University Celebrates 25th Commencement

Lois Carson, executive director of the County of Riverside's Department of Community Action, will serve as the keynote speaker for the university's 25th Commencement ceremony on Saturday, June 15, at 5:30 p.m. Her speech, titled "The Institution and the Individual: Enter to Learn - Depart to Serve," will focus on encouraging graduates to become involved in community service. Carson is a member of Cal State's first graduating class.

While nearly 4,000 students are eligible to walk in the outdoor ceremony, held on the lawn area between the east side of the library and gymnasium, it's anticipated that approximately 1,400 graduates will participate. This group of students represents the largest graduating class in the university's history. And for the first time, graduates of the Coachella Valley Center will celebrate with a separate ceremony at 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 16, at the McCallum Theatre in Palm Desert.

Since her graduation from Cal State, Carson has become well known in educational and community service circles. Prior to her present position, she was

Dr. Luis Gomez, acting president of Crafton Hills College, is the recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Award bestowed annually by the university's Alumni Association. Gomez will be recognized during this year's Commencement ceremony.

He was selected on the basis of career prominence, professional growth and service to Cal State and the community by a select committee representing university alumni and faculty members.

Gomez holds two degrees from Cal State. After earning his B.A. in Spanish, four years later he received an M.A. in education/school counseling. He has served as a member of Cal State's Advisory Board since 1987.

When attending Colton High School, Gomez participated in a senior career day program that helped crystallize his interest in a career in education. For one day the native Southern Californian taught math at his former school, Colton Junior High.

"It was a very good experience," says Gomez, who years later taught math in the Upward Bound Program at Cal State during the mid-'70s.

University Names Outstanding Undergraduate

Senior Debra Kay Ledford is the recipient of this year’s Outstanding Undergraduate Award.

Senior Debra Kay Ledford has earned distinction as the winner of this year’s Outstanding Undergraduate Award.

While pursuing a B.A. degree in psychology, Ledford was a full-time student, held three part-time jobs and shared in the responsibilities of raising a four-year-old son with her husband, Samuel, who also will receive an undergraduate degree during this year’s Commencement exercise. Ledford’s overall G.P.A. is 3.74.

Aiming for a career as a clinical child psychologist specializing in the specific needs of minority children, Ledford plans to apply for graduate school at UCLA, USC and UC, Berkeley. However, she will take a break from her academic pursuits when her son, Sam, enters kindergarten this fall.

Active in a number of campus organizations,

Ledford chaired the Children’s Center Advisory Committee, was a member of the Black Student Union and joined a newly formed group, Psychology Students Concerned with Ethnic Issues. She is also a member of Psi Chi, a national psychology honor society.

As a participant of Cal State’s Psychology Honors Program during her senior year, Ledford was involved in a research project exploring how adult children of divorce feel about their past and present relationships with their fathers. This study also examines self-esteem and interpersonal relationship issues. Ledford also gained research experience last summer as a participant of the Minority Summer Research Internship Program at UC, Riverside, where she explored the concept of infant separation anxiety.

Reflecting on being named Cal State’s outstanding undergraduate, Ledford says, ‘I’m very excited. I really didn’t expect to win. At first I thought, I haven’t done anything extraordinary.’” Ledford says she’s pleased with the quality of education she has received at Cal State. "The Psychology Department is excellent. The classes are small, there’s a lot of interaction with the faculty and they’re constantly available to help."

deputy director of San Bernardino County’s Community Services Department. As an educator, Carson directed the Writing Laboratory at UCR for two years and headed UCR’s Upward Bound Project for four years. Additionally, Carson spent several years as an English and history teacher for the San Bernardino County Schools. She holds a master of arts degree in English from UCR and earned her undergraduate degree in the same field from Cal State.

Active in numerous professional and community organizations, Carson is vice president of the National Council of Negro Women and is a member of the San Bernardino Community College District Board of Trustees. She is a founding member of the San Bernardino County Commission on the Status of Women and has been actively involved in the San Bernardino Community College District’s affirmative action program.

A recipient of numerous honors and awards, Carson was named "Woman of the Year" in 1973 by the National Council of Negro Women, received the "Woman of Achievement" distinction in 1976 from the San Bernardino League of Women Voters, was recognized as Cal State’s "Distinguished Alumna" in 1980 and was honored with the 1989 "Trail Blazer" award from the San Bernardino Chapter of the NAACP.

Several dignitaries will join Carson on June 15 as members of the Commencement platform party. These individuals include: Dr. Ellis McCune, acting chancellor of the California State University; Assemblyman Paul Woodruff, 61st Assembly District; and Dr. Luis S. Gomez, acting president of Crafton Hills Community College.

Commencement participants and guests are encouraged to carpool and to arrive early in order to secure a parking space. Guest seating is provided on a first-come, first-served basis. More information on Cal State’s 25th Commencement ceremony is available from Mary Colacurcio, (Alumni Affairs) at Ext. 5008.

Awareness of Disabilities...
Again this year the Personnel and Services to Students With Disabilities offices teamed up in presenting a one-day disability awareness program to staff on "Overcoming Barriers in the Workplace." Employees were informed about the Americans with Disabilities Act, introduced to a "comfort zone" concept concerning skills to enhance positive communications with disabled individuals and encouraged to seek similarities rather than differences when interacting with the disabled.

Participants also were provided information on the CSU systemwide Assistive Device and Equipment Program. Although limited resources have been allocated from the Chancellor's Office, the Personnel Office has some funding available for equipment or device accommodations to assist disabled employees with their jobs. To be considered for the program, permanent employees must submit a proposal to the Personnel Office.

Proposal request forms are available from the Personnel Office. Completed forms must be submitted no later than Tuesday, October 8. Requests then are forwarded to the Chancellor's Office for committee review and final approval. For more information, please telephone Twillea Carthen (Personnel) at Ext. 5138.

Position Classification Submission Dates...
Employees who wish to have their position classification reviewed may submit requests during the months of July and January of each fiscal year. Call the Personnel Office at Ext. 5138 for more details.

Faculty Members to Retire

Professors G. Keith Dolan (Advanced Studies) and Richard Saylor (Music) will officially retire this fall each after more than 20 years of teaching at the university.

Dolan, who came to Cal State in 1967 and was the first coordinator for both the university's secondary teacher training and school administration programs, plans to do consulting in school administration after retiring. He also will go to London for a year and plans to write a couple of books—a textbook on school and community relations and a trivia book on sports oddities of the world. In 1984, his trivia book, "Athletes and Athletics: Sports Almanac—USA" was published.

Dolan left his position as principal at San Bernardino High School to join the Cal State faculty. "I really enjoyed being a high school principal," he says. "But after some time here, I began to enjoy it as much. ...I'm going to keep in touch with the university. Because I'm retiring doesn't mean I'm going to break all ties."

A member of the faculty since 1968, Saylor founded the university's Chamber Orchestra. "The Chamber Orchestra has given our best students the opportunity to play good orchestral literature," says Saylor. He has seen many of these students go on to become major contributors to the musical life of the Inland Empire.

Saylor has been invited to conduct high school and pre-college music students in Haiti and will have an opportunity to conduct in Japan as well. And, he adds, "I want to get back to writing music."

Summer Concerts Return

Folk, gospel, country, pop and jazz artists will visit the campus this summer when the Office of Student Life brings the popular Sumner Entertainment Series back to Cal State. The Celtic folk music group, Shanachie, will open the seventh annual series on Wednesday, July 10, at 7 p.m. in the Lower Commons Plaza.

A big hit with both children and parents during the Summer Entertainment Series two years ago, Shanachie has performed throughout the United States at such popular events as the Highland Games and the Gilroy Garlic Festival, as well as at international music festivals in Turkey, Germany, Canada and Ireland. The eight-year-old group has released two albums, and its music has received air play in 42 countries.

"Shanachie" is an Irish word meaning "storyteller." The group took its name because much of its music shares stories of people and their homelands. Shanachie also has used its music in special educational shows to teach students both American history and music theory.

Also on tap for the summer series is the Cal Poly, Pomona Youth Gospel Choir, a 45-member group of singers and musicians who will perform on July 17. On July 24, champion fiddler Laurie Lewis and her Grant Street band will bring bluegrass and country music to the stage. Lewis won the "Best Country Album" award last year from the National Association of Independent Record Distributors for her solo album "Love Chooses You."

Popular Demand, a five-member family group, will serve up hits from the '50s, '60s and '70s on July 31. "Batter Up"

Join the fun as sign-ups for the summer faculty/staff softball (better known as "Bottom of the Barrel") league continue. This top-of-the-line, low-skill, league is designed for summer fun. Games will be played each Wednesday evening from 5:30-7 p.m., preceding the Summer Entertainment Series of concerts.

All "jocks and jockettes," "I-really-don't-play-very-well-but-want-to-try types," "never ones" and "wannabees" are invited to join. Active players from the spring league automatically will be assigned to a new summer team. Inactive players need to register. More information is available from Mike Endeman (IBS Control) at Ext. 5156 or Ted Krug (Financial Aid) at Ext. 5221.

New Leadership for Faculty Senate

Dr. Joe Bas (Spanish) is the new chair of the Faculty Senate for 1991-92. He succeeds Dr. John Craig (Chemistry) who led the academic body for the past four years, a record tenure for this unpu. Bas has been chair three times, serving two consecutive terms in the early 1980s.

Other members of the Senate's executive committee include Dr. Jeanne Diaz (Elementary/Linguistic Education), vice chair; John Craig, secretary; and Dr. C.E. Tapie Rohm, Jr. (Information and Decision Sciences) and Dr. Carl Wagoner (Criminal Justice), who will serve as the two at-large members.
Auto Theft Victims Share Experiences

When it comes to car ownership, 1990 was not what Karen MacIntyre (Academic Affairs) would call a banner year. A year ago the administrative secretary walked out to the administration parking lot, where she had parked, and found instead someone else's car. It was the next morning that police authorities phoned and said that, in fact, her car was found in Loma Linda, abandoned and stripped bare. And only a few months later, after deciding that a low-profile, no-frills, 1990 Mitsubishi Mirage might be a wise replacement choice, MacIntyre discovered that the car's rear window had been broken.

"It's a very weird feeling," says MacIntyre, who was one of 22 auto theft victims at the university last year. As of the end of this past April, 11 vehicles had been reported stolen and that number is expected to reach 30 by year's end, say campus police.

"You never really know whether your car is going to be out there and what kind of shape it's going to be in," adds MacIntyre. She suspects that the broken window was the result of vandalism, though the campus police report attributes the damage to winds ranging from 45-60 miles per hour. That day, police found broken windows on six other vehicles.

Many of the auto thefts are "crimes of opportunity," says Quentin Moses (Public Safety). The thieves, he explains, "have no specific intent to steal a car. But the windows are down and the car is unlocked so they just walk by and steal it."

For a number of reasons, says Moses, these car thieves are hard to spot. For example, sometimes the thieves look like students, coming complete with preppie clothing and backpack. Another reason is that some cars are stolen by high school students, and it is difficult to distinguish between legitimate high school visitors and high school truants who might be more likely to turn car thief.

While the number of car thefts inevitably will rise as the university grows, the campus remains a comparatively safe place to park, say campus police officials. In 1989, 42 vehicles were stolen at UC, Riverside, and stolen vehicle totals at Cal Poly, Pomona for 1989 and 1990 came to 75 and 107, respectively.

Two of the best ways to discourage car thieves, say experts, are to use steering wheel clubs and to have a system connected to the car's computer brain that can disable the vehicle and make it impossible to start. Car alarms also are good, but authorities warn that they are easily disconnected.

Car theft "can happen to anybody," says Officer Randy Keller (Public Safety), and it can happen anywhere. Keller's 1990 Nissan truck was stolen recently from out in front of the Physical Plant with two police vehicles parked only two stalls away.

"Before I buy another car," says Doyle Stansel (Housing), reflecting on his reaction to the theft of his Honda Prelude three months ago, "I'm going to check with local law enforcement to see if the car I'm thinking of buying is one that is frequently stolen or vandalized. It is a sad commentary that our purchases can be influenced by how attractive they are to criminals."

Training and Development...
The 1990/91 schedule for staff training and development ended on May 31, 1991 with a final workshop on assertiveness. This past year has been quite successful as evidenced by a large number of employees participating in both on-campus and off-campus training activities. The computer training series coordinated by Catherine Carlson (Computer Center) has been extensive with a broad range of sessions conducted throughout the year. Over 450 participants have attended presentations on topics such as WordPerfect, DOS, Quattro Pro and others.

Plans are being developed to introduce the 1991/92 schedule, which will be released in the fall. The Personnel Office wishes to express its gratitude to all of the trainers who so generously give of their time to provide a learning experience for our staff employees.

Employee Recognition...
The 30-day nomination period for the first annual staff employee recognition program closed on May 15th with great success. Thirty-eight employees have been nominated. The Staff Training and Development Committee has initiated the review process, which will conclude with the final selection of two employees as outstanding and two employees to be recognized for excellence in performance for the 1990/91 year. These four employees will be honored at the university's convocation to be held in September.

The Personnel Office extends appreciation to everyone in the campus community who took the time to nominate a fellow employee.

Wellness Materials Available...
Learn more about cholesterol, nutrition, back care or mammography through free informational materials from the Personnel Office. Literature also is available on weight control, AIDS, high blood pressure and stress. Stop by Room 151 of the Student Services Building for these materials.

Outstanding Graduate Student Selected

Twenty-four-year-old Joseph V. Fengler of San Bernardino is the recipient of this year's Outstanding Graduate Student Award bestowed annually by university officials. Students are selected on the basis of academic excellence and service to the campus.

Fengler holds a bachelor of arts degree in political science from the University of La Verne and will receive a master's degree in national security studies with an overall G.P.A. of 3.68.

While pursuing his graduate degree, Fengler participated in two competitive internship programs. Last summer, he was employed as an evaluator with the U.S. General Accounting Office in Washington, D.C., where he conducted research regarding the global ban on chemical weapons. This spring, his internship with TRW's Ballistic Missile Division provided him with the opportunity to work with staff at Norton Air Force Base, exploring the proposed conversion of the U.S. land-based ballistic missile force from multiple to single warhead systems.

Active in a number of campus leadership positions, Fengler served as the 1989-90 graduate representative for ASI's Board of Directors. As the first student to hold this position, Fengler worked with student government leaders and campus administrators to substantially increase funding for graduate research projects and professional development activities for graduate students. As ASI's 1990-91 administrative director, Fengler was active in a number of projects, including the development of quarterly student government reports, and served on ASI's Environmental Committee, which initiated plans for a university-wide recycling program. In addition, Fengler chaired ASI's Bylaw Committee, served as a student representative on the 1991 Student Union Board of Directors and chaired the university's Instructionally Related Programs Committee.

Since he was 18 years old, Fengler has been an active member of the Inland Empire chapter of Toastmasters International. For two years he coordinated the "Toastmasters University" during spring and fall for 400 members who received instruction on public speaking techniques. And, he was editor of the organization's bimonthly newsletter, "Images."

Grant to Help Secure Mega Microscope

A $62,645 grant awarded by the National Science Foundation will go toward the purchase of a scanning electron microscope (SEM), marking the first step in establishing a comprehensive electron microscope (EM) facility on campus. "This facility will provide state-of-the-art technology for teaching, research and contract work for students, faculty and selected community interests," says department chair, Dr. Klaus Brasch (Biology). The project is a joint effort between the Biology and Geological Sciences departments. Only one-fourth of all proposals submitted to the NSF's Instrumentation and Laboratory Improvement Program gained funding this year.

The SEM, an instrument about the width of an office desk and three- to four-feet high, will magnify images more than 100,000 times their size. Quality conventional microscopes, says Brasch, only magnify images about 1,000 times. "A conventional light microscope shows bacteria or pollen grains as mere dots. But an electron microscope will show you all the detailed surface structures of these objects," he explains.

Besides biology and geology, the electron microscope facility can be applied in such fields as forensics, graphic arts and health science, and it can be used to test air samples of asbestos fibers or to check the quality of computer chips, for example.

The university will provide another $62,000 to match the NSF grant and will work to raise more monies for the EM facility. Project coordinators hope to have the scanning microscope up and running by this winter.

University Slogan Suggestions Sought

If you could utter 10 words or less, what would you say to typify Cal State, San Bernardino? The gist of your phrase could turn into a slogan for the university if you forward your suggestions to Cynthia Pringle (Public Affairs) by 5 p.m., Friday, June 21.

"Our work in University Relations and Student Services to sharpen the university's image has increased dramatically over the last few years and, periodically, the professional staffs in both divisions have discussed the need for a slogan or statement to bring focus to our efforts," Pringle says.

Of the student services professionals who've been consulted, "There's not one person who didn't like the idea of having some wording that would enhance our image," remarks Cheryl Smith (Enrollment Services). Most agree that "keeping it simple" would make the slogan viable for a variety of uses.

Although the motivation for the development of a slogan grew out of a review of student outreach and recruitment publications, Pringle says the application could extend to "bookstore merchandise, possibly, and a whole host of university-related materials.

Ideally, the slogan would become synonymous with Cal State, San Bernardino."

So, "think Cal State" and jot down some phrases that could help people unfamiliar with the campus begin to form a positive impression of the university, urge Pringle and Smith. You'll be updated on the results in summer and fall issues of the Bulletin. The Chronicle and KSSB Radio also will be kept informed of progress on slogan development.

Gomez earned his doctorate in community college administration/education law from the University of Southern California in 1987. Before assuming his current position, he was dean of students for three years at Crafton. He also has been a high school and community college counselor and instructor.

College system continues to be one of Gomez's key concerns since becoming acting president at Crafton Hills last fall. While serving as coordinator of counseling at San Bernardino Valley College, he initiated the Minority Advancement Program that targeted junior high school students at risk -- students who tend to drop out of high school but, who, with the right help, might be encouraged to stay in school and go on to college.
Campus Communication Spurred by Electronic Marquee

Keeping a bustling, growing university community informed about events and activities taking place grew one step easier when the new electronic marquee lit up officially May 8, notes Cynthia Pringle (Public Affairs).

"The commuter-oriented lifestyle of our campus population makes it a challenge for those of us in the 'news and information business' to keep employees, students and visitors informed about all the developments here," Pringle says. The marquee creates another avenue for reaching out to the campus' many publics, some of whom may not come in contact with the student newspaper, the university magazine or a variety of targeted newsletters at Cal State, she adds.

As a medium, the marquee has its limitations, Pringle points out. "The amount of information that can be generated and absorbed is finite," she says, adding that the sign's capacity is 10 characters per line using the smallest-sized letters. Therefore, persons submitting requests for marquee messages mustn't be surprised to find their wording rewritten.

The marquee is being programmed to run from 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday-Thursday and 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Friday, unless an evening event warrants running the sign until 10 p.m. Weekend programming is determined by the events scheduled on campus and the potential "audiences." In some instances, the sign "goes dark" on the weekends, Pringle states. "Generally speaking, the marquee is programmed twice weekly on Mondays and Thursdays. That's why it's important for requests to be turned into Public Affairs in a timely manner."

More information on the marquee is available from Pringle at Ext. 5007.
