Cal State San Bernardino gave meaning to a typically meaningless pre-season game against Cal State Long Beach on Friday night at the Pyramid.

Two things made this night especially meaningful for the ‘Yotes. First, they were playing former CSUSB coach Larry Reynolds who successfully coached them for the past five years to a 110-35 record. The second and most important is that the Division II Coyotes defeated the Division I 49ers in astounding fashion.

The ‘Yotes leading scorer Bobby Burries set the tone for the game from the moment his first shot tickled the bottom of the twine, and did not stop until his ‘Yotes had upended the 49ers 61-53.

In a battle between two very similar teams CSUSB’s talent and athleticism proved too detrimental.

Award winning photographer visits CSU San Bernardino

By Susie Medina

Mexican American photographer Jose Galvez visited CSUSB on Tuesday and Wednesday to discuss his work with students in an event sponsored by Phi Kappa and Intellectual Life.

Galvez won a Pulitzer Prize Community Service in 1984 for his work on a series of photographs of Mexican-American themes. He spoke in the Lower Commons to an audience of “about 50 students” says Deborah Buck of Academic Affairs.

The photographer spoke mostly on his works and the subject matter of them: Latino’s being represented positively in art. With 310 art majors at CSUSB and with 29.7% of CSUSB’s entire population being Hispanic, this event was informative for many.

The audience’s reasons for going ranged from interests in art, photography, Chicano studies, journalism and the success story of a man who has achieved much in his life.

Galvez began his career in photography when he was 22 years old. He was a staff photographer for 13 years with the Arizona Daily Star and 12 years with the Los Angeles Times. He also wrote his own book, Vatos, which combines his photographs with poems of Luis Albert Urrea.

He has also done covers for other books including Americanos: Latino Life in the United States, by various writers, including actor Edward James Olmos.

Butler to CHESS

By Jose Uzarraga
Staff Writer

ASI member Anne Martin Butler has been attending the California Higher Education Student Summit (CHESS) for the academic year of 2002-2003. She was elected by the California State Student Association (CSSA) Board of Directors.

Butler was elected as the chair of the CSSA Board of Directors
by the executive board, which is made up of eight members.

This board of directors meets each month to help plan the CHESS conference. With the help of the director of governmental relations for CSSA, Laura Cur, Butler helps to organize the CHESS conference.

"Basically my job is to tie up loose ends, be a contact person with the conference," she explained. "Last year we had 250 students there.
This year we are planning for approximately 300.

The CHESS conference is held in February over a weekend from Saturday through Monday.
"On Saturday and Sunday, we hold workshops on a number of different issues," explained Butler.

Some of them are on the California State budget,
"We all know that the budget is a big issue this year. That's kind of why we chose that as the theme," she said.

On Monday the students attending the conference hear from the state capital. Once they are there, each group of students is given a chance to meet with their state legislator. These students are given the chance to talk about the issues that most concern the students at CSUSB.

The conference opens with students from any major who would like to talk to their representative about issues that are important to them, such as die cost of tuition.

When asked about this Butler replied. "We advertise this conference to college students interested in actually going to the conference as well," she stated.

If students are interested, there is a lobby core.

"If students are interested, they are encouraged to attend the conference to clubs and organizations on campus.

The conference is available online at

Orders are being accepted for

Health Check-up November is National Diabetes Month

What is Diabetes?

Diabetes is a disease that affects nearly 17 million Americans or 6.2% of the U.S. population, and the numbers are growing. Approximately 650,000 people are diagnosed each year, and most Americans with diabetes are undiagnosed.

The metabolic disorder, involving the pancreas, is the 9° leading cause of death by disease among Americans. The pancreas controls the glucose level in the body through the production of insulin.

The costs for treatment is expected to climb all the way past the billion dollar mark by the end of the decade. Reasons for health care increases are rife with the complications that the disease can cause to the body. Complications are as follows: heart disease, stroke, kidney failure, blindness, and amputations.

Ethnic minorities that are at risk for developing Diabetes are people of African-American, Native-American, and Latino/Hispanic heritage.

What are the types of Diabetes?

There is Type 1, also referred to as a "insulin dependent" diabetes. In this type, insulin is injected into the body to keep the blood sugar and insulin levels balanced. These patients must follow a nutritional diet that keeps them from eating foods that are high in sugar, since their main goals is to lower the blood sugar.

Type 2 diabetes is the most common of the two and is more prevalent in adults over the age of 55. Type 2 of the disease can be treated by losing excess weight, following a diet, taking oral medications, or insulin if needed.

For more information on diabetes diagnosis, treatment, and complications please contact the American Diabetes Association at www.diabetes.org. Department of health, or your regular physician.

Bin Laden alive and planning more attacks

According to the head of Interpol, the world's international police force, Osama bin Laden is alive and is planning simultaneous attacks on the United States and other countries.

The head of Interpol, Secretary General Ronald Noble, stated, "I would say that the risk today is at least as important as before September 11 (2001)."

U.N. approves Iraq resolution on weapons inspections

The United Nations Security Council Friday approved a resolution that demands unfettered access for U.N. inspectors to search for weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. The resolution was passed unanimously after Secretary General Kofi Annan joined the assembled delegates in the Security Council chamber. Immediately following the vote, President Bush held a press conference in the White House Rose Garden stating that Iraq would face "the severest consequences" if it fails to comply with the resolution.

In Iraq, there are indications that Iraq might accept the resolution. However, widespread belief among the Iraqi leaders and people on the street is that war is inevitable - that the U.S. goal is not to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction, but to topple its leader and seize its oil.

Sniper update

According to Fairfax County prosecutor Robert Horan, 17-year-old John Lee Malvo's fingerprints were the only ones found on the scene of the other 20 shootings. A juvenile court judge ordered Malvo to be held in an adult detention facility pending the start of his trial for the Oct. 14 killing of Linda Franklin, 47, an FBI analyst who was gunned down outside a Home Depot in Falls Church. Horan has pledged to seek the death penalty for Malvo's suspected partner, John Allen Muhammad, will be tried for the killing of Dean Harold Meyers on Oct. 9. Horan said that he plans on blaming most of the shootings on Muhammad.

Additionally, Georgia became the latest state to link the two to a killing, but charges have yet to be filed. Other states to file charges against the pair are Alabama and Louisiana.

McDonald's Corp. to close restaurants, cut jobs

McDonald's Corp. said it will eliminate 400 to 600 jobs, with about half of those positions in the United States. The restaurant closings will be concentrated in 10 countries outside of the United States. The company said that it will not achieve its previously announced earnings target for 2003.

Here's a great investment tip: Cal Baptist.

A graduate degree is supposed to pay dividends for a lifetime but not all graduate degrees are created equal. At Cal Baptist, you can count on personalized attention from talented faculty, widely recognized graduate programs, and an ethical focus that distinguishes you from the crowd. So don't think of your Cal Baptist graduate degree as money out of pocket. It's more like money in the bank.

Faculty Spotlight

Dr. James Eller

By Janna Preston
Staff Writer

Dr. James Eller has been a lecturer at CSUSB since 1989. He teaches communication courses for the management program as well as organizational and behavioral study courses. He also teaches the campus writing and research courses, which are part of the general requirements at CSUSB.

Eller completed his undergraduate work with a double major in History and Economies at Chico State University. He then completed his graduate degree, in Philosophy and Theology. He also completed graduate degree in Public Administration with a concentration in Communication studies, and he taught for more than 10 years.

Two years ago he received the ASI faculty of the year award. Eller has been actively involved in many on campus programs. His most exciting work was with the Step program. This program trains students to succeed in academia by giving them the necessary tools they need to be prepared.

Eller's most important turning point in his life came when he was part of the Urban Training center in Chicago. It involved complete immersion into urban culture for a summer.

There were many difficulties and problems adjusting to the inner city, especially in the racial complexities of the programs in that they were involved in.

As a result of that program, he then dedicated himself to help people become successful, especially first generation college kids.

Eller also worked as Chaplin of an integrative housing project of Little Rock Arkansas and applied what he learned in Chicago.

From his experiences, Eller changed the direction of his career, which up into that point was geared towards academia for him. “"did not completely prepare him for academia, but prepared academia for him.”

Eller enjoys the writing courses and says they learn a lot from the 75 students he may have at one time, as they research and do their final works on non-fiction writing about important social issues. He focuses on getting students to do good research on critical social issues that impact our immediate community. He also centers on the student's life and that is the heart of his classes.

Outside of academia life, Eller's hobbies include hunting and fishing.

Comedy night cracks up CSUSB

By Keishawnda Green

Laughter, nothing but laughter came from the Viparage lounge on Thursday night, you should have been. November 7th Phi Beta Sigma organized a comedy show for all CSU State students and their guests from 8-10 p.m. The best part? It was free.

For the first consecutive year the Phi Beta Sigma event happened and every year it is a lot of fun. The fireplace lounge was rearranged to resemble a make-shift theater with a stage set up in front of rows of chairs.

The show was scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. by the comedians. All of which kept the crowd laughing until the curtain fell. Some said that they were comic geniuses.

DeWayne, a Los Angeles resident, was the first comedian to take the stage.

Health fair educates students

By Belinda Adame

Elaine Burkholder and Erin Harris, medical record techs for the CSUSB health center greeted students at the health fair that was held in the Events Center on Wednesday and Thursday. Bag with water and apples were handed out at the entrance of the fair.

This was the first time the health fair was held during fall quarter. Debbie Galvin, assistant director of the health center, is the person in charge of organizing the health fair.

She said, “This year we wanted to try holding the health fair on Monday night to sell CSU State students his story about how he killed his friends. It started out to be a normal night of drinking and visiting around with his friends from college. They were in Sanibel Island, Florida for the Spring Break weekend. It was the last night that they were in Florida so they decided to close to the place where Sterner and his friends were staying. They drank shots at Sterner's friend's house and then went bar hopping. On the way back to the house Sterner lost control of the car, and slammed into a tree. All five of the passengers were ejected from the car.

Three of his friends were killed and another one sustained only minor injuries from the accident. Sterner was critically injured, and was believed to not make it through the night. He did pull through and was charged with three counts of second degree murder. He had to spend two years in prison in Florida, and fifteen years of probation. When he was found guilty he had to be led to his friend's parents, and tell them how sorry he was about their deaths. Then he listened to them tell about how his friends grew up and their life stories.

Sorry for what he did, nothing could change what happened. He realizes that - DUI continued on page 16

Florida farmworkers visit CSUSB to urge students to boycott Taco Bell

By Yazzmin Alvarez and Matthew Taylor
Asst. Multi-Cultural Editor and Managing Editor

When going into fast-food restaurants you normally don't think about what happens behind the scenes. How would you feel about fast food once you found out about the treatment the workers endure in order to bring you that 99-cent cheeseburger or that 99 cent Chalupa.

Recently there was a group of speakers brought on campus to talk about issues such as these. Lucas Benitez, the head of the Coalition of Immokalee Workers, came to campus to speak about his current campaign against Taco Bell. Benitez, a migrant farm worker from Immokalee, Florida; has been going around the country trying to urge the public to not use companies such as Taco Bell because of the torture the workers are put through.

Currently, workers in Immokalee are being treated as if they were working in sweatshops, except their sweatshops are the fields of Florida. Benitez, along with his colleagues from the CIW have been working for justice for the Florida tomato pickers. The farm workers in Immokalee have been denied simple human rights. The simple answer may seem to just form a union and to use that as a body to get negotiations and change, but it's not that simple. The farm workers are not allowed to organize a union, they are not given pay for overtime work, pension, sick leave or other benefits such as health insurance or holidays and vacation time.

According to the United States Department of Labor, the average farm worker is paid $40-42 cents per 32 pound bucket, which averages out to $1.38 per hour. The rates of pay do not take into consideration that the farm workers may have a family. An average income for a household in Immokalee is about $5,000-$10,000 per year, with that said being low. Farm workers are forced to work overtime in order to pay for a year of going to a CSU school. The average farm worker has to pick two tons of tomatoes in order to make fifty dollars says Benitez. The farm workers feel that if Taco Bell would agree to pay one more penny per pound for the tomatoes it buys from the Six L Packing Co., it would double the picking rate paid to farm workers. "We need this," says Benitez. However, Taco Bell has refused to meet for negotiations with the worker representatives for over two years.

When asked why Taco Bell is being targeted there is a simple answer. According to the CIW, Taco Bell is a part of a bigger organization called YUM INC; which also includes chains such as Kentucky Fried Chicken, Pizza Hut, Long John Silver's, and A&W restaurants. These chains control a total of about 30,000 chains making them own the worlds largest restaurant system. According to YUM's annual report for 2001, of that system Taco Bell has generated nearly $5 billion in sales and the system as a whole has made sales totaling over $22 billion.

"It would still be less than one-quarter of one cent more for your Chalupa in order to get the pay increase" says CIW in their action alert. In an article in the Los Angeles Times, Taco Bell issued a statement saying that "This is a labor dispute between the workers and their employer the Six L Packing Co.," was the statement given by Jonathan Blum, senior vice president for public affairs of Taco Global Restaurants Inc. "Taco Bell's parent company continues to say, we don't intervene in any company's labor dispute." The CIW has done many things to get some acknowledgement from Taco Bell and the other companies that partake of the labor. The CIW has participated in many rallies; they marched to the Taco Bell head quarters as well as wrote a resolution in collaboration with the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor that explains why there should be a boycott of Taco Bell. The conditions of Immokalee are not new. It is documented that since 1980 the wage for each 32 pound bucket of tomatoes picked, the worker would be paid 40 cents. In fact there was a documentary made about Immokalee some forty years ago named The Harvest of Shame, made by Edward R. Murrow was once televised across America the night after Thanksgiving. Murrow's documentary exposed the living and working conditions of the migrant laborers.

How to become an American

If you have ever wondered exactly what the quickest route from an F-1 to a Green Card is, you should have been in attendance for the Immigration Workshop last week.

Guest speaker, Bernard P. Wolfsdorf may have appeared at first to be a formidable looking man, standing nearly 6’3” and having the robust build of a well-trained athlete. But he quickly won the room over as just the type of man you’d want to have on your side with his boyish-smile and “corny jokes”.

Wolfsdorf, who has lectured at several California campuses, including UCLA, USC, and Pepperdine, was called in by CSUSB to address the issue of immigration from a student’s perspective. He spoke for nearly two hours informing students of the quickest and most efficient ways to obtain a Green Card. Bottom line according to Wolfsdorf, be aware of deadlines, turn your paperwork in early, and above all don’t let VISA’s, or other important status related documents expire.

The path to a Green Card is not an easy one, but it can be done. Students, generally speaking go from an F-1, or student VISA, to an OPT F-1, the Optional Practical Training VISA. This allows students with a Bachelors or Masters degree to work in a field related to their area of study for up to one year, or an H-1, a VISA that allows an immigrant with company sponsorship to work in the U.S. for up to 3 years with the option to apply for another 3 years later, to the coveted Green Card.

According to Wolfsdorf, it has become increasingly hard for immigrants to enter our country and they are in for at least another couple of years of “doom and gloom”.

But students have an advocate in Wolfsdorf, Attorney at Law, and Certified Specialist- Immigration and Nationality Law. Simply call and state that you are calling from CSUSB and Wolfsdorf will be ready and willing to jump into your corner and take action.

“I have a special place in my heart for students, and I’m always willing to help,” says Wolfsdorf.

“9/11 changed the face of immigration,” says Wolfsdorf. “A friend of mine summed it up best. She said ‘In the old days we used to give people the benefit of the doubt, America’s arms were spread wide open in welcome to immigrants. Now we’re afraid of the terrorists, we’re afraid of immigration.’”

“We now have a zero tolerance policy. We shoot first and ask questions later,” says Wolfsdorf.

Currently there is a list of twenty-six countries from which a clean and easy immigration is nearly impossible. People who attempt to immigrate from these countries are facing security checks that can last from 90-120 days.

“We’re so busy trying to keep the ‘bad guys’ out that we’re else to get in. The name of the game since 9/11 has been security,” says Wolfsdorf.

Burma: Prostitution and poverty

By Audrey Burrows
Staff Writer

As International Education Week swept swiftly across our acknowledgment this last week, the Anthropology department attempted to educate Cal State students of the prostitution problem in Burma.

On Wednesday at 4 p.m. in the Social and Behavioral Sciences building, the Anthropology department played the movie "Sacrifice" a story of children, prostituting themselves in, Burma. The film was called by ski, to extend; or student VISA, to

It is the story of the social, cultural, and economic forces at work focusing on the trafficking of the Burmese girls into prostitution to Thailand. It is the story of the value and sale of human beings, and the efforts of teenage girls to survive a crisis born of economic and political repression.

The country of Burma now known as Myanmar has a closed-door policy governed by a military dictatorship forcing the country into poverty. Burma borders Thailand which makes prostitution trafficking all the easier.

During the Vietnam War, Thailand welcomed the U.S. military by allowing them to set up bases. This quickly became more made and started catering to the soldiers entertainment needs.

Thailand’s economy took a dreadful hit and the people needed fanatical support. The Thai government received this help from the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. They suggested that funds could be raised if Thailand became a tourist destination. The problem with this was that the one thing Thailand had left to offer were the brothels the military had left behind.

Thailand’s tourism was that the brothels allowed an immigrant with company the brothels military the left behind.

Tourists visit the brothels that offered young pretty virgin girls who come from Burma. Owners would cross over into Burma and offer the poverty stricken people work for their daughters. Jobs included: dishwashing, babysitting, house cleaning and so on. Parents would accept the opportunity with thoughts of getting out the extreme poverty that they lived in.

Instead of working and sending money home, the young girls acquired debt from new clothes, make-up, room and any other fee they "employers" could think of. Along side the debt came disease and humiliation. When a girl could finally go home because her debt was paid, she returned to the poverty she had left. No one dare ask where she had been because the rumors spread through the small villages like wild fire.

The younger children inquired and the girls were so humiliated they would say that they sold silk in the city.

Preserving your family’s past

The Norman E. Fieldhey Cent­ral Library in downtown San Ber­nardino will be holding a free event called "Hold on to the Memories." The program is to learn how to pre­serve your family’s "Future heir­looms." On Tuesday, November 12 from 6pm until 7:30 pm, guest speakers will include Brenda Butler Focht from the Riverside Municipal Museum who will speak on preserving graphs and videos.

The program will be sponsored by IELDRN (the Inland Empire Li­braries Distance Re­spone Network), a group of academic and public libraries in the re­gion.

The library is lo­cated on 6th St., and E St.

Do you like to try new foods but you don’t have the time to go out and look for some? Well, you may want to take a short drive to Loma Linda to try Andrews, an Ethiopian restaurant the only one of its kind in the San Bernardino area.

Ethiopian food is probably something that not too many people have had the pleasure of trying. How many people even know where to find a place that serves Ethiopian food? Loma Linda is known for the high number of vegetarians who live there, so this restaurant offers a veggie combination to please the locals.

As with all of their meals, the vegetarian combo is served with Ethiopian bread called injera. The menu describes injera as a spongy, flat, unleavened bread which is usually prepared from teff, wheat, or barley and millet. It looks like and has the texture of a spongy pancake with the taste of sourdough bread. The injera however, acts as a tortilla does in Mexican food platters and wraps around the food.

The meal is served on a piece of injera and it comes with a basket filled with it on the side as well. The vegetables that come with the meal included yellow split pea alicha, vegetable alicha, and lentil. Yellow split pea alicha is steamed split peas with onions and it is seasoned with an assortment of spices. The vegetable alicha is composed of cabbage, potatoes, carrots and onions. This is personally my favorite part of the meal, although the waitress informed me that most people like the split peas the best. There were split lentils in a red pepper sauce seasoned with assorted spices as well as covered green lentils. If you do not like spicy food, I suggest you stay away from the red lentils.

No silverware was brought to the table. Diners are supposed to eat with their hands.

The only way to avoid getting completely messy is to use the bread as a spoon. First, I tried everything separately, then I piled everything (except the spicy lentils) onto a piece of injera and folded it to form an Ethiopian vegetarian taco.

If you are not a vegetable eater, they offer all different meals with meat as well. The portions are big enough so that two people can share one plate but not so big that one could not finish one themselves.

So, if you are craving something other than one of those fast food burgers we’re all used to, an Ethiopian restaurant might be what you’re looking for.

Andrews is located at 25227 Redlands Blvd. in Loma Linda.

Lately, the word battle has been associated with war, and negativity between the U.S. and well, everyone else. Well what about the words hip-hop battle? On November 6, Phi Beta Sigma fraternity hosted the Lyricist Lounge. The event started off with two DJ’s taking turns spinning different types of hip-hop songs on their turntables. It was almost like a brief hip-hop history lesson. One minute you’d hear Busta Rhymes, the next would be DMX, then Trick Daddy. Not a bad love for the kids” Trick Daddy, but “Okay —what's up — shut up”, Trick Daddy.

Later on, the host “Mike!” from Phi Beta Sigma invited anyone with the kind of talent to come to the mic and show off. For a while everyone just kept looking around at each other, until “Mikel” got up and sang a number for the group. Next up was an MC named Jamal, who got the crowd going by having the more traditional rhymes. It was almost like “Chuck” quite a bit. However, she also created a new sound with “In the Dark.” This is an eerie piece that differs from the others with its unique and shadowy music and lyrics that speak of desire and lust. Yet it’s still the more simple song on Let It Rain that I like the most. “Goodbye” is a song composed of melancholy lyrics that expresses the foretelling of a relationship that is ending and the painful words that end everything “Goodbye.” By the time I pulled myself out of a depression from “Goodbye,” I listened to “Let It Rain,” and I enjoy the song that puts one’s weaknesses into the hands of another and offers others to do the same, a kind of “lean on me and I’ll lean on you” song that gives hope of giving yourself, your weak points and all, to someone else.

Let It Rain is an excellent album that gives Chapman fans one more reason to love this female Bob Dylan. It also offers new fans a taste of what real, touch-your-soul music is all about.

The Phi Beta Sigma event reminded us that there will always be hip-hop, and a free forum for which we can express ourselves. It is up to us to use it at will.

Finally, music with some meaning. Let It Rain, Tracy Chapman’s latest album offers her listeners a refreshing break from the MTV infused world we live in. Her folk-rock sound and signature wistful vocals give life to the album’s 12 tracks, including her first single from Let It Rain, “You’re the One.” The single will please those that are already fans of Chapman’s, as it has a similar sound to her previous albums. Other songs on the album, such as “Let It Rain,” “Happy,” and “Another Sun” also have the sound fans first fell in love with from albums like Tracy Chapman and Telling Stories. However, she also creates a new sound with “In the Dark.” This is an eerie piece that differs from the others with its unique and shadowy music and lyrics that speak of desire and lust. An event of this caliber was a needed change at CSUSB. There was a different type of vibe in the room. It was a kind of vibe that puts all your baggage at the door, or “come in and kick it” kind of a vibe. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, there was no fusing or fighting. There was just a genuine love of hip-hop throughout the crowd. Everyone had bounced, and everyone clapped. Even though some of the challengers got completely and utterly doped on the mic, there was nothing but love in the end.

If you were at the show and you are hungry for more hip-hop, the original Lyricist Lounge gatherings, and “Chuck” the late comer who air up every other opponent of his. The two MC’s went back and forth until it simmered down to an acceptable level. The MCMH battle never officially ended, but the crowd did seem to like “Chuck” quite a bit.

First Wednesdays Performance
By the Boxtales Theatre Company

By Samantha Irving
Special to the Chronicle

On Wednesday, November 6, the Boxtales Theatre Company, an organization that performs for various audiences, mainly children, using the aid of storytelling and masks, presented two different sets of cultural stories. One was "Waters of the Earth: Mutilcultural Tales of the Sea." It included the skits: Sealskin Soulskin, (tales from Inuit, Icelandic, Siberian and Celtic traditions); Raven and the Man who Sits on the Tide, (Northwest Native tradition); Sinbad and the Valley of the Diamonds (from One Thousand Arabian Nights); And Dionysus and the Pirate Ship (Greek Myth).

Their second set was a bilingual set with Mexican, Mayan, and Aztec stories called Mitos y Cuentos. Among the second set of skits was story of the Hero Twins (from Popol Vuh). Food Mountain (reasons for the rain to bring food), and Tio Conejo (a story about how rabbits got their ears). According to the website, The Boxtales Theatre company performances are a dream for any child. Theatre goers are urged to support programs such as this. Bury this film: Some white guys in a karate outfit

By Ivan Fernandez and Marcos Landin

A news reporter investigates a mysterious video tape, which kills its viewers within seven days of watching it, after the death of her niece who watched the tape.

Ivan: We liked this movie so much, we saw it twice...in the same day. We haven't done that since "Spider-Man" came out in theaters. Most of "The Ring" plays out as a mystery. We follow Naomi Watts, as Rachel, a news reporter uncovering the mystery of where the video tape came from and what it all means. Along the way, there are plenty of "What the *?" moments and some great scares.

Marcos: After a little research, I realized that Gore Verbinski has also directed "Mouse Hunt" and "The Mexican." Now don't let this stop you from watching "The Ring." He has definitely stepped up the directing food chain. I'm actually never scared when watching movies, but this one actually scared me a few times, which is something you don't expect from a PG-13 rated movie.

Ivan: "The Ring" is also not very gory or bloody. Which is out of the ordinary for a horror film. It's also out of the ordinary for a modern horror film to kick ass. And yet, here we have "The Ring." "The Ring" is also a remake of a Japanese film titled "Ringu," which was based on a novel of the same name. There was also a sequel and prequel made. Dreamworks plans on bringing "Ringus" stateside next year on DVD. I hope they bring the rest of the films and remake too.

Marcos: I would have to agree with you, my heterosexual life mate. Gore Verbinski definitely works the suspense factor instead of the gore factor, which is a cheap way to make a horror film. This was a smart, scary, suspenseful flick, not just a slasher movie. I too will be waiting for the DVD's.

The Ring: Bruce Lee

MOVIE NEWS
Ivan: Looks like Pierce Brosnan loves the titles because he's recently announced that he will be on board for another Bond film.

Marcos: My name is Landin, Marcos Landin...oh yeah, that's cool.

Ivan: Actor Sam Neill had this to say about Jurassic Park IV: "Yeah, Steven Spielberg and his people are quite busy prepping another one. There is a chance you'll see me in it: I'm as surprised as anyone, because I didn't think there was any way they could get Alan Grant involved again. But they came up with a clever idea. Steven just blew me away with the story...something frightening is happening concerning those dinosaurs that doesn't necessarily bode well for us humans. Scientists never seem to learn."

Marcos: WATCH OUT FOR THAT F-REX SAM NEILL!!!

The String Cheese Incident

A recap from the road

By Matthew Schoenmann
Special to the Chronicle

Drumming in Berkley

In the shadow of the Staples Center, the String Cheese Incident (SCI) meshed Halloween with Los Angeles' beloved Academy Awards. With the String Cheese Incident (SCI) traveling circus that calls itself "Friends of Cheese" brought their traveling carnival to the Shrine Auditorium on Halloween. The carnival freaks are going to move with the anticipation of the always high energy "Rivertrance." The shortened version of "Rivertrance" made way for SCI's version of the bluesgrass number "Can't Stop Now." Prior to the encore Nershi congratulated a pair of fans who tied the knot before the show. The "Boogie on Reggae Woman" that followed though, may not have been the showstopper the band was hoping it would be. Kang did his best to do the Stevie Wonder tune justice, but SCI's version simply didn't have the impact of others that I have witnessed and Kang appeared to be forcing the vocals.

But the uninspired Wonder cover did not carry over to SCI's night. Saturday's show featured SCI ripping into covers of Little Feat's "Skin it Back," Johnny Cash's "Ring of Fire" and Queen's "We are the Champions." The high point of the evening occurred when Nershi broke into the crowd favorite "Texas" to close the first set. "Texas" tells a story of a man who grew up to be a well-respected violinist and took "a cabin full of mushrooms and a cooler full of beer." The carnival freaks are going to have to find something else to do until around New Years when SCI travels to San Francisco for four nights beginning on Dec. 28. Until then the circus is closed.

The first performance was by bassist and Kyle Hollingsworth (Keys) as Stevie Ray Vaughn and Kurt Cobain respectively. Contrary to the common criticism of improtation bands, SCI's Nirvana cover was extremely melodic. Hollingsworth's inspired Cobain imitation left the fans calling for some stratocaster destruction, but that was left up to mandolin player Michael Kang. Following a high energy "Fire" into "Voodoo Chile" Kang proceeded to destroy his Fender Strat and emulate the classic moment when Jimi Hendrix torched his guitar.

To close set two Michael Travis (drums) stepped out from behind his kit and performed a deep on impression of Freddie Mercury. After encore Rod Roddy (The Pride of Right) announced Travis as the rock star "who did so much loving," the band broke into a rousing version of Queen's "We are the Champions.

Set three was vintage Cheese with the band taking no breaks between songs. The band segued from "Roller" into "Don't Say," "Hotel Window," "White Freightliner Blues" and "Howard" before the crowd erupted as the band brought the jam full circle back to "Rollover." After an encore of "Freedom Jazz Dance" and "Search" the traveling circus that calls themselves "Friends of Cheese" was off to Sin City for the final two shows of the tour.

The first night in Las Vegas could be considered the Kyle Hollingsworth night. The first set was fairly tame, but featured a cover of the Allman Brothers' Mountain Jam, which was a first for SCI. Hollingsworth broke into a techno jam that had half of the crowd dancing and the other half completely zoned out so the band could be considered the Kyle Hollingsworth night. Curious Coyote:

PUSHING FAST FORWARD WITH THE PRESIDENT

Last week, the U.N. decided to pass the Iraq resolution on weapons inspections, after having some alterations to the language. These changes were recognized as a way of preventing the U.S. from taking military action in haste.

President Bush gave his statement on the U.N.'s decision and said that Saddam's cooperation would be expected and unconditional, or else he will face the severest consequences.

That's great Bush, but I have a confession to make. I caught a documentary on your campaign trail affectionately titled "Journeys with George" on HBO last night, and I have to say you come across as very likable, comy, but almost in a way that makes it appear that you might be harming enough to do it. How I wish you could only be that pleasant and convincing, mindlessly mangling Iraqi culture and believing in the press. No.

We wish he'd still be considered hard-line Bush. Then the public has a chance to vote him out next year. If Saddam doesn't live up to expectations to let inspectors inspect everything, we're going to make it happen. Informed citizens know Saddam he is the same Saddam America enabled, supplying him with helicopters and surveillance equipment, for many years before turning on him. We also know him to be the brutal dictator. He has committed many atrocious acts while in power. Like gassing thousands of the opposing Kurdish people who lived in Iraq. So is America going to be happy if Saddam does let inspectors inspect everything? Say that we inspect everywhere and we destroy all weapons of Saddam having a weapon of mass destruction, that would satisfy the Iraq war.

I don't think so, and I am not the only one. "Nevertheless, Saddam's unreadable threat to the West that we are accelerating - that the U.S. goal is not to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction, but to topple its leader and seize its oil," as reported by CNN last week. I think it will be at least third on the warmongers wish list to get better oil relations.

There have already been reports of negotiations to divvy oil in post-Saddam Iraq. You better believe the oilmen are going to benefit by Saddam being replaced. What do we intend to do for the people of the country, if we destroy their towns?

Historians have said that the German people, after WWII were brainwashed and impover­ished. Hitler, to further his goals, worked on the people's sense of pride that they had lost after the war and indoctrinated them as followers. We do not want to give people more reason to support the military action.

We Americans, more specifically Southern Californians, have the opportunity, to either continue the tradition that our own respective backgrounds would have, or we have the opportunity to redefine our own cultural sense of ourselves. Many see our culture as being dominated by commercialism and saturated in propaganda from the corporate control of the mass media. And I think there is something to be said about that belief. However, in our diverse environment we are allowed to be around other free individuals who have their own traditions and culture different from our own, and for me that is interesting part to being a American, especially an American living in South­ern California.

This country in its inception is built on the near elimination of the Native American culture. We will never get to understand the wisdom that an extinct race inculcated over thousands of years. The conquerors wrote the history because they won, but what is everyone losing? Every culture is an endangered species; you kill them off, and then lose all knowledge of what they were.

Iraq has a culture that is immense history behind it. These people may not have the same background as us, but they have what they live with. It would be error to believe Iraqis all stand behind Saddam and would not like to see him lose his power, or that they would jump at the chance of living in America. We can't go back to Iraq, or Saddam?

If you go to war with Iraq, I think it would be nice to know a little about the people we would be fighting. The media doesn't seem to do a very good job informing us about anything but tragedy.

Our country has rash Nick, and we want to go even faster. It has been said that we have an accelerated perception of time, and we have very small attention spans. This is the place where people die of heart disease often, and anxiety disorders are on the rise. Let's not let our exaggerated sense of time destroy other people's lives in the sake of efficiency, because it would, and this is directed to the righteous, impatient, and short-attentioned minority to find any sense of pride or dignity in such an action. Hey Texas sissy, this last sentence is about when George W. Bush's favorite brother bet­ting sandwich, thought your, and I don't even if you are angry. You can take him to the White House, because it is a free pass in what just might be one more great mistake made by bad leadership, or you can be a great man that an informed citizen can respect.

Have you ever wondered what you might do if you could be, say, invisible? Would you hang out at your Prof. of office for a peek behind a coming final? Maybe you'd invite yourself along on your ex-boyfriend's Friday night date. Or maybe you'd work into your local bank and help yourself to a few Ben Frankins. That's what one Iranian man did. Shelling out some five million rival's (roughly 6 Benas, a Jackson and one Abe), to a Tehran soccer, he was sure he'd been di­vided with the supernatural power of invisibility. Trouble was, no one else saw through him. Iran's Jamejam newspaper reports the man, whose name was not disclosed, strolled into a Jackson and one Abe), to a Tehran bank and began sending banknotes from a gathering of cus­tomers.

Unaware they were dealing with an invisible man, the customers tackled him. Imagine his surprise when police also took a look at his mug. What you ask, was he thinking? App­arently the would-be robber felt he'd been victimized. Appearing in court (yes, they too saw him), he made a remarkable plea.

"I had recently been to see a Muslim holy man, because I was looking for a way to get rich," he told the judge. "I made a mistake. I understand now what a big trick was played on me." At last report, police were on the lookout for the suspect. Trouble is, he might be un­detectable. Maybe the police ought to look in the back of a hearse. Seems Bra­zilian police near the border town of Font do Iguacu, were surprised to find more than dead weight in the back of a hearse. Tucked away safely under the coffin, the hearse's trap door had 158 pounds of marijuan­a.

"That's a significant amount of weed, but what makes it unusu­al is, of course, the coffin, which also had traces of the drug," speaks Casemiro da Silva told Reuters in an on line report.

The report didn't say whether or not the trap door contained a stash of Doritos and Twinkies. Or maybe, they were just invisible.

Men’s soccer looking forward

By Tony Evans
Staff Writer

The Men’s soccer team is in a period of rebuilding and Coach Christian Johnson is hoping that period will end this year.

Since his arrival here two years ago, Coach Johnson has rebuilt the program from a one win team, starting with a series recruiting seniors and men. The results are beginning to pay-off, but success takes time.

“We knew our depth was going to affect us this year, but we are still slightly disappointed with how the year went,” said Johnson by phone from the regional tournament.

“There were a lot of x-factors that we couldn’t have been prepared for with injuries and sidelined players, but our team was young. We have a strong group of red-shirts and some promising new recruits.”

The men’s team finished this year at .500 with a 9-9-1 overall record but were 5-1-1 in league play, and finished 2nd in the south division. This being last year mark of 9-10 overall and a 3rd place finish in divisional play.

Under Johnson the soccer team has improved every year and the young players on this team ensure future maturing. Losing only three players from last season and bringing up promising red-shirts and new recruits the future looks strong for Coyote soccer.

Johnson acknowledged the effort of his three seniors Victor Polanco, Steven Morales, and Brandon DeVaughn, saying they provided some much-needed maturity this year.

The key players for the Coyotes this year were; freshman Erin Salazar, junior Johnny Richardson, sophomore Barry Stella, sophomore Christian Johnson, and sophomore Steven Stevenson.

Johnson says of Salazar, “He was our most consistent player, Stevenson was a very solid player and Richardson, Steele and Kova were solid and also very consistent.”

Looking ahead to next year Johnson hopes to build the base of the team and provide more depth for his current players. “We are looking for leadership through maturity. That maturity will come from experience through our winter and spring programs,” said Coach Johnson.

Johnson hopes to change the makeup of the team slightly through the addition of strong bench players. This raises the level at which his starters must perform if they hope to keep their starting positions.

THE FUTURE: Now that Coyote soccer is over the men’s team has the off-season to recuit and fine tune any gray areas in their game.

However, the only poll that counts with the NCAA is the Pacific Region poll administered by an NCAA championships committee. In that one, the Coyotes ranked No. 2 behind Western Washington University (20-2), based on a handful of factors including strength of schedule, record versus common opponents, win-loss record and rared against regional opponents.

The next poll will be out on Nov. 13. The decision on who will be ranked No. 1 and possibly host the Pacific Regional will be made on Nov. 17. The regional tournament is set for Nov. 20-23.

The 8:00 league is packed with talent but led by team Kine with a perfect record of 3-0. However, the Yellow Monkeys and AND I Allstars are close behind with records of 3-1.

Football

The standings in the NFC are updated as of 11/04/02 due to heavy rain in the week of Nov. 8. Currently in the AFC, TKE holds the number one spot at 3-0. Delta Sigma Chi will look to get on the winning track despite being winless. Kine (6-2-1) will look to get on the winning track too when play resumes and Sig Ep will try to dethrone the defending champions Sigma Nu. Tokay Hall is no longer in the league.

Soliz, a 6-foot junior middle blocker from San Bernar-dino, is the California Collegiate Athletic Association/Molten Player of the Week in women’s volleyball, the CCAA announced Tuesday.

Soliz, a 2000 graduate of Cajon High School, earned the honor for her outstanding performance in Coyotes’ victories over UC San Diego, ranked No. 8 in the nation and No. 4 in the Pacific Re-gion, and Grand Canyon University this past weekend.

In leading CSUSB to a 3-0 win over UCSD to regain sole possession of first place in the CCAA, Soliz stepped up with 11 kills on 16 attacks with no errors (.688 hitting) and produced five blocks. Soliz then posted 10 kills on 16 at-acks with three errors (.438) and added three digs and four blocks, one of them a solo. For the two matches, she averaged 3.5 kills on .563 hitting (21-3-32) and 1.5 blocks per game.

Against the Tritons, Soliz was a factor in the Coyotes 30-27 win in game one. Her kills late in the third game, 30-26.

In the Coyotes 30-15, 30-27, 30-26 win over Grand Canyon, Soliz had four kills and a solo block in game three as the Coyotes moved out to a 22-16 advantage en route to the sweep.

For the season, Soliz ranks fourth on the team in kills (172 - 1.91 per game), and second in total blocks with 85 (0.94 per game). She has seven service aces and 49 digs.

Last season, Soliz led the team in total blocks with 113 and was 19th in the nation in hitting percentage at .387. earning All-CCAA and All-Pacific Region honors.

She is a liberal studies major with plans to teach at the high school level and coach volleyball after graduation. She has earned the CCAA Academic Award for hav­ing a grade point average of 3.4 or better and was a Verizon Academic All-District 8 second team selection in 2001.
Coyotes take winning act on the road

Two games are remaining in the CCAA conference and the ‘Yotes are looking to win both of them especially the match against Cal State LA, who is responsible for one of their two losses in 2002.

By Kermit Boyd

Remember when you were younger and your big brother or sister would constantly pound and beat down your frail and fragile body only to leave you crying and nursing your wounds.

Cal State University, San Bernar- dino women’s volleyball team has ten little sisters in the Califor- nia Collegiate Athletic Association. CSUSB traveled on the road to pulverize two of ten CCAA volleyball teams this past week, which improved their overall record to 27-2.

Cal Poly Pomona received the first trouncing from the Coyotes’ who were looking to flex some much needed muscle with two games left in the CCAA.

The Broncos witnessed the Lady ‘Yotes cruise to a 3-1 victory and All-American outside hitter Kim Ford was a helping hand, recording 24 kills, 14 digs, and three blocks.

Ford partake in crime, and All-American chum, middle blocker Kim Morehunfola registered 14 kills, six digs, and five blocks.

Pomona was beseeched with its tenth straight loss on the sixth of November giving them an overall record of 16-11. Despite falling victim to the Coyote attack, the Broncos put up a fight in game three winning 30-25. However, the Coyotes re-grouped, mustered up some mo- mentum and took game four to win the match.

The Coyotes were able to ef- fectively return every serve and volley posting 89 kills to a mock 62 for the Broncos.

Freshman setter Cristen Trent was able to assist in the Coyote cause setting up her teammate 44 times, collecting nine kills and digging out 10 balls which were ac- companied by two blocks.

Junior outside hitters Bridget Harris and April Nicolson each had 15 digs for the match high. Libero Erika Williams added 15 digs in the Coyote victory.

After the Coyotes pounded the Broncos in their gym they traveled to the Bay Area on Friday November 8th to face Sonoma State.

CSUSB sashayed past the Seawolves 3-0 to stretch its win streak to five games in front of 262 fans with just two games remaining in the CCAA.

More importantly the victory also keeps the ‘Yotes one game ahead of UC San Diego.

Basketball: Oliver emerged victorious against mentor Reynolds

CSULB’s coach Larry Reynolds paid tribute the Coyote’s understanding of the system he set up by saying, “They know what they are doing a little better than we know what we’re doing right now. We need to get better at what we’re doing. Had we played a team that’s not as well-vered in what we do, we probably could have put on a little better of a show.”

Bobby Burries had 15 points for the ‘Yotes, and Jonathan Levy added 14 to lead the team to vic- tory.

49ers high scorer forward Kevin Roberts led all scorers with 20 points and 8 rebounds.

With seconds left the howling of the ‘Yotes fans signified that the Coyotes had just achieved what many thought was the impossible.

They went in front of a crowded of 2,303 against a Division I team, on the road, and proved they are worthy of respect.

Burries said of the experience, "I’m not concerned with Division I or Division II. There are a lot of Division II teams better than a lot of Division I teams, I’m not saying we are better than Long Beach, but tonight we were.”
