Civic Education Project Receives $108,135 Grant

The Civic Education Enhancement Project (CEEP), which will enhance the teaching of law-related education throughout the CSU system, has received $108,135 for its first year from the U.S. Department of Education under the Fund for Improvement of Post Secondary Education.

Developed by Dr. Gordon Stanton, professor of education, the three-year project is designed to improve the way the university system instructs new teachers. One of the major goals is to encourage the modification of the university teaching process to emphasize problem solving and critical thinking rather than didactic methods of instruction for law-related education. That process will serve as an instructional model for future teachers.

Dr. Stanton said most civic instruction today consists of the "read and repeat" variety, emphasizing rote learning of facts about governmental institutions.

"I think because teachers feel they have a limited amount of time in which to impart knowledge, they end up telling students what they need to know instead of letting them discover it for themselves," he said.

In the field of law-related education, text materials are case-study oriented in that they present problem situations, vignettes or excerpts from literature and court cases which will require students to investigate, examine value positions, analyze and list alternatives.

Dr. Stanton will oversee the implementation of project activities systemwide, beginning with nine campuses during the upcoming year, including Bakersfield, Chico, Fresno, Hayward, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Bernardino and San Jose. The project will be initiated on the remaining 10 campuses during the following year.

The target educators will be university faculty involved in the instruction of social sciences, which may include political science, history, criminal justice and pre-legal faculty, as well as those involved with educating teachers. This is an attempt to implement the chancellor's objective to have all university faculty recognize their potential impact on future teachers.

Dr. Stanton said the project is an outgrowth of a directive issued by the chancellor in 1983, which instructed faculty to look for areas in teacher education where there is a need for improvement. CEEP developed directly from faculty suggestions made at a CSU workshop on law-related education, which was coordinated by Dr. Stanton and held in Sacramento in March 1984.

September Holds Two Four-Day Work Weeks

Employees will be treated to two long holiday weekends in succession in September with the observance of Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 2 and the commemoration of California State Admission Day, Monday, Sept. 9.
Course Fee Waiver Program Is Accepting Applications

The fee waiver program, which substantially reduces the cost of classes here for all employees, is accepting applications until Sept. 12, said Carlos Marquez, administrator of the program. Employees are encouraged to apply as soon as possible to gain admittance to their desired classes, which begin on Sept. 26. First time students will need to apply for admission to the university as well.

Employees must have an approved individual development plan on file in order to attend regular university classes under the fee waiver program. Job-related courses need to be approved by the employee's supervisor. For further information contact Marquez at Ext. 7205.

The chart below specifies the negotiated arrangements made for the fee waiver program under each employee unit. For individuals taking up to six units, the university course fee normally would be $111 plus $29 for fees covering Associated Students, student union, facilities and instructionally-related activities, for a total of $140. Under the fee waiver program, depending on the negotiated amounts, the cost is reduced to $3, which provides $1 each to the Associated Students, student union and facilities fees. For six or more units, the university course fee normally would be $191 plus $33 in related charges, for a total of $224.

PAYDAY IS THURSDAY, AUGUST 29
Applications for admission to Cal State are up by about 430 compared to this time last year, six weeks before registration, according to Cheryl Weese, director of admission.

"The increase appears to be a statewide trend for the CSU system in terms of having a larger number of early applications," Weese commented, "however, we don't know whether this will continue and we will have the same number of last-minute applicants as we usually do or whether it will trail off."

According to a report issued last week, freshman applicants are up 25 percent, transfer students are up 6 percent and graduates are 12 percent compared to this time last year.

Some of the undergraduate fields of study that are showing significant increases so far are: business administration, communication, history, music, physical education, psychology and liberal studies. Increases in applications for enrollment in graduate degree programs are showing up in business administration, counselor education and such preprofessional programs as pre dentistry, prelaw, premedicine and preveterinary.

Frances Stromwall Retires
From Library Position

Frances Stromwall, head of circulation in the Pfaul Library, retired this month after 17½ years with the university. With the exception of half-time during one year, the entire time was spent in the Library.

Calling her job at the Library "the nicest thing that ever happened to me," Mrs. Stromwall spoke of the pleasure of working with students and fellow employees in all facets of the Library operations. She felt special pleasure at being assigned to the new music listening facility when the library was moved from its original location in the Student Services Building to its current six-story home. "No one knew exactly what would happen there," she said.

Mrs. Stromwall praised Library Director Arthur Nelson's policy of rotating employees through the various services. The experience of working in every area of the library at one time or another helped her greatly in being able to respond to people's needs and questions, she said.

"Every day was a challenge," she said in recalling experiences ranging from handing out coat hangers to students who locked their keys in the car to temporarily nestling a lost puppy in a book drop until its owners could be found.

Mrs. Stromwall will continue to make her home in San Bernardino. After enjoying the opportunity to relax, she plans to become involved in other things that are important in her life, including volunteer assistance with the San Bernardino City Historical Society.
