this fund comes from student fees. Clubs apply for this money from ASI. To form a club a few students must be officers and a faculty member to be an advisor, and a quick stop in Student Life Offices and that's it. Once Chartered application is easy. Once Chartered application is easy. This year will have more events than ever before. Grayson said, "Keep your eyes open this year, and you are going to see ASI's emblem on events, concerts and programs all over the place."

There are over fifty campus wide committees that clamor for student representation. It is to our benefit to be there. Come in and fill out an application. ASI wants you to get involved and get what you deserve. ASI is here to represent you, and they want to know what is going on throughout campus. The students may see something they did not.

If there are students who have ideas or concerns, they invite them to call or stop by. "We can't be all things to all people, but it wouldn't hurt to try," Mary-Ellen stated. The door is always open at ASI offices. Any student with a need or even a question is welcome to ask the executive officers to address it.

The ASI officers are working to make this campus greater and to get every voice in the crowd heard.

University and college students in continuing their education through the allocation of $170 million in bonds. He has also done a study that demonstrates a $22 billion dollar need or California schools' infrastructure. Feng plans to use this information in his work with the California legislature to accurately plan more school buildings.

Barbara Boxer has also supported the university system by endorsing many research projects done by California university professors. Boxer has channeled $75 million dollars to California through her urging of the U.S. Department of the Interior to charge 10 oil companies a total of $385 million dollars in January of last year. Boxer is a co-sponsor of the Partnership To Rebuild America's Schools Act, which helps fund repairs, renovation, modernization and construction of better school facilities.

On the controversial issue of abortion both Boxer and Feng support the right to terminate a fetus up to the first trimester of a pregnancy. After this point in the pregnancy, Feng supports a ban on partial birth abortions while Boxer supports partial birth abortions and maintains that a mother should have the right to abort her fetus up to until birth.

Feng and Boxer also strongly oppose each other on the issue of homosexual marriages. Feng's view point is the traditional definition of marriage should remain the union between one man and one women. Senator Boxer believes that the definition should be expanded to include the joining of the same sexes in a marriage relationship.

Both Feng and Boxer have been attempting to deal with violence in California. Barbara Boxer has fought to put more policemen on the streets to deal with crime, while Matt Feng has also dealt with this issue by supporting tougher punishment of criminals.

Prop 227
Is It a Step Backwards?

By Erin C. Martz
Special to the Chronicle

In response to the outrage expressed by Jesse Serrao-Leiva (10/15/98) about cancelling the bilingual education statewide by voter's choice (Prop 227), I would like to express a few points.

One is that having studied a second language for four years, and a third language for over two years, I can empathize with some of the frustration and bewilderment that comes from not knowing words of another language. However, many, many programs across the U.S. and internationally offer "total immersion" language programs, in which you have to stop speaking your primary language altogether.

The results are obvious by the outcomes of the language abilities of who did versus who did not attend a total immersion language program.

The passage of Proposition 227 makes it possible for children to participate in the intensive and accelerated learning experience of immersion programs. Further, these programs can be viewed positively because children are scientifically known to be much more open to acquiring a second language and also have a great retention ability of that knowledge as adults.

I question of defensiveness and isolationism of the policy of segregating non-English speakers into separate classrooms. Take the example of the movement to integrate people with disabilities into classrooms ("mainstreaming"), instead of segregating them. The results have been overwhelmingly positive. Though it cannot be predicted whether the same will happen by mainstreaming non-English speakers into regular classrooms, the efficacy of language immersion programs indicates that it would be a good step to take.

Another point is that to a greater or lesser degree, immigrants have made a choice to come to this country. While it is understandable for them to want to preserve their culture and traditions, it is part of economic necessity that they learn English. If they continue to depend on another language, they may be less likely to survive economically in this country, unless they want to work as unskilled laborers or as a worker, limited by a language barrier, in an already tough, competitive labor market.

The immigrants are free to spend time after school hours to cultivate their children's knowledge of their roots. Yet, if they want their children to be able to advance and flourish in this country, language fluency is a key.

Adapting to a new environment is a lot of work sometimes. But they have chosen (for individual reasons) to come here. And learning a new language is one of their new responsibilities.

"Slayers" Feature-Film Hits U.S. Shores

By Corina Borsuk
Special to The Chronicle

The powerful, yet slightly under-developed sorcerous Lina Inverse is back in action in "Slayers: The Motion Picture," from A.D.V Films. This full-length feature, shown in letterbox format, continues the often funny, seldom serious antics fans have come to expect.

In fact, it's a lot like a typical "Slayers" episode. Although the threat in this film is plenty serious and plenty evil, there is also more than plenty of comedy. Lina's smaller physical stature results in its fair share of jokes, as does the well-endowed nature of the newest addition to the "Slayers" cast, Nahga. There's even a "dragon-spooker" reference slipped in for die-hard fans, which doesn't go unnoticed by our heroine.

Fans of the television show may find a few things missing, however. Other familiar characters, notably Amelia and Gourry, are absent from this adventure, with no explanation. Despite this, it is apparent that the motion picture takes place after the first four volumes of the "Slayers" series.

As with many television series turned feature film, the budget is bigger, which means the animation is better. The attention to detail only enhances the viewing experience. Watch for Lina's new Dragon Slave, as well as a couple brand new spells, spiced up with added effects.

There is also a touching moment at the end, plus a fabulous ending theme song. Also, watch the animation as the credits roll, there are some nice screen shots, plus a bit of bonus footage.

All in all, "Slayers: The Motion Picture" is a fun-filled anime comedy that can be enjoyed by long-time fans or those new to the series.

a Flood Tide is Coming

By Jennifer Lynn Thierry
Managing Editor

Dirk Pitt, the lead in 13 adventure novels, is back to protect the unprotected. Clive Cussler has just released this month in paperback "Flood Tide". A greedy Chinese Smuggler is trading human lives as slaves. His insatiable lust for money and power has seeped into the life of Special Projects Director of NUMA (The National Underwater and Marine Agency) Dirk Pitt. His vacation is crashed by the appearance of strange people milling at the other end of the lake and dark boats buzzing up and down the lake in the middle of the night. His insatiable curiosity puts him in the middle of the smuggling ring. He must save the mysterious undercover INS agent who finds herself in the middle of the huge slave trade. He must fight the richest most powerful man he has ever faced.

Even though there are thirteen other titles by Clive Cussler that star Dirk Pitt, you need not to have read them all, this book stands on its own as a great story. All of Dirk Pitt’s stories put him in harrowing situations one land, on the sea and in the sea. Each book has at least one shipwreck site in which something spectacular takes place.

This is an excellent story that has you hooked from the beginning to the spectacular conclusion. Dirk Pitt is an excellent character that anyone can get into. His need to help anyone who needs it is heartwarming. The details of the shipwrecks he explores are excellent.

The book has now been released in paperback and can be purchased for $7.99. "Flood Tide" by Clive Cussler is a great book to read if you are looking for a little adventure to liven up your life.

What do you think about the last movie you saw?

Peyote Asesino Infiltrates U.S. Music Scene

By Miguel Gonzalez
Managing Editor

Uruguayan punk rockers Peyote Asesino is the latest band to hit the U.S. with their unique sounds. Terraja is the name of their new CD produced by Gustavo Santaolalla and Anibal Kerpel (Molotov, Cafe Tacuba). The band is composed of Juan Campodonico (guitars), Canedo (Drums), Carlos Casacuberta (vocals), Daniel Benia (Bass), Mental (vocals). Their first single titled "De pedo y de tos" is a slammin' tune that reaching the top ten of many college stations that dare to play Rock en Espanol. If you have not heard Peyote Asesino go out and buy it. This is a definite classic in the world of Rock en Espanol.

Mexican punks, Molotov, have made history by winning the MTV Music award for best video in the category of rock en espanol. "Gimme tha power" is the name of the video in which the controversial band speaks against the corrupt Mexican Government. Consequently the band is now producing their second album, while their first album, "Donde jugaran las ninas" has gone gold in nearly every country it was released (including the U.S.).

Rock en espanol Magazine La Banda Elastica has just announced the line up for their 6th anniversary celebration, which will take place at the Universal Amphitheater on November 1st. Headlining will be Chilean Rock band La Ley followed by Argentina’s Illya Kuryaki, Mexico’s Plastilina Mosh, Panama’s Rabanes, and Pomona’s Pastilla. Tickets can be purchased thru Ticketmaster and if you have no money keep on reading The Chronicle we will be giving out tickets to lucky winners.

Cowboy Mouth
Who Are These Guys?

By Jared Jensen
Chronicle Staff Writer

"Cowboy Mouth," MCA's latest recording artists, are no rookies. The veteran band has been touring and recording to many loyal and devoted fans for over seven years. Cowboy Mouth has a unique sound that mixes hard core rock with country and adds dashes of blues and New Orleans jazz.

Mercyland, the band's latest release, represents a utopia for all, characterized by hope, ambiguity, healing and redemption. For the lead vocalist and guitar player Paul Sanchez, Mercyland is the figurative "place we go to when we play."

The Louisiana band expresses its New Orleans roots through complex styles and musical themes. New Orleans, also known as the "Big Easy," is a spiritual, cross-cultural city which defies description. It is evident Cowboy Mouth is a native band by its musical blend. Three of the four members, Fred LeBlanc, Paul Sanchez, and John Thomas Griffith, carry lead vocals throughout the album. That allows the band members to cross musical categories, with each having his own vocal style.

Mercyland has 14 diverse tracks. The first song on the album, "Why Ya Wanna Do Me," has a heavy guitar sound and tricky word play by vocalist Fred LeBlanc. Then it is immediately followed by two slow country songs, "Lovers or Friends" and "Little Blue One." Both songs have simplistic lyrics, basic love 'em and leave 'em themes, that never quite catch the listener. "Drummer Man," which was my favorite song on the album, has a tricky bass line and pays homage to the drummer Fred LeBlanc. "Great Wide Open World" has the most significant theme in which they use examples of the average persons problems and put them in a perspective of how tiny your problems are in a wide open world.

Cowboy Mouth has an easy going musical sound and at times is reminiscent of Hootie and the Blowfish. So if you want to hear an eclectic blend of musical styles all rolled up into a southern mystical feel, then give it a listen!

Tune In

Still riding the wave of recent hit "One Week," Barenaked Ladies' fifth album, , is once again on Billboard's top ten. The album, which is enjoying its thirteenth week on the chart, is full of fun, upbeat songs about just about everything. "One Week" kicks off the album and sets the tone for the album. Similar tracks "Who Needs Sleep?" and "Alcohol" seem to be anthems for the college crowd. The album slows down considerably with "Call and Answer," "Told You So," and the ballad "When You Dream."

Minneapolis band Semisonic wanted their second album to be a so-called "bedroom record," according to lead singer Dan Wilson. And in many ways Feeling Strangely Fine is just that. The album, which found success with its first single "Closing Time," mixes soft and sultry vocals with harder alternative guitar riffs and percussion. "Singing in My Sleep," "Secret Smile," and "Completely Pleased" delve into the inner workings of love and romance. Packed with romance, the album looks to be a favorite among couples.

Point Music, created to benefit children infected or affected by HIV/AIDS, is quite an album. Put together by Wisconsin's WPNT 106.9, the CD's highlights include acoustic performances recorded in studio of "Push" by Matchbox 20, "Barely Breathing" by Duncan Sheik, and Better than Ezra's "Desperately Wanting." Indigo Girls contributed a live performance of "Shame On You," while other artists such as Toad the Wet Sprocket, Jewel, and Paula Cole each contributed various singles.

If you’re not a fan of intercollegiate athletics, you still might want to see this great game because it doesn’t get any better than this—world class. Call the Coussoulis Arena at 880-7360 or Ticketmasters to reserve $10 and $8 tickets, which are still available.

In soccer, exuberant forward Tom Maher scored the only goal for the Tekes, but it was enough, as they beat Sigma Phi Epsilon 1-0. TKE is the favorites to win that division as well, because of its outstanding ball controlling, quickness and exceptional goalkeeping.

The Tekes had a bye this week, but play next Wednesday on the fields south of the Coussoulis Arena. Come out and watch this exciting soccer team dominate the Intramurals once again. An autograph session will be held immediately after the game.

Players on the Brazil team include: Marcelo Teles Negrao, Ricardo Micieli, Andre Heller, Gilmar Teixeira, Luis Monzillo Filho, Mauricio Lima, Gilberto Godoy Filho, Douglas Chiarotti, Antonio Gouveia, Max Pereira, Anderson Menezes, Nalbert Bittencourt, Gustavo Endres, Alex Straglottlo, Marcelo Elgarten, Gilson Alves Bernardo, Ricardo Garcia, and Manius Abbadi.

No ID Cards, No Play

By Nick Johnson Special to The Chronicle

Week two of the Intramural Sports program had a few hitches. There are several concerns about the way the football division is being run so far.

Before games on Friday, several players from different teams were informed that they were not allowed to play because they had not signed waivers.

Several identification cards were misplaced, and players were very upset. After that issue was solved, the officiating was suspect. This is the first season in at least five years that the officials are having such an impact on the play. Just let them play!

With that aside, there were some good football games played. The biggest upset in school history saw Delta Sigma Phi defeat a confident Tau Kappa Epsilon team, 13-6. TKE (1-1), the annual favorites to win the championship, was not able to move the ball at will like it was used to, and as a result, learned a valuable lesson in the process.

“We didn’t play TKE football on Friday,” said quarterback/noseguard Gordon Amerson, who also plays professional baseball for the New York Yankees. “We didn’t execute on offense or defense. But I am confident that we will bounce back this week.”

Even if you’re not seriously interested in the sport of volleyball, you might still enjoy this Nov. 3 game. It will have a lot of party spirit and carnival atmosphere, especially because many of the Brazilian team fans will go all-out to show support of their national team, even wearing green and yellow face paint. So, if you want to show support of the USA team, try wearing your own red, white, and blue face paint. See you there!

Soccer Tidbits

Midfielder David Coronado (#19) leads the ball over Roadrunners’ Eric Littlejohn (#16) during the second half of the men’s soccer game played at home, October 10th. The Coyotes battled to a 1-1 tie.

Week two of the Intramural Sports program had a few hitches. There are several concerns about the way the football division is being run so far.

Before games on Friday, several players from different teams were informed that they were not allowed to play because they had not signed waivers.

Several identification cards were misplaced, and players were very upset. After that issue was solved, the officiating was suspect. This is the first season in at least five years that the officials are having such an impact on the play. Just let them play!

With that aside, there were some good football games played. The biggest upset in school history saw Delta Sigma Phi defeat a confident Tau Kappa Epsilon team, 13-6. TKE (1-1), the annual favorites to win the championship, was not able to move the ball at will like it was used to, and as a result, learned a valuable lesson in the process.

“We didn’t play TKE football on Friday,” said quarterback/noseguard Gordon Amerson, who also plays professional baseball for the New York Yankees. “We didn’t execute on offense or defense. But I am confident that we will bounce back this week.”

Even if you’re not seriously interested in the sport of volleyball, you might still enjoy this Nov. 3 game. It will have a lot of party spirit and carnival atmosphere, especially because many of the Brazilian team fans will go all-out to show support of their national team, even wearing green and yellow face paint. So, if you want to show support of the USA team, try wearing your own red, white, and blue face paint. See you there!

Soccer Tidbits

Midfielder David Coronado (#19) leads the ball over Roadrunners’ Eric Littlejohn (#16) during the second half of the men’s soccer game played at home, October 10th. The Coyotes battled to a 1-1 tie.

In soccer, exuberant forward Tom Maher scored the only goal for the Tekes, but it was enough, as they beat Sigma Phi Epsilon 1-0. TKE is the favorites to win that division as well, because of its outstanding ball controlling, quickness and exceptional goalkeeping.

The Tekes had a bye this week, but play next Wednesday on the fields south of the Coussoulis Arena. Come out and watch this exciting soccer team dominate the Intramurals once again. An autograph session will be held immediately after the game.

Players on the Brazil team include: Marcelo Teles Negrao, Ricardo Micieli, Andre Heller, Gilmar Teixeira, Luis Monzillo Filho, Mauricio Lima, Gilberto Godoy Filho, Douglas Chiarotti, Antonio Gouveia, Max Pereira, Anderson Menezes, Nalbert Bittencourt, Gustavo Endres, Alex Straglottlo, Marcelo Elgarten, Gilson Alves Bernardo, Ricardo Garcia, and Manius Abbadi.
