Psych Dept Sweeps Teaching Awards

Dr. David Riefer has made his career studying a mysterious and often slippery subject - the human memory. During his fourteen-year stint here at CSUSB, Dr. Riefer has focused his research on that often elusive subject matter.

Currently, he serves as the psychology department faculty for 16 years, teaching courses about childhood development, the psychology of adolescence and adulthood, and aging, among others. Currently, she serves as the psychology department's coordinator for the master's program in lifespan developmental psychology and for nearly 13 years oversaw the bachelor's degree program in human development.

Laura Kamptner, professor of psychology, has earned the top teaching award given at Cal State, San Bernardino this year. Kamptner has been on the psychology department faculty for 16 years, teaching courses about memory, teaching processes, specifically, are especially noteworthy," said Dr. Robert Cramer, a psychology professor and former recipient of the university's Outstanding Professor award.

According to colleagues, Riefer's work on memory, in conjunction with UC Irvine professor Dr. Bill Batchelder, is making an impact in his field. "David's contributions to cognitive psychology, generally, and to memory processes, specifically, are especially noteworthy," said Dr. Robert Cramer, a psychology professor and former recipient of the Apple Award for excellence in teaching.

"In studying psychology one of the things is to learn about research," said Riefer of his efforts to include undergraduate and graduate students in his work. "Too often you write a paper and forget about it." Riefer said that by participating in his research, students get a better chance to understand the research process. Riefer added that inclusion in a research project or scholarly article can boost a student's chances of landing a spot in graduate school.

"I'm very pleased," said Riefer. "I've been up for this award for five years and came in second. I felt like the Susan Lucci of awards. We both finally won this year - it must be kismet."

Dr. Riefer's research is a boon to CSUSB students as well as for the field of psychology because he involves students intimately in his work. Nearly half of his 37 scholarly presentations at psychological seminars and three of his published articles were produced in cooperation with Cal State psychology majors.

Laura Kamptner personally announced the award in front of her 8:00 class on Monday. Her husband and son were on hand and seemed proud as they listened to President Karnig comment on Dr. Kamptner's excellent teaching abilities. The students also seemed honored and touched to be a part of the moment.

"Kamptner is a major force in undergraduate and graduate curriculums for the psychology department and for the human Development Program," said department colleague Robert Cramer, a psychology professor who served on the selection committee for the Golden Apple Award that Kamptner will also receive from the Education Roundtable in San Bernardino.

Kamptner's undergraduate and graduate degrees are in childhood development form the San Diego State and the University of California, Davis. She holds a Ph.D. in developmental psychology from Michigan State. Kamptner has also extended her expertise in a variety of community forums, including presentations for service clubs and area high schools and colleges, among others.
A Guide to Free Money for Students

You may be eligible for a scholarship and don’t know it. CSUSB on-campus scholarship applications are currently being accepted for the 2000-2001 academic year, but the deadline is March 2.

Over 70 types of scholarships are ready to be awarded to new and continuing students. “We would like as many applicants as possible,” said Roberta Albert, the Administrative Support Assistant of the Financial Aid Office. Just contact the Financial Aid office at (909) 880-5289 or visit their home page at http://finaid.csusb.edu/. Some of the scholarships being awarded are:

The Academic Merit Award Scholarship is a $2,500 scholarship awarded annually to twenty (20) students. Applicants must have graduated from a high school in California during the 1999/2000 academic year, minimum high school GPA of 3.75, minimum SAT score of 1,000 and have financial need.

The Albro Scholarship is a $1,650 scholarship awarded annually to a full-time African-American student with a minimum 3.0 GPA.

The Arrowhead Credit Union provides two $1,850 annual awards to undergraduate or graduate students who are enrolled full time in the school of Business and Public Administration or the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. A $500 scholarship is awarded to a student interested in international affairs.

The Associated Students, Incorporated provides 10 scholarships at $1,000 each annually to continuing students demonstrating academic ability, financial need, and community involvement.

The California Portland Cement awards $1,000 annually to a full-time student in a teaching credential program preparing them to teach math or science at the secondary level.

The Faculty and Staff Memorial Scholarship honors the memory of deceased university faculty and staff. Amounts vary as additional funds are added to the scholarship; the most recent award was $900.

The Evelyn Magnuson Scholarship provides a $2,000 annual scholarship for an outstanding undergraduate or graduate student interested in the practice of law. The scholarship provides two $5,000 scholarships for students planning to become schoolteachers, two $5,000 scholarships to mathematics majors, and $800 to upper-division students in physical education.

The Faculty and Staff Memorial Scholarship provides three scholarships at $5,000 each to students enrolled full time in a teacher preparation program (single subject, multiple subject or special education), with a minimum grade point average of 3.0, and who have financial need.

The Faculty and Staff Memorial Scholarship provides a $2,000 scholarship to a senior or graduate student entering the field of teaching. The student is selected on the basis of financial need, academic achievement, and school and community activities.

The California State University Future Scholars Program awards thirty $1,000 scholarships to California students with disadvantaged backgrounds. This scholarship is funded by the California State Lottery.

The California State University, San Bernardino Associates provides two scholarships totaling $800 to upper-division students who possess a superior academic record, financial need and a record of good citizenship.

The California Retired Teachers Association provides a $2,000 scholarship to a senior or graduate student entering the field of teaching. The student is selected on the basis of financial need, academic achievement, and school and community activities.

Surveys to Help Combat Tobacco Access to Minors

By Tia Hem
Chronicle Staff Writer

The PACT project, created by the Behavior Health Institute, is a state-funded program to help fight against the illegal distribution of tobacco to minors.

For the past six years the institute has been doing research related to tobacco control with the goal of reducing minors' access to tobacco products," said Roxie Alcaraz, the institute's project coordinator.

The Behavior Health Institute was formed in 1988 by Dr. Klonoff, Executive Director Professor in the Psychology Department. It was created to mainly research minors' access to cigarettes.

The institute has just completed surveys of more than 400 stores in the San Bernardino and Riverside counties. These surveys were conducted to find out how minors illegally purchase tobacco. According to Alcaraz, she believed that this project is for the betterment of the community and to encourage stores to stop distributing tobacco products to minors.

In conducting the project, two methods were used to clarify exactly how minors receive their cigarettes. The two methods are as follows:

1. Having teenage volunteers attempt to purchase cigarettes from store clerks.
2. Having children ask strangers outside of the store to purchase cigarettes.

Both of these methods used an adult to accompany the child volunteer. The adult's job is then to protect the child volunteer and record everything that took place during the transaction.

A total of 28 minors participated in this PACT project. A total of 403 stores were tested in PACT cities and 145 were in non-PACT cities. PACT cities are those cities that agreed to pass a city resolution and cooperate with the PACT program in addressing policy issues related to tobacco control. The project goal at this point was to test and compare the differences between non-PACT cities versus PACT cities.

Results obtained from the survey from the PACT cities showed "A large percentage of these children smoke less than one pack of cigarettes a day and get their cigarettes from their friends. Approximately half of the children surveyed said they bought their own cigarettes. Due to the word of mouth phenomenon, information about which stores do and do not sell, cigarettes are likely to help the PACT project or have any questions, feel free to contact the Behavior Health Institute at (909) 880-5567, ask for Carlo Lewis or Roxie Alcaraz.

If you or your child (preferably teenager) are interested in helping the PACT project or have any questions, feel free to contact the Behavior Health Institute at (909) 880-5567, ask for Carlo Lewis or Roxie Alcaraz.

Japanese Studies Institute 2000

By Carol Nishida
Chronicle Staff Writer

Full-time faculty members who wish to integrate information about Japan into their undergraduate courses may participate in an program entitled: Incorporating Japanese Studies into the Undergraduate Curriculum. The institute, located at San Diego State University, trains faculty members without prior experience in Japanese studies.

During the four-week program, faculty are involved in intensive seminars, lectures, readings, and cultural activities focused on Japan and its civilization, history, economy, society, politics, education, language, and culture. Some of the activities include field trips that are "conducted by scholars, artists, journalists, business foundation executives, and government officials. Among the elements of Japanese culture are the tea ceremony and the traditional arts, such as architecture, music, theatre, gardens, painting, and literature. This year, the program will run June 5-30.

Fortunately, the Sasakawa Fellowships cover most of the cost for the program, including all housing costs, up to $500 for transportation, and an additional $675 for meals and other expenses. The fellowships are funded through an endowment of the Nippon Foundation, and the institute is one of the National Faculty Development Institutes sponsored by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (http://www.aascu.org). Faculty interested in participating this summer should contact Patricia Fesci, the Program Manager for AASCU. She can be reached by e-mail at fescip@aascu.org, phone: (202) 478-4668, or fax: (202) 296-5819.

Hurry! The application deadline is February 25.
Low Cost Community Counseling on Campus

By Carol Nishida
Chronicle Staff Writer

Is stress bringing you down? Or are you overwhelmed with classes and work? Well, the Psychological Counseling Center on campus, is providing personal counseling along with consultations and workshops.

Since a portion of the quarterly tuition funds the Counseling Center, it is your right to know what types of services the Center provides.

The Center is located right next to the Student Health Center on campus, and is providing personal counseling, along with consultations and workshops.

The staff consists of licensed psychologists, marriage/family/child therapists, and supervised graduate trainees, who all work with students who have questions on relationships, parenting skills, anxiety, and depression.

The Center believes, "anything that keeps a student from achieving educational potential or life success may be addressed."

Further, the director of Student Health and Psychological Counseling, Dr. John M. Hatton emphasizes, "If you are not getting the help you need or even your spare time, is keeping you from your overall well-being."

All the information discussed in counseling along with the student's identity, is held in strict confidence, and you may be relived to know that none of the information is released to university officials, faculty members, parents, or outside agencies without the consent of the student.

So, how much is it? It's not the usual $200 a poor college student has to rack up for a one hour session. In fact, one 50-minute session with a qualified therapist costs ten dollars. That's an amount most students spend on fast food per day. Wouldn't it be nice to know you're doing something good for your body at an affordable price?

Unfortunately, the Center's services are not for everyone. To be eligible, one must be a student who is currently enrolled at CSUSB. Couples may be seen as long as one member of the couple is a student.

The Center is currently taking both day and night appointments, and they can be scheduled by calling ext.5040 from campus. Or visit the Health Center in Room 136 during Office Hours: 8:00 AM - 5:00 PM, Monday through Friday.

For further information, contact CSUSB's psychology professor David Chavez, who is also the Center's interim director.

Food Services Responds to Mixed Review

Management of Food Services would like to give some clarification on the mixed reviews of [the Commons in the Coyote Chronicle] on February 11, 2000. Our service hours at the Commons are not exclusively for the Residence Hall students, as we have a large clientele of students living off campus, staff and faculty who participate in eating their meals in the Commons. We would also like to clarify what the 7 meal, 10 meal, and 12 meals are about. Fact, none of the meals cost $7.00 to any of the Residential Hall. Fact, the combination of the three meals offered, divided by $44.80 allotted per week is equal to the following combinations that are feasible on the 7 meal plan. #1 sample combination, three breakfast meals, four dinner meals and one lunch meal, equals 8 meals at the cost of $42.95 leaving $1.85 not used for that week making the total cost of each meal $5.36; #2 sample combination, six breakfast meals, and 3 dinner meals equals 9 meals at the cost of $44.10 leaving 70.70 not used for that week making the total cost of each meal $4.90. This shows there is quite as a difference between the $7.00 reported by Nima Patel, Chronicle Staff writer and the actual combinations in the sample combinations available.

Combinations of meals are also available with the same advantages, even greater on the 10 meal and 12 meal plans. Fact, the basic 7 meal plan, generally used by the freshmen, is the only meal plan which is used in the Commons exclusively, however they can make deposits in their account which will enable them to use the flex feature around the campus. We have established a "4" week cycle menu introducing new items, and making available many more selections from our salad bar, grill, deli, hot main entrees, cereal bar and fresh juices. We have introduced Caesar salad served with different toppings at least once a week, 100% Vegan Style Patties are now being served, new flavored selections, fresh Winchell Donuts available at least five days a week, and 4-5 fresh juices, including our new raspberry lemonade. These are only a few of our winter quarter changes with more upcoming.

We are here to provide the best quality food service with the lowest price possible, with our main responsibility to satisfy all student needs. Our management team is open minded and willing to work with students in their individual requests. Please feel free to contact any member of management at he Food Services office, extension 5916, with questions, further information or requests.

ASI President Speaks out

I can understand Donald Willis's frustration with what he perceives to be a bad buy on the part of the ASI with regards to the statue. Three years ago, I too was a reporter for the Coyote Chronicle and I too (privately) slammed them for their apparent lack of interest into what students really need. What was also particularly dismaying was how the ASI organization would end their year with over $100,000 of unspent student funds, funds that I believed, like Willis, could and should have been used towards resources and opportunities for students. I subsequently became involved with student government in order to better understand, to work on solutions, as opposed to only discovering and reporting on the problems. At the same time, it just so happened that I was one of the original reporters on the first round of the Coyote Family Bronze Statue story in 1997.

What I saw and heard from those interviews with the administrators involved persuaded me that the project was shelved prematurely, and that it was done in spite of the widespread support from the students. I became convinced, as a student of communication, that our students deserved something that would improve on the total lack of visual messages on our almost too pristine campus. Robin Larson, Chronicle Advisor, later presented to the ASI at my request, a detailed and expansive plan designed by Communication students that addressed this issue and presented solutions to this problem. Later, as VP for ASI and as my knowledge of the organization increased, I saw that this project, the Coyote Family Bronze, would be ideal for the students because the university had already done so much of the legwork. But I finally learned why ASI winds up with so much money at the end of the year—it takes TIME to ready a proposal and presentation for the Finance Board, and the next week, if approved, the Board of Director's. Come in and watch sometime, all meetings are open, student members are as tough to pitch an idea to as the professionals are in the corporate world. You will see that if a project can't stand up to the criticism, then it isn't done. But TIME runs out quickly, you see there are ten meetings per quarter, which works out to thirty meetings per year. That is a month's worth of meetings (if you count them) to decide things that will impact the quality of student life, enrich the student experience, develop traditions, fund concerts, events, and speakers, develop new programs, improve existing ones, and get the word out to the students how we are spending their money.

At the same time, ASI functions as the governing arm of the students, both on campus and at the state level. As this year's President, I, along with VP Steven Holguin and controller Louis Portillo, had to choose, individually and as a team, what areas to focus on with the time that we were given. We don't have a vote, our only power lies in showing the Board the benefits and costs of a proposal. After that, the Board, i.e. the students, owns whatever the decision is and it's consequences.

In this case, the original cost of the statue was $65,000, during the original proposal it was reported by the San Bernardino County Sun that a bronze much smaller than this one was valued at $120,000. The Coyote Bronze is met to decide things that will improve student services, expand parking services, increase that amount of scholarships, improve student retention rates, and increase student involvement.

One statue does not a Disneyland make and only people with vision, ideas, commitment and who take the TIME to make things happen will affect the rest. In the meantime, thanks to the students, and yes, thanks to the members of this year's ASI Finance and Board of Director's, the Coyotes are finally coming home.

Book:
“Ivanhoe” by Sir Walter Scott. He is my favorite author. I read it every year.

CD:
“The Writing’s on the Wall” Destiny’s Child newest album. The album is phat. I enjoy the songs about how men think women are naive and don’t know whatsup.

Movie:
“The Joy Luck Club” A good movie about family relationships. I can totally relate with some of the mother-daughter problems.

Giovanni Ribisi plays Seth the drop out college student who opened a very successful Casino in his home. But his father, who happens to be a judge, does not approve, obviously. From then on, he has the opportunity to become a stock broker fall into his lap. Seth excels at “conning” people into buying his stocks, but once he finds out the stocks he is selling do not exist, he begins to waver on his loyalties. The Feds try to force him to take down mystery look the entire operation. Somehow, Ben Affleck fans look somewhere else for your Affleck fix. I suggest if you were looking for a film “Boiler Room”, then 15 minutes tops. His character has no real affect in the film, with some depth and mystery look somewhere else, but if you’re looking for a way to waste two hours go right ahead and see “Boiler Room”.

Beck Before the Buzz
“One Foot in the Grave”

By Mike Crawford
Special to the Chronicle

My first meeting with Beck was the same as almost everyone else’s: that all-too-catchy, sing along Buzz Clip, “Loser.” And just before MTV had a chance to overplay it, I obtained a tape of “Mellow Gold.” One earful of Beck’s crazy octave-hopping, blues-infested voice and I was addicted, like drugs for the ears. Here, I thought, was an artist I could understand without even being able to always understand his warped sense of poetry. His whacked-out style of writing shines bright through on an earlier album, “One Foot in the Grave,” which was recorded from October 1993 to January 1994 on K Records, owned by my hero, Calvin Johnson. “One Foot” is, I dare say, twistedly country in some demented Beck way. And yet, it’s more than country; it’s a funky, folk/coffehouse/love/hate milkshake that got spilled and never cleaned up.

“One Foot” begins both doctile and unanticipatingly with the gentleness of “He’s a Mighty Good Leader,” creating images of an old woman sitting on her porch, strumming along and singing hymns to herself.

In “Get Lonesome,” Calvin, the Big “K” and lead singer for Beat Happening and Dub Narcotic, joins Beck, redefining the impact duets can have on a song. The lyrics paint a picture of insane loneliness, so much that one voice somehow becomes two.

“Burnt Orange Peel” has a party-in-your-head resonance, complete with the band and wasted fans. And every time I hear “See Water,” I get the overwhelming urge to be in an altered state of mind.

The next song, “Hollow Log,” shows exactly what I mean when I say Beck’s blood “runs folk.” Lines like, “Get yourself a pistol/ Get yourself a dog/ Stay up all night getting drunk/ Sleeping in a hollow log” make me wonder where that boy is from: I’m thinking the South.

One of my favorite songs on “One Foot” is “Forcefield,” which gives the strong sensation of an internal dilemma, like the whispers of doubt that can cloud the mind. Somehow, I think “Asshole” is Beck’s version of a love song. It has a sad, teary-eyed strum, but the lyrics are quick to dry up those tears of sentiment.

“Outcome” is undoubtedly my favorite song on the album. Although its style is along the same...
The Getty Presents a new exhibit “Departures”

“Departures” presents 11 artists at the Getty. The exhibit opens February 29 and runs through May 7. The eleven artists are all Los Angeles area artists who were commissioned to use a piece in the museum as a point of inspiration.

Renowned Yale University Art Historian Named Director

The Getty research Institute appointed Thomas Crow as Director of the Getty Research Institute. Mr. Crow is currently chair of the Yale University Department of the History of Art. He is also a professor of Art History and has held teaching positions at California Institute of the Arts, University of Chicago, Princeton University, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and University of Sussex, England. This position puts him in charge of one of the world’s largest research centers for art history.

Naturally, the country’s premiere leadership school offers only the finest classrooms.

The men's basketball team clinched first place in the CCAA race with their third consecutive winning weekend. The Coyotes defeated Dominguez Hills 75-59 on Friday, getting a big second half winning weekend. The Coyotes are right in the hunt, possibly getting the No. 1 ranking for the West Region this weekend versus U.C. Davis on Friday night, and Cal State University at Chico on Saturday night.

As the Cal State, San Bernardino Women's basketball team makes the stretch run towards the end of the season, the path seems to be reasonably better, but still came up on the short end of the stick, 63-51. Friday, the Coyotes got good contributions out of Janeka Webster, (putting in a team high, 14 at halftime. Point guard Jimmy Alapag led the way with 11 points in the contest. Webber and Dafina Dailey led all scorers with 12 points.

The Lady Coyotes apparently are not comfortable playing outside of Coussoulis Arena. The Coyotes are 1-14 overall away from home this season. The Coyotes were out-manned for the second consecutive weekend. Starting forward Renae Ross missed her third straight game due to illness. The Coyotes have two remaining games, both at home this weekend versus U.C. Davis on Friday night, and Cal State University at Chico on Saturday night.
Before someone dies? That is what senior writer Larry Wiggs of The Sporting News believe when he wrote his article concerning the Marty McSorley incident that occurred on Monday. In the waning moments of the Boston Bruins/Vancouver Canucks hockey game, McSorley, a defenseman for the Bruins, used his stick to slash Vancouver’s Donald Brashear from behind. Brashear dropped to the ice because of the strike and laid on the ice for sometime until medical personnel could remove him by stretcher. The incident happened with 2.7 seconds left in the third period and the Bruins trailing the Canucks, 5-2. The last 2.7 seconds were not played.

On Tuesday, the NHL suspended McSorley “indefinitely” pending a hearing on Wednesday. On Wednesday the NHL suspended McSorley for the rest of the regular season and, if the Bruins make the playoffs, the rest of the playoffs. Now, all of the NHL is reacting to the “McSorley Incident”, and the reaction is not a favorable one for the Bruin defensemen.

Many people agree that McSorley should have been suspended for the rest of the season if not longer. Now, with McSorley being suspended for the remainder of the season, it marks the longest suspension in NHL history. Previously the longest suspension ever handed down by the NHL was 21 games and that was given to Washington Capital’s defenseman Dale Hunter following his cross-check of Pierre Turgeon in the 1993 Stanley Cup playoffs.

McSorley’s slash is probably worse than that particular incident. If for no other reason that it was at the end of a meaningless regular season game that the Bruins had already lost (Hunter’s check was at the end of a game that eliminated the Capitals from the playoffs). In no way does that defend Hunter, but emotions were running a little bit higher at the end of that game than on the game that took place Monday evening.

McSorley is known as a bruise or an enforcer. These are players from a different time in NHL history. These are the players you got five goals from a season and 200 penalty minutes to counter that. These are the players you send in to rough the other team up. You don’t care if they get penalty minutes, these players are expendable. So, it comes as no surprise that McSorley is third all-time in penalty minutes. This is the player who for two teams, Edmonton and Los Angeles, was assigned to protect Wayne Gretzky. Anyone that messed with “The Great One” had to deal with McSorley.

McSorley comes from a time when fighting was the cool reason to watch hockey. When players did not wear helmets and black eyes were the norm. Sure, McSorley knows that he did wrong, but did he do something that was so uncommon some time ago? I am not saying that he should have hit Brashear upside the head with his stick. That part is wrong, but I believe McSorley was just defending one of his players with the only way he knew how, violence.

Earlier in the game Brashear fell on Bruins goalie Byron Dafoe in a way that knocked Dafoe out of the game. A short time prior to that, McSorley and Brashear had words. Is it possible that Brashear fell on Dafoe on purpose, to possibly injure him? Maybe, maybe not. I am not going to conject on that situation, but Brashear is known as a bruiser too!

McSorley is sorry for what he did, I believe. He was quoted saying, “I embarrassed my hockey team, I apologize to Donald Brashear and the fans who had to watch that… I guess I am trying to write checks my body can’t cash and I got carried away…I wanted to go over and fight him like I’d done with so many guys at so many different times. Why that happened, I don’t know. I’m still kind of in shock at what I did.”

Now there are reports that McSorley may face some kind of legal ramifications because of the incident. There are reports coming out of Vancouver that are saying the police are looking into charging McSorley with some form of assault. If that happens it is a complete travesty of justice.

“We have a situation here where it would appear, or that it’s been alleged, that there was a fairly vicious attack by one person on another,” said constable Anne Drennan, a spokeswoman for the Vancouver police. She said police have not yet interviewed Brashear or McSorley and she does not know how long the investigation will take. The findings will be sent to a prosecutor, who will decide whether to file charges.

Canucks general manager Brian Burke had this to say, “Leave this stuff on the ice, leave it to the National Hockey League. We don’t need the Vancouver police department involved in this.” I couldn’t agree more. What is next, the next time someone gets their ass kicked on the ice, are assault charges going to be drawn up? This is an ice incident, let the NHL deal with it.

As of February 22, the Canucks released the following update on Donald Brashear: Donald Brashear suffered a grade 3 concussion as a result of the incident that occurred near the end of last night’s game versus Boston. Donald was kept in a hospital overnight for observation. The standard period of complete physical inactivity for this type of injury is 14-21 days. Donald will continue to be medically evaluated on an on-going basis.

I believe that McSorley was in the wrong. He should not have his Brashear in the head with his stick. He should be suspended for his actions. I agree with the length that McSorley was suspended. However, I would hate for McSorley to be thought of in this light when he had such a colorful career and was an intricate part of many Stanley Cup championships. Marty, you messed up, but there are some people out there that still know the real you. I hope to see you skate again someday, and playing hard-nosed hockey.
San Jayne on vocals, a groovy onto a dirt road that stretches into lines as many Beck songs, it still the giant conclusion. In it, Calvin chants in hopeless happiness as Beck backs him up with a voice that's just as quirky.

And they don't get much quirker than one. Trust me on that one.

Get all the tax relief the law allows

The IRS wants you to know all the tax savings to look for this season.

You could save up to $500 off your federal taxes for each dependent child under 17, with the 1999
Child Tax Credit.

You could save paying taxes on future gains, with a Roth IRA.

You could save up to $1500 in taxes for each college student with a HOPE Credit. Or save up to $1000 per qualifying student with the Lifetime Learning Credit. And these are just two of the ways to help you meet the costs of higher education.

You might consider an Education IRA, or various options that can make the traditional IRAs more accessible to the needs of education, or a first home.

You'll need the specific qualifications, of course.
