COLLEGE ADDS SPECIAL M.A.
IN NATIONAL SECURITY STUDIES

The college will initiate a new special master of arts degree program in national security studies in September. The first program of its kind in the CSU system, it is geared toward professionals and persons wishing to enter professional positions in the military, intelligence, and defense-support industries.

An interdisciplinary program within the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, it is designed to provide an understanding of the principles of strategic planning, arms control and national defense in today's international environment. The degree requires 45 units, or nine courses, meeting evenings at the college and, if mutually agreed, at local military facilities.

Dr. Richard Ackley is director of the new program. A retired naval officer, Dr. Ackley commanded a nuclear submarine division and was naval attache in Moscow. He has taught courses in the USC doctoral program in strategic studies for 10 years and is a consultant to the U.S. government and to Science Applications, Inc. Dr. Ackley holds a Ph.D. in international relations from USC.

TELEPHONE CABLE STRUNG BETWEEN BUILDINGS

The wooden, temporary planking constructed between the Administration and Visual Arts Buildings Wednesday protects a telephone cable needed to accommodate additional phones in the Visual Arts Building this summer. A portion of the buried cable between the two buildings has deteriorated. The additional phone service was necessitated by the relocation of certain Student Services offices into the Visual Arts Building. The former building is being re-roofed this summer. A special beveled section, to be painted blue, will be provided for wheel chairs and electric carts.
Upward Bound Receives Grant

The U.S. Department of Education has granted Upward Bound $187,165 for continuation of its programs here through May 31, 1984. The grant supports the first year of a 36-month project. The Department of Education will consider continued funding next May.

Upward Bound, which is beginning its 10th year at the college, has been directed here by John Chesney since 1977. The program is designed to identify and assist low-income high school students who demonstrate a potential to succeed in college. A major component of the program is to motivate the students to continue their education by providing counseling, tutoring and special workshops. During the school year, students meet on weekends for a variety of educational and recreational experiences. In the summer, they live in Serrano Village and attend courses specially designed to meet their needs.

Judy Shearer Appointed Coordinator of ACLP

The program has drawn students from Japan, Indonesia, Taiwan, Mexico, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Korea, Jordan and Honduras.
