TRUSTEE GOLDBEIN VISITS CAMPUS THIS MONTH

Faculty Trustee Goldstein will be on campus April 22-23. As the CSUS Board of Trustees, Goldstein has a special interest in academic issues and faculty policies.

Interaction with faculty members and the exchange of ideas concerning academic programs in the sciences will be the focus of an upcoming visit by faculty trustee, Dr. Bernard Goldstein, who makes his first San Bernardino visit, as a member of the CSU Board of Trustees, on April 22 and 23.

"It's always an honor for us when a trustee visits the campus," says Dr. Judith Rymer, vice president for university relations.

"Dr. Goldstein's visit is one I especially look forward to because he and I became acquainted 12 years ago as senate chairs on our respective campuses. The university community will find Trustee Goldstein to be very well informed and eager to learn more about our campus. I encourage students and faculty to participate in those sessions designated for them."

Students will have the chance to meet Trustee Goldstein, a professor of biology at San Francisco State University, at an open forum scheduled for 3:45 p.m., Wednesday, April 22, in the Oak Room of the Lower Commons. That evening, all faculty members are invited to welcome Trustee Goldstein and his wife, Estelle, at a special reception beginning at 4:30 p.m. in the Panorama Room. On Thursday, April 23, an open forum with faculty leaders is scheduled for 10:45 a.m. in the President's Conference Room, AD-102.

Trustee Goldstein joined the faculty at San Francisco State in 1968, chaired the Department of Physiology and Behavioral Biology from 1972-1975 and served as acting director of Research and Professional Development between 1989 and 1991. Active in numerous campus and statewide academic committees, Goldstein chaired the CSU's Statewide Academic Senate from 1984-1987 and served as chair of the Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Student Outcomes Assessment in 1988. In addition to San Francisco State, Trustee Goldstein's teaching experience includes faculty positions at the University of California, Davis and at Western Washington State College.

Named Alumnus of the Year in 1996, Goldstein received both his B.A. and M.A. degrees in biology from San Francisco State and earned his Ph.D. in zoology from U.C., Davis. He maintains professional affiliations with the American Association for the Advancement of Science, SIGMA XI, The Scientific Research Society, American Society of Zoologists, The Society for the Scientific Study of Sex; and American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists. Trustee Goldstein is an honorary member of the California State Student Association and maintains membership with Phi Kappa Phi Scholastic Honor Society.

Campus Compact: A Marriage Between Community Service and Research

by Sam Romero,
Public Affairs Assistant

Only a few years ago, Dr. David Bellis (Public Administration) was visiting truck stops and researching the drug habits of heroin-addicted prostitutes. His findings directly led to the establishment of a free methadone program in San Bernardino.

Bellis had achieved his ultimate goal: to help prevent the spread of the HIV virus through the use of contaminated needles.

And, over the past year, students and community volunteers have been trained at San Bernardino High School to teach others how to read. The Student Literacy Corps program is the brainchild of Dr. Sherry Howie (Secondary/Vocational Education), and it's making a difference in San Bernardino.

Bellis' and Howie's work are just two examples of how CSUSB faculty have applied their research and combined it with community service to directly affect issues around the Inland Empire. The question is, how do you encourage more to do that kind of research?

Enter the Campus Compact. The national organization held a conference last August at Stanford University. Comprised of 15 campuses around the country, Campus Compact is looking to make community service a natural part of a university's curriculum.

From that conference emerged plenty of ideas, plenty of questions and exactly four, quite motivated Cal State, San Bernardino administrators and faculty: Dean Lewis Jones (Undergraduate Studies), Dr. Bob Yowell (Theatre Arts), Dr. Dolores Tanno (Communication Studies) and Randy Harrell (Student Affairs). They are part of the original five-member team that attended the conference. The fifth resigned due to time constraints.

"We have this huge brain trust here at Cal State and nearly 13,000 high-energy students," says Harrell. "Why not take these professional and academic students who are learning taxation law, for example, "put them in the community to assist in the personal, economic development of the citizens of our region, give the students practical application of their classroom learning, and give faculty the chance to apply their disciplines in just a wonderfully pragmatic way?"

Community work like this was typical back in colonial days. The colonial college mission then, Harrell adds, was to train young men as clergy or professionals, and then to send them back into their towns.

"What Campus Compact does is much the same."

But the central problem, says Jones, is that community service has never been adequately recognized when it comes to faculty promotion and tenure considerations.

"PERFECT PARTY" ON THE WAY

A comparative literature professor's attempt at learning party-planning becomes a smashing flop in the comedy, "The Perfect Party," opening April 17 at the University Theatre.

"Moderation," says Dr. Ruti Barnes (Theatre Arts), the play's director, is what the production is about. "Perfection is hard to achieve," he adds. "We can make fools out of ourselves when we take things to extremes."

While Gumey argues seriously for "feminine-ism"—men taking on the more forgiving qualities of women, he also "capers average people in situations where we can laugh, so that the humor is friendly, rather than satirical," says Barnes.

Evening performances of "The Perfect Party" are at 8:15 p.m. on April 17, 18 and 22-25. Sunday matinees are at 2 p.m. on April 19 and 26. General admission is $8, senior citizens $4, and CSUSB students with ID are $3. For tickets and information, call the Theatre Arts Department at Ext. 8576.

ENVIRONMENTAL EXPO OFFERS SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

"Making a Difference for Earth's Future" is the theme of the Sixth Annual Environmental Expo being held Saturday, April 25, beginning at 9 a.m. in the large gymnasium.

Morning performances by American Indians, including an American Indian dance troupe, and a 3 p.m. show featuring environmental folk singer and recording artist Stephen Longfellow Fiske are among the special highlights of this year's show.

Also, Congressman George B. Brown, Jr. will present awards to elementary and junior high school Nature Bowl winners, and to the winners of a high school "Keep It Hot" contest.

"I really like the environmental contests for students because they say that environmental knowledge is important and that we're going to reward that," says Dr. Darlene Benner (Advanced Studies), director of the campus' Environmental Education Center.

Several hands-on activities, including a recycling race and a paper-making project, will give parents and teachers a chance to participate with children. And, the Drip Dales, an environmental marketing group devoted to making environmental education fun, will be on hand. Several environmental agencies and organizations from throughout the Inland Empire are scheduled to set up exhibits.

The annual event also will include an environmental film festival in Room 129 of the Cal State gymnasium. Dr. Seuss' animated film, "The Lorax," is one of 10 films on tap. And, teacher workshops also will be offered. All Environmental Expo activities are free and open to the public.

Environmental Expo sponsors include: the California Education Facilities Bond issue, $46,000,000; the Inland Empire Regional Council, $5,000,000; the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District, $100,000; the California Endowment Center, $5,000,000; the Californian Inc., $5,000,000; and the City of San Bernardino, $550,000.

The event will be preceded the evening of April 23 with a screening of "The Lorax," free to the public. For information, call the Office of University Relations, Ext. 5004.

HISPANIC FACULTY & STAFF ASSOCIATION PLANS ANNUAL SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS BANQUET

Academic excellence will be recognized when the Association of Hispanic Faculty and Staff presents its annual $3,000 scholarship awards banquet and dinner on Tuesday, April 21.

All members of the campus community are invited to attend the event, which begins with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. in the second floor patio area of University Hall. Dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. in the Upper Commons, followed by the awards program at 8:15 p.m.

"Our organization works year-round to promote higher education for Hispanic youth and other low income students from throughout the university's service area," says Dr. Marilu Meydroni (Accounting), secretary of the 45-member association formed on campus in 1985. "Anyone in the community interested in supporting the educational goals of the organization is encouraged to attend. We invite other community organizations to become involved."

Nearby 75 students apply each year for the organization's annual scholarship awards. This year, scholarships will be presented to two incoming freshmen and four current students enrolled at Cal State.

Applications must maintain a 2.5 grade point average and display an interest in Hispanic heritage, culture and community, notes Meydroni.

Dr. Barbara Flores, (Elementary/Bilingual Education) will deliver the keynote banquet address titled "Transforming the Sociobehavioral Presence of the Language Deficit View of Spanish Speaking Children: From Voices of Critique to Voices of Promise, "

Admission to the banquet is $25 per person for dinner and dance. Admission to the dance alone is $10 per person. Reservations are requested by Wednesday, April 15. For tickets and information, contact Mary Moya (Library) Ext. 5099.

Most faculty, says Yowell, would agree that community service is good. But when push comes to shove, Yowell is quick to add, professors know that they have to do research or risk losing their jobs.

"The image we're battling," says Tanno, "is that of the ivory tower—situation—that we either do research or we do community service." Tanno believes that faculty need a good reason to move away from the narrow goal of publishing research in academic journals for one another, and instead, take their research back into the community. Not everyone agrees. Community-based research aid in gathering data and suggesting solutions to social concerns, adds Tanno, but it would help with "contextual validation."

The language also is an obstacle, she explains, "is that people are knowledgeable about their situations, and that we can be partners in the creation of knowledge and understanding."

The challenge for Campus Compact universities, says Jones, is to convince colleagues that applied research should play a major role in a university's promotion and tenure reward structure. But convincing them will take some time, as it takes a great deal of confidence to predict the outcome of research. Jones says, "it's a little bit easier than walking 25 kangaroo, but not much."
The Coyotes golf team—in its first season in NCAA Division II competition—finished in second place at the first of qualifying tournaments to determine the district's representatives to the national championships in South Carolina. CSUSB hosted the two-day event on March 30-31 at El Rancho Verde and Arrowhead Country Clubs.

The team was led by senior Brad Sondecker and sophomore Rich Zapata, who tied each other for fourth place in the 36-hole tournament with composite scores of 219 each. Sondecker led the tourney after the first two rounds.

"I was really pleased with our consistent play. Over the long haul, the consistency is what will win for you, anyway. Every other team had at least one person shoot in the 80's during one of the three rounds. None of our players had higher than a 78 in any given round. That says something about the effort of the team," Smith was not at all surprised, either, by the scores of Sondecker and Zapata. Although contrasting in demeanor—Sondecker is a quiet veteran player for CSUSB, while the newcomer Zapata (a transfer from San Bernardino Valley College) is more flamboyant in nature—both have anchored the Coyotes in the early going this season.

"Both of these young men have done an outstanding job," says Smith. "Brad really got the team going through the first 36 holes by going 2-under par. Rich's ability to fire three identical rounds of 73 is consistent play. Over the long haul, the consistency is what will win for you, anyway. Every other team had at least one person shoot in the 80's during one of the three rounds. None of our players had higher than a 78 in any given round. That says something about the effort of the team." Sondecker recognizes the type of competition we're facing. I think they will rise to the occasion and be even more competitive.

CSUSB BASEBALL SECOND IN OWN TOURNAMENT, DESPITE RAINS

The CSUSB baseball team placed second to NCAA Division II power U.C., Riverside in its own " Coyote Spring Baseball Classic," held March 28-30. UCR, ranked third in the nation in Division II, won the rain-plagued event with a 5-4 record, while the Coyotes were 2-2. College of the Southwest (NM) was 1-2 and the University of Denver finished 0-4.

San Bernardino had three players selected to the All-Tournament team. The trio included junior second baseman Ed Zamors (Barstow H.S.), along with seniors Tom Irwin (pitcher, Victor Valley H.S.) and Steve Thomas (shortstop, El Segundo H.S.).

The tournament, originally scheduled to be played entirely at Fiscalini Field in San Bernardino, turned "a nightmare" when the rains hit town. The first two days were shifted to College of the Desert (in Palm Desert, CA), before one and one-half days of games were able to be played at Fiscalini. A third site—the Riverside Sports Center—was utilized when another storm rendered Fiscalini unplayable late in the week, forcing the cancellation of several tournament games.

GOLF TEAM MAKES STRONG SHOWING AT INITIAL DIVISION II QUALIFIER

"This is an opportunity not just for seniors and graduates, but for all students, alumni, and the general public." He adds that the fair has a "dual purpose in that it provides invaluable information about the job market while providing participants the chance to meet with potential employers."

An information booklet and a fair map will provide a brief overview of each business represented, including descriptions of positions and qualifications. Esposito recommends fair attendees to dress in professional attire and bring several copies of their resumes, since many representatives will be actual recruiters for their businesses and organizations.

The annual fair is expected to attract approximately 600 individuals. The university tram will be available throughout the day to transport participants across campus to the gymnasium. For more information regarding the fair, call the Career Development Center at Ext. 5250.
