"It's the greatest affirmation of my professional life that I've ever received. I find it a great honor that my colleagues think highly enough of me to name me as the outstanding professor."

— Dr. Loralee MacPike

Dr. Loralee MacPike, professor of English, is the university's outstanding professor for 1991. Selected for recognition by a committee comprised of faculty, staff, alumni and student members, MacPike will represent our campus in the CSU competition to name two outstanding professors in the system.

"It's the greatest affirmation of my professional life that I've ever received," says MacPike. "I find it a great honor that my colleagues think highly enough of me to name me as the outstanding professor."

A member of the faculty since 1978, MacPike has served the university as both an educator and an administrator. Her academic areas of expertise include Victorian, children's and women's literature, as well as composition and women's studies. An accomplished writer, MacPike's articles have been published in encyclopedias, such as British Women Writers, American Women Writers and Encyclopedia of Victorian Britain. Her works also have appeared in several literary journals, including the International Journal of Women's Studies, Dickens Newsletter and NWSA Journal. Her latest book, "There's Something I've Been Meaning to Tell You: An Anthology of Lesbian and Gay Parents Coming Out to Their Children," was published in 1989.

As an administrator, MacPike served as associate dean for the School of Humanities from 1987 to mid-1990 and associate dean of graduate studies from 1983-1984. That same year, MacPike was awarded an Administrative Fellowship from the CSU system and in that capacity, worked on our campus in both the Academic Personnel and Academic Resources offices. MacPike notes that her year as an administrative fellow proved to be one of her most interesting experiences at Cal State.

Included among her many contributions to the university is service on both the University Evaluation Committee and School of Humanities Evaluation Committee. In fact, she feels her involvement with these groups is her most significant accomplishment at Cal State. "My involvement with evaluation has been one of the most important functions at this university," says MacPike. "My participation allows me to see how many outstanding faculty members we have. We have so many quality scholars here."

In sharing her views on the major challenges faced by today's educators, MacPike cites the issue of accessibility. "We need to make education more accessible for all students."

Presentation Explores Computer Compatibility

The Computing and Information Management Department is teaming up with Apple Computer, Inc. to sponsor a free campus presentation titled "IBM to Macintosh Connectivity" on Wednesday, Feb. 6 from 10 a.m.-noon in the Student Union Multipurpose Room (SUMP).

"This presentation is geared to those individuals who want to have both IBM and Macintosh systems in their office and who want to increase their productivity by learning to share these two resources," notes Catherine Carlson (Computer Center). Information covering how to share files between the two systems will be provided and the various types of printer options available will be explored.

"IBM to Macintosh Connectivity" is open to all campus employees and students.

Silver Celebrates Art Exhibit

Cal State's silver anniversary celebration continues with a multimedia art exhibit, "Number 25," opening Wednesday, Jan. 16, in the University Art Gallery, featuring varied works of present and former faculty members.

Twenty-five local and regional artists will share works in graphic design, clay, glass and ceramics. Conceptual computer pieces, photography and furniture sculptures also will be exhibited.

Current faculty exhibiting include Richard Johnston, chair of the Art Department, George McGinnis, Sant Subagh K. Khalsa, Bill Warehall, Sally Kovach, Leo Dolye, Shwu Ting-Lee, Roger Linuault, Ken Reed, Danny Redfern, Don Woodford, Joe Moran and Bruce Decker.

The list of former faculty artists includes John Nava, Curtis Ripley, Trevor Norris, Steve LaVoie, Steve King, Mandi Batalo, Louis Fox, Larry Thompson, Richard Silver, Karl Hager, Chad Lynde and Scott Ward. All live and work in Southern California. Jan Mrozinski, a Pennsylvania resident, also will contribute.

Scholar to Share Mathematics of Magic

The mathematics of magic will be explored on campus when renowned Harvard scholar and former professional magician, Dr. Persi Diaconis, presents "Magic and Mathematics" at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 14, in the Upper Commons.

Using imagery perfected during his days as a professional magician, Diaconis will share his academic genius as he demonstrates magic tricks based on mathematical principles in this free public lecture. "I will perform amazing magic tricks whose workings depend on interesting mathematics," says Diaconis. "I will demonstrate these tricks explaining how underlying mathematics applies to breaking into hotel rooms and robot vision."

"His presentation will show a side of mathematics that is interesting and fun," notes Dr. Susan Addington (Mathematics), who describes Diaconis as "a well-known math expositor who believes in bringing math to the public."

Famous in academic circles for his ongoing research in mathematics, statistics and magic, Diaconis also is highly respected for his practical applications of mathematical theory. For example, a 1982 MacArthur Foundation Fellowship resulted in Diaconis' discovery of a theorem proving the need to shuffle a deck of cards seven times before it is completely mixed. In fact, this research will be the subject of another campus presentation titled "The Magic of Mixing Things Up" scheduled for 3 p.m. Monday, Jan. 14, in Room 129 of the Biological Sciences Building.

"You might say I do magic as a hobby, but for me it's quite close to math," says Diaconis in a book titled "Mathematical People." "Inventing a magic trick and inventing a theorem are very, very similar activities," continues the scholar. "In both subjects you have a principle you are trying to solve with constraints. In mathematics, it's the limitations of a reasoned argument with the tools you have available, and with magic it's to use your tools and sleight of hand to bring about a certain effect without the audience knowing what you're doing. The intellectual process of solving problems in the two areas is almost the same."

"Magic and Mathematics" is being sponsored by the Intellectual Life & Visiting Scholars Committee, the Mathematics Department and the Center for Applied Science. Additional information on both lectures is available from the Mathematics Department at Ext. 5361 or from Addington at Ext. 5362.

On a Personnel Note

Jury Duty Update...

University employees are responsible for promptly notifying their supervisors upon receipt of a jury duty summons and subsequent notice of selection to serve as a juror, reports Twillea Carthen (Personnel). Employees who serve on jury duty will receive their regular salary, provided that the money received for their service is remitted to CSUSB through the Bursar's Office for deposit in a state fund. Payments for travel and subsistence do not need to be remitted. If employees elect to retain jury duty fees, the time off from work for jury duty is not compensable. Vacation or CTO, if appropriate, may be used to cover the time off.

Employees who plan to claim salary for time served on jury duty must return to work when excused from jury duty early on a given day provided a reasonable amount of the work day remains, considering travel time to campus and the need to change clothing, etc. However, employees who are excused for the entire day or are given a mid-work-day reporting time, also need to report for work.

If you are in doubt about returning to work or when to return to your job, you should discuss the above guidelines with your supervisor. Don't forget to obtain the "Jury Duties Certification" form from the agency you serve under. This form specifies the time spent on jury duty for any given day. If you have questions regarding your responsibilities concerning jury duty, please contact the Personnel Office at Ext. 5138.

A Few Good Men & Women

Serrano Village is now in the process of selecting resident assistant (RA) candidates for 1991-92 and welcomes input from the campus community, reports Norm Slosted (Housing). "By soliciting the help of the CSUSB staff and faculty, the residential life staff hopes to gain an assorted applicant pool, necessary in selecting an RA staff that will effectively address the diverse needs of our residents," says Slosted, who joined the university last summer as the new residential life coordinator.

RA's are employed by the university during the academic year on a flexible 20-hour-per-week work schedule. Responsibilities include staff meetings, weekly duty hours, social & educational programming, peer counseling and resident conduct management. In return for their services, an RA receives free room and board and extensive leadership experience.

"The dedicated, well-trained resident assistant can be an effective 'change agent' on the university campus through their interaction and input in the residence halls," notes Slosted. "In the process, their own growth and development is enhanced."

For students interested in becoming a Cal State RA, a series of informational meetings are underway. Applicants need to attend one of the following sessions:
