CSU DIRECTIONS 2000
COMMITTEE SEEKS INPUT

Members of the campus community who wish to explore imaginative, creative ideas for the future of education will have that opportunity when the CSU Committee on the Future visits the San Bernardino campus Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 18-19.

Dr. August Coppola, a member of the CSU Board of Trustees, will head the seven-member Directions 2000 Committee in a series of group discussions with Cal State students, faculty and administrators. A schedule of the two days of meetings is printed on Page 3 of the Bulletin.

The first meeting will be with the campus complement committee which includes President John M. Pfau; Dr. Judith Rymer, chair of the Faculty Senate; Pauline Barbour, Associated Students president; Lawrence Daniels, Alumni Assn. president; Dr. Ralph Petrucci, dean of academic planning; Dr. James D. Thomas, dean of academic administration; and Dr. Richard Ackley, associate dean of academic administration. The team next will visit with the school deans.

The first open forum on the future is set for 2:30 to 5 p.m., Monday, Jan. 18 in the Student Union Multipurpose Room. A wine and cheese reception follows in the Lower Commons.

A meeting with department chairs and faculty members launches the Tuesday morning, Jan. 19, schedule. From 10:30 a.m. to noon the visitors will be available in the Student Union meeting rooms to speak with campus members who wish to share ideas. The committee will review its findings and tour the campus before concluding its visit.

The systemwide committee, formed by the Board of Trustees last June, is charged with seeking creative ideas to allow educational values to survive. The committee is spending two days on each of the 19 campuses. Dr. Carl Wagoner, professor of sociology, is a member of the Directions 2000 committee but will not be on the team here.

The visitation team, in addition to Dr. Coppola, will include Dr. Jacob Frankel, president of Cal State, Bakersfield; Dr. Claudia Hampton, trustee; Dr. Gary Shaw, professor, CSC, Stanislaus; Dr. Kibbey Horne, Chancellor's Office; Jackie Faris-Rees, student at CSU, Chico; and Dr. Kathleen Kies, staff from the Chancellor's Office.

Three alumnae and one former student recently passed the CPA exam on the first try, a feat accomplished by only about 200 of the 8,000 who took the test. They are Dorcy Bouillon, Debbie Crowley and Jan Mordy, who graduated last June with bachelor's degrees in administration, and Seren Schaich, who has taken courses here.

Ms. Bouillon, who is married to John Scribner (Administration), was a registered nurse before turning her interests to business. She graduated with honors and is employed by Soren, Ahern and Christenson in Redlands.

Ms. Mordy graduated with high honors and is employed by the San Bernardino firm of Brannfors, White and Rogers. She had been away from college ten years, doing volunteer work, before deciding to return to seek a degree.

Ms. Crowley, employed by Eadle and Payne in San Bernardino, was a math major at Crafton Hills College before coming to Cal State to major in business administration and to graduate with high honors.

A former secondary teacher, Ms. Schaich received her bachelor's degree in English from Salem College in West Virginia. She is currently employed by Vavrinek, Trine and Day in Ontario.

Rebecca Weldon, a junior majoring in art, will begin her appointment as editor-in-chief of The Pawprint with its first winter quarter edition Wednesday. She replaces Michael Heister, acting editor-in-chief during fall quarter.

Miss Weldon wrote for her high school paper in Virginia, helped start a newspaper in Loudoun County, Va., and was regional editor and classified advertising manager for The California Horseman's News, a statewide tabloid.

As Pawprint editor, Miss Weldon plans to encourage input from other student writers, limit her writing contributions and increase the paper's advertising revenue. Although the paper will continue its four-page weekly publication for the present, she intends to investigate the possibility of going to an eight-pager printed every other week.
