LORALEE MAC PIKE NAMED TO GRADUATE DEAN POST

Dr. Loralee MacPike, associate professor of English, will be the associate dean for graduate programs beginning Sept. 1, President Anthony H. Evans announced today. She succeeds Dr. Lee Kalbus, who is returning to the chemistry classroom, in the 12-month, half-time position.

Dr. MacPike earlier had been selected to participate in the CSU Administrative Fellows Program for 1983-84. As she has been assigned to her home campus, she will be able to serve half-time in the internship. She will be assigned to Vice President Gerald Scherba and will do resource allocation with Dr. James D. Thomas and academic personnel with Dr. J. C. Robinson.

Responsibilities of the associate dean for graduate programs include recruitment of students, curricular review, development of programs, supervision of the M.A. with a special major, graduate policies, advisement of unclassified post-baccalaureate students and other administrative tasks associated with the graduate program. She will work under the direction of the new associate vice president for academic programs, Dr. Jerrold E. Pritchard.

Dr. MacPike also will continue her leadership in the Adult College Opportunity Program, a re-entry program for mature students, which she originated three years ago. She received a CSU grant for a seminar series to assist the returning students.

Dr. MacPike joined the Cal State faculty as a lecturer in English in 1978 after teaching three years at the University of Hawaii. She received a permanent appointment as associate professor in 1981. She earned her B.A. in Russian from Bryn Mawr, her M.A. in English from Cal State, Hayward and her Ph.D. in English from UCLA. She did doctoral research in the Soviet Union in 1974-75 under a fellowship from the American Association of University Women.
